Henry M. Robinson has just returned from a successful business trip in Maine. His firm is handling a splendid grade of hardy ferns at present and reports cut flower trade as picking up nicely.

W. W. Rawson & Co. are making a specialty of the newer varieties of narcissi this season, listing many kinds not previously catalogued.

A. H. Hews & Co. report a heavy fall trade in flower pots, they having difficulty in filling orders fast enough.

John Barr, of South Natick, is bringing in some extra good carnations for the season. He also has a fine lot of cyclamens.

E. Sutermeister is busy getting his large stock of Dutch bulbs in flats. He says that with the exception of some of the hyacinths, which are rather poorly ripened, the quality is very good.

Welch Bros.' emporium, on Devonshire street, is taking on additional ac-

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., O. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 38d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE Oak Hill Nurseries, Boston, have been incorporated with $50,000 authorized capital stock, by M. T. Twomey, of Roslindale.

ORLANDO HARRISON, of Berlin, presided over the meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society, at Jamestown, Va., last week.

H. A. CURTIS, of the West Coast Nurseries, St. Petersburg, Fla., has reached home from a summer spent with relatives in Iowa, by means of which his health was greatly improved.

THE property of the Central Michigan Nursery has been sold to J. L. Sornberger, Geo. Hamilton and Geo. W. Sprague, for $12,000. Liabilities are estimated at $100,000.

THEODORE J. SMITH, of the W. & T. Smith Co., Geneva, N. Y., is president of the newly organized New England Nurseries, Bedford, Mass. A. E. Robinson is treasurer and manager.

THE Eagle Nurseries Co., Camden, N. J., has been incorporated, with an authorized capital of $100,000. The incorporators are Louis M. Stiles, Robert Peacock and Charles Bridge.

At the thirty-first biennial meeting of the American Pomological Society, at Jamestown, last week, officers were re-elected: President, L. A. Goodman; secretary, John Craig, Ithaca, N. Y.

NATHAN W. HALE, congressman from Knoxville, Tenn., found it impossible to attend the Congress of Horticulture at Jamestown last week, and his paper on "Ornamental Woody Plants" was missed from the program.

KERRIA JAPONICA FL. PL.

Among the shrubs planted to beautify our parks and gardens in May and June, with their wealth of flowers, Kerria Japonica flore pleno really deserves special attention on the part of our landscape men and lovers of beautiful flowering shrubs. I have often wondered that among many other shrubs the single flowering fern, Kerria Japonica, is handled by our landscape gardeners far more than it really merits. Why? Its flowers are not only single; they are small as well and do not last long. That is reason enough to look for something better. Kerria Japonica fl. pl. indeed deserves to be handled more than is the case at present. This form is a good and hardy grower and is, in May and June, simply covered with its large double yellow flowers, which last for a considerable time and give much pleasure to all passers-by. Kerria Japonica fl. pl. stands severe winters well and distinguishes itself through a fine habit and can, moreover, be easily propagated by cuttings.

I certainly think it might be to the advantage of our landscape gardeners, on the whole, if they would give a little more attention to our better varieties of trees and shrubs and give them a better chance of coming under the notice of our public at large.

There is, to my knowledge, at least one place in the United States where all sorts of good trees and shrubs get a fair chance to show what they are worth, namely, the Arnold Arboretum, near Boston, Mass. Gardeners in all parts of the world have felt, and may feel yet, the beneficial influence of that famous institution.

I should like to mention the name of one man, V. Lemoine, of Nancy, France, still hale and hearty, who is certainly holding the world's record in the way of improving plants. Besides many other fine things, we owe to him a great number of the most lovely flowering shrubs, well fitted to ornament our gardens and to make them still more beautiful. A detailed description of his life's work appeared recently in one of the best-known German horticultural papers.

PLANT PATHOLOGY.

[A paper by A. F. Woods, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, read before the Congress of Horticulture at the Jamestown exposition, September 23, 1907, continued from the Review of September 26.]

Resistance and Immunity.

Our ideal, of course, is to cultivate plants that can, in the largest measure consistent with other requirements, fight their own battles. Observation and experience have given us a large amount of information on adaptability to conditions and resistance to disease, which remains to be classified and digested in order to be made generally available. We often neglect to reap the benefits of a destructive drought, a cold wave, an epidemic of disease or the failure of a crop by neglecting to study and save what is left. The few straggling plants left do not appeal to the average man. He plows them up or turns in the hogs. But the man familiar with nature's methods sees in these survivors resistant strains and saves the few straggling plants for seed, with the hope that the few survivors may have some peculiarity transmittable to progeny, making them resistant to the factor that caused the general destruction of the crop. In this way originated the wilt-resistant cotton, wilt-resistant cowpeas and flax, and cowpeas and tobacco resistant to nematode or root-knot. Strains of red clover resistant to anthracnose, a disease which in many sections of the south makes it impossible to grow ordinary non-resistant clover, were also originated in this way. Strains of corn, oats, wheat, rye, clover, alfalfa, sugar beets and other grains, forage plants and vegetables resistant to cold, alkali and drought have been developed from such selections, in some cases made purposely by subjecting the crop to these conditions, in others by simply taking advantage of what occurred naturally.

has forced the saving of the last straw. This is why we find the drought-resistant durum wheats in the dry regions of Russia and Asia and around the Mediterranean, the alkali and drought-resistant alfalfas and other forage crops in the same regions, a cold-resistant alfalfa in Siberia and northern Manchuria, the cold-resistant winter wheats of Russia, and other crops too numerous to mention. Hundreds of years of culture and selection, forced by poverty and necessity under forbidding conditions of cold and drought and disease, have made those sections veritable storehouses of good things, but what nature and necessity have not produced for us we can in large measure do for ourselves. We can combine the cold-resisting quality of the trifoliate inedible orange with the fruit qualities of the tender sweet orange; the disease-resistant quality of the citron with the fruit quality of the edible melons; the rust-resistant quality of the durum wheat with the berry of the blue stem; the cold-resistant quality of the wild crab with the fruit of our finer apples. The possibilities of such composite breeding have scarcely been touched or appreciated. In such work many factors must be taken into account and great care and foresight exercised.

Pathological Investigation.

Coming now to the scientific study of plant diseases, there is almost unlimited room for improvement. Compared with what there is still to discover, our knowledge of most diseases is still meager and one-sided. The brain of the pathologist is his most important instrument in such investigation. It must be trained to work with precision in all of the various directions and fields involved in such study. This is not now generally the case, and our colleges must be awakened to their duty. To most successfully combat a disease we should know the causes that contribute to it and as much about the causes as possible. We should understand the pathological reaction of the diseased plant. Only in this way shall we be able to remove the causes or protect the plant against them or assist it to recover.

Spraying.

In the cases of disease due to attack of parasitic organisms we are often able to protect our crops by spraying. Spraying, like a coat of mail, is a protection against entrance to the tissues by invading organisms. If there are any holes in the coat of mail, or if it is made of poor material or is put on after the arrow has pierced the flesh, it may be of no avail. Much of our spraying has holes in it. The tissues are not properly coated during the periods of attack. Much of the new growth is left unprotected during the critical period. The parasite gets in through these places, and we find too late that hasty, careless spraying is of little value.

Improperly made mixtures, or mixtures made of poor materials, are often of no protection, and may be as injurious as the disease. Even good Bordeaux mixture cannot safely be used on some plants, such as peaches, though some of the sulphur sprays can be used. The apparatus for spraying is, as a rule, poorly constructed, clumsy, and in great need of general improvement and adaptation to particular conditions. Demand good machinery and pay for it. It is essential to success.

Fewer Bulletins and More Men.

Those who know these things must teach by demonstration those who know imperfectly or do not know at all. Literature is valuable as an aid to demonstration teaching, but can never take the place of it. Too much dependence on literature is one of our great educational mistakes. Send out fewer bulletins and more men.

Briefly, then, we shall improve on the pathology of the last century if we take time to be careful and thorough, study the causes of failure and profit by the results, demand better trained minds and improved apparatus, and depend in our teaching more upon men and less upon books.

HARDY STOCK IN POTS.

The handling of pot-grown hardy stock at this time of the year, particularly if it is intended for sale during the coming winter, should not be overlooked by the grower. Plants or young trees that have been standing for several months and not been disturbed should be changed from the positions they occupy, so that the roots will be disconnected with the ground underneath. This is important, as it is late enough at this time for them to have a chance to recuperate before the growing season is over.

A great mistake is made in handling evergreen trees in pots when they are dormant, so to speak, and when well rooted through the pots. They have no inclination to grow immediately, even under the best of circumstances, and when in addition they have lost a number of roots they often die, or at least lose a great quantity of their growth and do not give satisfaction. Hence it is decidedly better to shift them this month, taking care to give them such trimming as they may need, restaking if necessary and occasionally repotting should they require it. There is little use, however, in doing much potting so late in the season. Plants are handled easier in small pots, especially in shipping, and unless they are intended for specimens they will easily get along until next spring.

When pot plants are carried along on board benches such care need not be taken as far as rooting through the pots is concerned, but restaking and trimming should be attended to. G.

The Market.

I cannot say that trade has improved any since I wrote our last report, but if September averages as good as August it is all we can expect. September is only second to June as a matrimonial month and the weddings have been coming thick and fast. Of course all the brides want white roses; therefore the new crop is a great financial success. Outdoor stuff is getting poorer and scarcer. Gladioli are done for, asters are waterlogged and sweet peas have taken a chill. Dahlias alone are trying to preserve a respectable appearance. Violets have made a modest beginning and the only quality lacking in the new carnation crop is the length of stem. Soon we shall have the chrysanthemum with us and then we shall feel quite prepared to meet the demands of an active winter's campaign.

Various Notes.

George Betz's new range of houses has received the finishing touches and shows up well from the Oregon City car line.

The Montavilla Floral Co. is gradually filling up its ten-acre field with nursery stock. Landscape work is made a feature here. One of the members of this firm has just returned from Germany with a bride, and another member departed immediately for the same place in the interest of the firm's business.

William Jackson, formerly in business at Vancouver, Wash., is building a small range of glass in the pretty and thriving town of Stevenson, Wash.

T. E. Miles and H. Clemens, of Newberg, both know how to grow asters and for two months supplied us with high grade stock. John Gower, recently a private gardener of Portland, has moved out to the same place and is erecting glass for the cultivation of vegetables and cut flowers.

We recently had the pleasure of meeting F. A. Huntley, state commissioner of horticulture, of Tacoma, Wash. Mr. Huntley owns property in North Yakima and is indirectly interested in the florists' business there.

Thomas Ellingham, out on the Base Line road, has added one new house.

F. A. Van Kirk, in the same locality, is not building this year, but he is cutting a fine lot of Enchantress carnations.

To our amateur enthusiast, Asa Sleeth, we must give credit for growing the finest gladioli ever seen in Portland.

The writer has just received an invitation to a strawberry festival, the berries picked within ten miles of town. How is that for God's country?

The Market.

Business has been fair during the last week. Flowers are still rather scarce. Mums, owing to the continued cool weather, have been slow to develop, but at this writing they are more plentiful and in a few days will be in their prime. The best greenhouse-grown white and yellow varieties cost the stores $2.50 per dozen, with good demand. Asters are entirely out of season and from reports from the growers were not an especially profitable proposition this year. The public does not take so kindly to them as to the chrysanthemums and their use was principally relegated to decorations and to funeral work.

Carnations still show the results of their recent replanting in the houses, but they are daily becoming better in size and quality. The best kinds cost the stores $4 per hundred and from that price downwards to $2 per hundred for poorer stock. Roses are much more plentiful than they have been at any time since last spring and, although the quality is fair, there is yet much chance for improvement. Valley is plentiful, but moves slowly. Japanese lilies are out of the market. A few late varieties of amaryllis are seen and net the growers $4 per hundred.

Violets are a shade more plentiful and, with the advent of cooler nights, are better in stem and brighter in color. Sweet peas are almost over for the season. Those that are brought in are usually short-stemmed and are of little value except in funeral work.

Everyone is expecting a brisk fall trade, but up to date it has not been particularly noticeable.

Various Notes.

C. C. Morse & Co. are receiving large consignments of bulbs for the fall and winter trade, both from Europe and locally grown.

A. D. Lewis will leave in a few days on an extended trip through Oregon and Washington.

Several dealers in Christmas trees and other green goods are soliciting orders from the retailers. There was a heavy demand last season for all of this class of stock and prices ruled high.

The Chinese growers of asters in the neighborhood of San Mateo complain that this has been a poor season for them financially. Wages are high and the prices obtained for the stock have not been up to expectations.

Domoto Bros. have finished their new rose house at Elmhurst. They have the largest range of glass in Alameda county.

Tinfoil and all kinds of florists' supplies appear to be scarce articles with the dealers.

Pelicano & Co. report good business for the month of September. Their only difficulty has been in getting a sufficiency of first-class stock. G.

NEW ORLEANS.

At the last meeting of the club, when it was decided to abandon this year's flower show, C. W. Eichling said he wished to go on record as not being in favor of giving up the chrysanthemum show, and was the only one holding out for it.

To have a show in November in a hall or store on Canal street, only members exhibiting, was an idea advanced by Paul Ebele, which met with unanimous approval, and a committee, consisting of P. A. Chopin, H. A. Despommier and Paul Ebele, was appointed to arrange for this. H. Papworth's tender of his store was received and will probably be accepted by the committee, the show being arranged to continue several days, and calls for some of the best collections of the florists' stock that can be brought together.

The society unanimously indorsed the projected Panama Biocceanic Exposition, to be held in New Orleans in 1915, and it is intended that the society get in close touch with the workers for the project and endeavor to give every aid toward making the New Orleans exposition renowned for its beauty of landscape, the trees, hedges and gardening being started in time to make a decent show when the exposition first opens, instead of being delayed and only being attended to after all else.

Charles Eble, the pioneer florist of Baronne street, opened his new quarters in the Cusachs building September 25, and his store now forms one of the attractions of that district. Assisting Mr. Eble are his sons, Charles Eble, Jr., and Bernard Eble, and his niece, Miss Carrie Eble. Mr. Eble had been in business in Baronne street nineteen years.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Current Comment.

Trade is very quiet just now, the only business being funeral work. Flowers are quite plentiful, especially carnations. The continuous warm weather has brought them out in large numbers. One or two of the florists are advertising bargains in them just now. One man is offering them for 15 cents per dozen retail, or two dozen for 25 cents, while another is advertising them at 20 cents per dozen

BALTIMORE.The Market.

Business last week was fairly good. Many designs were disposed of and the market trade was good.

Outdoor stock is plentiful. The last few nights have been cool and many thought frost likely to come. A frost would have ruined acres of outdoor blooms and would have put a damper on business, so many cut heavily, fearing they would be caught. However, we seldom have frost before October 15. The indoor blooms are arriving slowly and the stock looks so well that our growers are encouraged.

The Dutch bulbs are nearly all delivered and many are planting. Some complain of the bulbs being damp, but stock that I have seen is in fine condition. It seems that some of our growers are devoting their space to pot plants for Easter use and cutting down their bulb houses.

Various Notes.

W. R. Bauer, of Owings Mills, is cutting some extra fine dahlias.

Edwin Bishop, of Roslyn, has made his appearance in Hollins' market with dahlias.

The park board has decided to hold five chrysanthemum shows this fall, one at each of the large parks.

Bowling matches will take place this month between the employees of the following firms: S. L. Lambert Co., Griffith & Turner Co., Rawlings Implement Co., John Deere Plow Co., International Harvester Co. and Brown Implement Co.

Richard Oler, of Arlington, has a new-comer—a bouncing baby boy.

C. Gregorius, of Arlington, is installing a new boiler.

C. Seigwart, of Carroll, has some splendid mums.

For many years there has been an unfriendly feeling between the growers and the so-called fakers that occupy stalls on Lexington and Eutaw streets. The question as to how to get rid of the fakers has been brought up in the club, some speaking in favor of them and others against them. Now one of our growers has taken up the idea of getting rid of them, and he and his lawyer succeeded in getting them out of their old stands last week. Now there are only three stalls on Lexington street, where formerly there were about a dozen. Some were fortunate enough to find stalls on Eutaw street among the growers, though formerly they were all at one end of the market. I am under the impression that the ill feeling will result in cutting prices.

William Kleinheinz, as private gardener for P. A. B. Wildener, has the management of a range of greenhouses containing about 60,000 square feet of glass, and he also has charge of the lawn, about sixty acres in extent, which surrounds his employer's residence. The lawn is laid out in the most approved style. Among the plants that he grows in the greenhouses are carnations, chrysanthemums, hybrid tea and American Beauty roses, ferns, orchids, palms, stove and cold house plants. One house, 150 feet long, is devoted to grapes and nectarines. He also grows about 30,000 mixed bedding plants.

JENSEN & DEKEMA,

CARNATION SPECIALISTS,

674 West Foster Avenue, CHICAGO.

ST. PAUL.

State of Trade.

Killing frosts have destroyed outside stock, driven the lake dwellers homeward and hastened social functions, all of which tends to improve trade. Stock is fairly plentiful, but the best grades of it are scarce. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and the quality is improving daily. A few violets are coming in, while the first of the mums have made their appearance. A number of millinery openings have created some demand for palms and decorative material, while the first fall receptions are setting the style by using autumn foliage in quantity.

The Greek has invaded this territory once more and has a full-fledged flower department in one of the large stores. A local grocery store also has been selling palms, rubbers and ferns at "bargain" prices.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson have had several large wedding decorations lately and report trade in their new location as fully forty per cent better than when they moved in a year ago.

John A. May, who has been identified with the trade for many years, has engaged in the shoe business.

L. L. May & Co. have incorporated and have plans for largely extending the business.

Holm & Olson are building a new propagating house and are extending their palm house. They have recently erected a large barn and wagon-shed, as well as made several other improvements about their premises.

Chas. Keiper is cutting some very fine mums.

Recent callers were J. J. Karins, of the H. A. Dreer Co.; Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co.; Wm. Abrahamson, of E. H. Hunt, Chicago; J. J. Comont, of Carter, Dunnett & Beale, London.

The St. Paul Floral Co. is rebuilding one house. X. Y. Z.

I HAVE been very much pleased with the articles published in the REVIEW and could hardly do without it.—WM. J. THOMS.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.—During a cyclone last week a greenhouse in course of erection at D'Alcorn & Sons' was blown onto their chrysanthemum house, smashing about 100 panes of 16x20 glass. The firm cheerfully remarked, "It might have been worse. We have less disbud-ding to do, anyhow." Two dwelling houses were wrecked and a dump cart was blown about like a newspaper.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

It is not long since some of the boys remarked, "Anything for a change!" Well, they have the change. Asters and gladioli have about gone. Carnations are not enough in evidence to mention. Lilies were out of sight and the afore-said dealers had to skirmish for stock to fill their orders and, strange to say, they did not appreciate the change. Business is good and there are better things in sight, but stock will be scarce unless chrysanthemums get a move on. They seem to be about one month later than last year.

There has been no frost here so far, although several places in the immediate vicinity have reported first snow, but dahlias are the only flowers left and they are good.

Various Notes.

Mr. Garland, of the Finleyville Floral Co. was a visitor and reported his carnations in fine condition. He expects to build next year.

Among the other visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Gus A. Geng, of Youngstown, O.; W. S. Kidd and daughter, of Beaver, Pa.; William Cromack, of Irwin, Pa.; G. A. McWilliams, of Natrona, Pa., and E. M. Hall, of Fairmont, W. Va.

W. R. Maebius, of Lock No. 4, Pa., has sold out to T. J. Allen, who will continue the business.

A railroad wreck on the B. & O. delayed the flower train and the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. did not get the roses until almost 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, September 28, causing great inconvenience. It was a strange coincidence that the trains on all the other roads were delayed the same morning, and the Pittsburgh Florists' Exchange and J. B. Murdoch & Co. were no better off.

Hoo-Hoo.

WINFIELD, KAN.—E. H. Gilbert, who has been ill for a month, is able to attend to business again.

BELLE PLAINE, IA.—Henry Bowers, of this place, has been experimenting in the production of new varieties of chrysanthemums from seed, and it is said he has obtained about thirty fine new sorts.

Grand New Double Daisy

A sport from that great money-making single variety, QUEEN ALEXANDRA, that everybody grows to a good profit. You can do better with this. The flowers are large, averaging three inches in diameter, and none of the flowers comes single at any time of the year. It blooms freely, either under glass or outdoors. Young stock, out of 2 1/2-inch pots, ready for delivery January 1, $25.00 per 100.

FACTS, ONLY FACTS

If you wish to be cock of the walk,
 If you'd like to hear the town talk
 Of the plants that you sell,
 Why, you know very well,
 If they're Aschmann's, no buyer will balk.

What do you think; when will you start in?
DO IT NOW. Waiting means suicide. I always act as quickly as I think, and have been successful; learn and do it likewise.

ARAUCARIAS our specialty. Watch us grow.

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well-admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, Sept. and Oct. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 2 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii. Have 8 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench-grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5,000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

If you wish to be cock of the walk,
 If you'd like to hear the town talk
 Of the plants that you sell,
 Why, you know very well,
 If they're Aschmann's, no buyer will balk.

What do you think: when will you start in?
DO IT NOW. Waiting means suicide. I always act as quickly as I think, and have been successful; learn and do it likewise.

ARAUCARIAS our specialty. Watch us grow.

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, Sept. and Oct. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 2 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii. Have 3 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5 000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

Cocos Weddelliana—(Palm) 3-in. pots, 12, 15, 18 in. high, 15c, 18c, 20c each.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus Compacta 3-in. pots, $6.00 per 100; 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

The American Carnation.

By C. W. WARD. Invaluable to the carnation grower. All departments of the business are treated in a thoroughly practical manner. This book is the work of a careful, studious grower of ripe experience. Fully illustrated. $3.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 630 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

CONSERVING SOILS.

In going through some of the market nurseries near London, where cucumbers, chrysanthemums and tomatoes are extensively grown, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, I find that in many instances the cost of suitable compost is a great item. Those starting should be careful to secure ground that will give a depth of good loam; yet after this is done, it requires management to keep up a supply, and those who do not economize, soon exhaust their resources, but with proper treatment, the same soil may be used over a good many times.

Fresh loam with manure added is best for cucumbers, and after the crop is over, all loose leaves and rubbish may be cleared from the surface, and when removed from the house, a good dressing of lime may be added. Turned up into a heap, with more manure added later on, it will make a good compost for chrysanthemums the following year. There will be an advantage in adding a bag of soot to each cartload of manure and well mixing it before adding to the other soil, and after mixing, it should remain a few days. Soil that has been used for tomato growing may also be purified. All stems and leaves should be cleared off. This is important, for the disease germs may live for a considerable time in the old stems, but with a good sprinkling of lime, the soil may be cleansed, and if laid up for a year, may be again used for tomatoes.

I have seen much more waste in regard to soil since I have been near London than when I was in the country. There nothing was wasted. All old pot soil was kept in a heap for about a year, and loose rubbish in another heap. In the winter, after the hedges had been trimmed, all loose rubbish which would burn was got together and a fire made. When a good foundation was made with the more combustible materials, almost anything could be burned, old rhubarb stools and other roots could be reduced to ashes; and when properly burned, provided good material for mixing with potting soil.

I know it is the general opinion that soils get worn out in time, but from my own experience, all soil used for indoor growing may be re-used again in three years, and will be better than virgin soil if it has been properly treated. In the purifying of soil, frost is a great factor, and when the soil is laid up in heaps, weeds may be allowed to grow if the tops are cut off before they seed.

COULDN'T ANSWER HIS MAIL.

A subscriber in the west sends the REVIEW a circular issued by William Kuyk, of Hillegom, Holland, giving details as to the new carnations originated by Alfred Giraud and for which varieties Mr. Kuyk is looking for a purchaser. The circular begins:

"With reference to the advertisement in the WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW of June 20, 1907, page 31, I received so many letters that I decided to make a circular giving the desired particulars."

When an advertiser, who offers for sale the entire stock of a new plant, gets so many applications for details that he cannot answer them all by letter, he ought to be pretty well satisfied with the results from an advertisement that cost $10, and evidently Mr. Kuyk is.

IT DID THE WORK.

We potted up about 6,000 4-inch geraniums as a surplus over the needs of our retail trade to try the REVIEW and see if it would sell some for us. We sent in a small advertisement and in five weeks we were sold out and received orders for 1,000 more than we had. We sent money back to eight different states. When a man gets his offer into the classified department of the REVIEW he wants to be careful or his stock will all be sold and he will have nothing left but empty houses to take care of. The REVIEW is worth dollars a year, instead of $1, to any one in the business. You can use this letter if you want to; it is true. RAGAN BROS.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUPPLY TANK TOO LOW.

I have a regular steam boiler, but use hot water. I wish to get your advice in regard to a change in the vent pipe. I used the system last year, but whenever the water would get a little too hot it would blow half the water out of the boiler before it would stop. With the vent as it now is, this sometimes broke glass for me, and I want to know if I can put the vent on the steam dome of the boiler and get good results. I will inclose a rough outline of the system.

S. E. L.

From the diagram and from what you say I infer that your supply tank is only slightly higher than the high point in the system. The plan is all right, but the supply tank or expansion tank should be twelve or fifteen feet higher and of ample size to provide for the overflow, so that when the water in the system cools down the pipes will remain full. Run the pipe outside and above the greenhouses and shed, if necessary, and give it protection from frost by inclosing it with proper material.

Steam Heating on an Economical Vacuum Principle

The Simonds Automatic Vacuum Valve has MANY advantages over any other vacuum valve in the world.

Think of a $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch valve with a $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch clear discharge opening under the valve. They won't easily clog with dirt or rust, will they? Of an air discharge valve above the water line and tight on its seat, except while water discharge valve is open. Can't waste steam when not open, can it?

Of an adjustment to this air discharge valve that allows of reducing the discharge to a pin point. Won't waste steam when discharging, will it?

Of no guide wings or pins under water discharge valve.

Of an allowance for adjusting both valves on their seats after all is heated up, and expansion has taken place.

Pretty near the correct principle, ain't it?

Our Compound Vacuum Steam Heating System combines with the valve to secure the highest economy in steam, and complete circulation in even the largest heating areas.

the box: "What is the best soil for sweet peas?" "What are the best varieties?" An interesting discussion followed, the consensus of opinion being that a soil well enriched with barnyard manures and deeply spaded, and upon which no similar crop had been grown for some time, was the best suited for sweet pea culture.

With most growers sweet peas have done remarkably well this season, and the varieties in the following list were considered the best in their different colors: King Edward, scarlet; Countess Spencer, Gladys Unwin and Miss Willmott, pink shades; Helen Pierce, mottled; Lady Grisel Hamilton, lavender;

State of Business.

Trade has been rather brisk here for the last week or so, and stock scarce. Asters are all gone and are certainly missed. Roses are coming in more plentifully, but are far from being enough to fill orders. Carnations are coming on nicely, but very few are blooming at this writing. The month of September is one of the worst months in the year for stock on this market, as very few of the growers plant early enough to have much stock at this time. Mums are looking fine and there are some few of the earlier varieties to be seen on the market. They will be welcomed by all, as it will break the spell of trying to fill orders with nothing, so to speak.

Florists' Club.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting September 22. There was a good turnout, as the members were much interested in the mum show, to be given in November. President Stephens appointed the following committee on the show: Messrs. Torrey, Reichert, Metzmeier, Currie and Wedemeyer. After the meeting the single men rolled against the married men. Of course the married men lost. The four highest rollers were as follows: Single—Reichert, Blum and Buchler; married—McKellar.

Various Notes.

J. R. Hellenthal has a very fine house of carnations; in fact, the best to be seen here.

Sherman Stephens reports mums coming on finely. He also has a large wedding decoration on hand for the Grand wedding at Grove City, O.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has just finished glazing its last house in the new range and is busy getting ready to plant it in carnations. Morris, the little son of Wm. Graff, went through a severe operation for a growth in his nose and throat, but is getting along nicely, which is a great relief to his parents and all who know him.

George Bauman was exhibiting a photo of his wife in the aster patch when the plants were in their prime. They caught her with 300 choice blooms in her arms, which makes an elegant picture.

A Private Dahlia Show.

The dahlia exhibit held September 26 and 27 at the store of Bertermann Bros. Co. was a great success and both the firm and the grower, E. G. Barnes, of Spencer, Ind., are to be congratulated on the result of their efforts. There is no doubt that the dahlia has been steadily growing in favor for the last few years, and this show will greatly stimulate its popularity in this section, showing the people what can be grown here and the different forms there are, from the immense double to the single and cactus. Among the best varieties shown were Gabriel, Sylvia, Kaiser Wilhelm, Gettysburg, Apple Blossom, Juliette, Bronze Beauty and a dark one well named Aunt Chloe. There were many others that were favorites and it is really hard to make any real choice; all are good. The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, had some vases of its new Rhea Reid rose on exhibition that brought forth much favorable comment, the color being especially pleasing. The same firm also showed two other new roses, one named Princess and the other labeled No. 10.

It is hoped that this effort will encourage others and that the dahlia show may be made an annual feature. S.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Although the time at which we might expect a material decrease in business has arrived, we have quite a number of cottagers who are entertaining and thus helping to prolong the season for the florists. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and her daughter arrived at the Breakers this week and will remain until late in the fall.

Arthur Griffin, gardener for E. T. Gerry, is now in England visiting his parents after an absence of fifteen years.

Wadley & Smythe are to make some improvements on the estate of William B. Leeds this fall.

At a meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society September 24, nine new members were proposed. The year drawing to a close promises to be one of the most prosperous in the society's history. The silver cup presented to the society by Henry A. Dreer was greatly admired. It was voted that the cup should not be in the possession of any one individual until it is won twice.

Oscar Schultz will from this out give special attention to palms and decorative foliage plants, and with that object in view he has secured the services of John Booth, lately in charge of the W. S. Wells estate greenhouses.

Stewart Ritchie has his carnations in good shape. Mr. Ritchie finds vegetable growing profitable in summer and he has his son Charles in charge of this branch during the season. R. R.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The REVIEW takes pleasure in presenting its readers with a series of views taken at The Sign of the Rose, the unique flower shop of Charles Henry Fox, on Broad street, below Walnut, Philadelphia. These views, which embrace the flower shop and conservatory at The Sign of the Rose, and some of Mr. Fox's brightest efforts, will appear each week in this column until the series is complete. Mr. Fox's reputation for decorative work stands so high that it is only necessary to say that his customers are among the most fastidious flower lovers of the Quaker City.

GOOD LUCK EMBLEMS.

The REVIEW frequently has called attention to the opportunity for securing business which is presented whenever a new store is opened in any of the ordinary retail lines. The accompanying illustration shows one of the orders for such an occasion, which came to John G. Heisl & Son, at Terre Haute, Ind. This piece, which stood over seven feet high, was presented to the proprietor of the Herz Bazaar upon the day of the recent opening of that new enterprise. It was a birch-bark stump in which were 157 long American Beauty roses. This was a rose for each one of the employees of the establishment, who paid for the piece by subscription.

Upon this occasion there were some fifty baskets, designs and other good-luck emblems sent by business associates in the town and business connections throughout the country. In fact, it was a regular flower show and one which, no doubt, did much to further this commendable custom.

It is now quite a general thing to send flowers on the day that a new store is opened. Not only do the proprietor's friends remember him, but those business houses in which he has bought his stock, and those houses which hope to gain his future patronage, recognize in this an excellent means of expressing their sincere good-will. No man can be otherwise than pleased when his friends send him flowers on such a day.

The next time a good-sized new store is to be opened in your town, make a try for a little of this business. If it is a shoe store, get a copy of the shoe trade journal and send a letter to all its largest advertisers. The chances are you will hit those who sold the new stock, as well as many others who will be interested. Send them a neat letter, type-written if possible, and unquestionably upon your business stationery, setting forth your facilities to send suitable good-luck emblems to the opening. Ten to one the response will be greatly to your satisfaction.

Don't use a wire frame on such orders. Loose arrangements, like baskets, are preferable to anything remotely suggesting a funeral.

FUNERAL WORK.

Panels and Casket Covers.

From a spray or flat bunch it is but a short step to large panels of flowers, or complete covers or blankets of flowers for caskets.

As the panel is the next step, let us consider it first, leaving the covers until later.

There are a great many ways of making up flowers or the different materials at hand into the form of a panel, or in other words a large, flat piece, usually having square corners. These pieces can also be used in many different ways.

Often a large panel of flowers is used in place of the more expensive casket cover; in this case the piece must be made of a suitable size so as to look well upon the casket. A good size is order for a floral design which will just cover the lower end of a casket; that is, from the glass down. This space you will find will measure about 18x42 inches on top.

The first step is to procure the wire frame upon which to make the design; this is merely a flat wire frame, just heavy enough so it will hold its shape well. Order one, 15x36 inches, from your wire man.

We will also suppose that the choice of flowers was left to the artist, though this is seldom his good fortune. Almost any variety of flowers can of course be used, but as this panel is for an elderly person and we have some nice white chrysanthemums at our disposal, we will use these.

Place one end of your frame on the edge of your work-bench and the other end on top of a high chair or stand, so that you can get your hands underneath when fastening the flowers into place. Next lay some fern leaves on the frame; these serve as a background for the flowers, besides giving the piece a finished appearance.

In my article on sprays in the REVIEW of June 27 I spoke of the necessity of letting the smaller flowers project over the tops of the larger ones, as well as toward the edge. Pick out some of the small chrysanthemums and lay them down upon the ferns. Let some extend one made upon a flat wire frame about 15x36 inches; this, when made up, will just nicely cover the top of the lower end of a full sized casket. Then again, a panel can be fastened to an easel, thus making a fine funeral design.

A Panel as a Casket Cover.

As we can do but one thing at a time, let us suppose that you have an one or two inches over the edge and some just even with the edge; in other words, avoid having the edge too even. Bring the stems of several of the flowers together and tie into place on the frame with a piece of No. 24 wire bent over your finger in the shape of a hairpin. I like to bring the wire for fastening the flowers up from underneath, tying it at the top, for when you tie at the under side of the piece the wire ends catch on everything and also scratch the top of the casket or furniture.

After tying the first row of flowers in place, work along just as you would in making a flat bunch. Asparagus Sprengeri is a nice green to use in connection with chrysanthemums. Do not use this too sparingly, as the green adds much to the appearance of any floral work. Arrange the flowers as loosely as you can, at the same time giving a nice square shape to the general outline of your design.

Work from each end of the frame toward the center. As you near the center, avoid having the stems meet or bunch up in one place. Keep the stems as flat as you can and stick them out of sight underneath the flowers opposite. You may experience a little trouble in finishing up nicely at first, but after a little practice it will be hard for even yourself to find where you finished.

As I said before, almost any flower can be worked up nicely into a panel or cover. Large and small flowers can also be used nicely in the same piece; as, for instance, valley with roses, carnations or so on. Sweet peas and some larger flower also work well together, and even lilies and some such flower as the rose will harmonize well.

The same rule holds good here as in panels used in place of a casket cover. A very elaborate floral design can be made by fastening a panel to an easel. When it is to be used in this way, more care must be exercised in fastening the flowers to the frame, so that each one will stay in its proper place.

It is not necessary that a panel be always made entirely of flowers. On the contrary, very elaborate ones can be made in different ways. Galax leaves come in very conveniently for this purpose. In a piece of this style it will, of course, be necessary that you moss your frame. After you have procured a frame of suitable size, use either paper, foil or fern leaves to keep the moss from falling through the frame and to serve as a background for the design. It is absolutely necessary that you consider the back, as this shows plainly after the panel is fastened to the easel. Many are careless in this respect, but it pays to use something that will not detract from the appearance of the design. A good plan is to lay some fern leaves between the paper or foil and the frame, thus giving a nice, finished effect. Next lay enough moss on top of the paper so that after it is drawn into place and tied it will be about an inch and a quarter thick, or just full enough to hold the picks or fern-pins well. In tying the moss galax leaves, using fern-pins for fastening the leaves. Begin at the edge and work toward the center. Use only good leaves and enough so that the fern-pins will not show. Do not spoil your design by using poor leaves just to save a few pennies. After you have the moss all nicely covered, make a border of flowers around the outside of the panel about two inches from the edge. First lay some smilax on the leaves, fastening it with a few fern-pins; this will be your guide. Then stem some white roses on toothpicks, leaving the stems of the roses about two to three inches long. The most open roses should be stemmed the shortest. Arrange these roses along the smilax; in other words, form a garland of roses.

Now make a loose spray of lily of the valley and white roses for the center space, just large enough so it will not look crowded. Fasten this spray to the panel with some wire, having it extend from the lower left-hand to the upper right-hand corner. A suitable bow will add much to the appearance of the whole.

Another fine piece is made by taking the same panel of galax and fastening a nicely made cross, anchor or other design into place on it. A design when used in this way should be made all white and as plain as you can. If the panel is large enough you can use a garland around the edge in the same manner as with the spray, but try to avoid having the panel look crowded. Several small bunches, each containing about six or nine roses or carnations, fastened in the corners, also produce a very pretty effect.

Green galax leaves can also be used in the same way as the bronze. A spray or design with a touch of pink will go very nicely with the green leaves.

You will find that a panel constructed according to the foregoing directions makes as fine a looking design as your best class of customers may wish for. By falling back on your own imagination you can, of course, make up an almost endless variety of panels.

Next week I will tell about the casket cover proper, illustrating a moderate-priced one.

HUGO SCHROETER.

GARIBALDI'S WREATH.

The Italian population on the south-west side of Chicago is large and each year Garibaldi day is celebrated by every native of sunny Italy. Each year the statue of Garibaldi in Lincoln park is decorated with dozens of floral emblems sent by the Italian societies, in 1907 the flowers representing an expenditure of probably $2,000. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a wreath six feet in diameter made by B. Abrahamson, who appears in the picture. He is not taller than the wreath, as appears in the picture, because he is standing on a box. The wreath was made to combine the colors of the Italian flag, green, white and red, which were the colors of the ribbon with which the two flags were tied at the top and also the color of the ribbons crossing the center, the square object at the intersection of the ribbons being a picture of Garibaldi, which does not show in the illustration. For green along the outside of the wreath Mr. Abrahamson used peony foliage; for the white, which occupied the center of the wreath, he used sweet peas, and for the red circle at the inside of the wreath he used red peonies.

The swinging sign is perfect in every detail; the windows, the carving, and the lanterns, the boxes, and the casement windows, all are faithful reproductions.

FERTILIZER FOR ADIANTUMS.

With what would you advise us to feed Adiantum Farleyense? MORRIS.

I have found weak liquid cow manure the best and safest to use. Chemical fertilizers I cannot recommend. Soot water is good for all ferns. C. W.

SUBSTITUTE FOR COW MANURE.

For use on violets would equal parts of bone meal, muriate of potash and nitrate of soda take the place of liquid fertilizer made from cow manure? I generally use the bone meal dry and mix it with the potash and soda, using one tablespoonful to a gallon of water. L. D.

In reply to this query would say that I have not tried this formula and do not think that chemicals of any kind can take the place of stable manure. I would advise you to try only a small place as you suggest and note carefully its effects before using the formula largely, and then give us the results of your trial in these columns.

THE CATTLEYA FLY.

I would like to get a little information about a small insect called the orchid fly. It makes small holes in the orchid plants, goes down the stem of the plant and lays eggs in the young growth, causing it to swell and get thick and spoiling the bloom. I have heard of several ways to kill the insect, but do not know which is the best way. I would like to know whether you think it best to cut off the young growth where the eggs are. We have never before been troubled with anything of the kind. We have just noticed them recently, and think they came in on some new plants we bought last year.

W. J. L.

The pest referred to is known as the cattleya fly and is dreaded by all orchid cultivators. It usually comes in importations of Cattleya labiata, but occasionally on other cattleyas, and attacks every species once it has secured a foothold in the house they are growing in. It is also destructive to lalias, epidendrums and all the bigeneric crosses between these species.

The flies lay their eggs in the growths while these are very young, causing an easily perceptible swelling. These should be cut out and burned as soon as noticed. Fumigation twice a week with some strong nicotine extract will kill many of the flies, which are active in the spring months. Even with all these measures it is a tedious task to control, not to speak of eradicating, the pest. It is distressing to see growth after growth attacked and plants flowerless which should under more favorable conditions have made a brilliant showing, but if the fumigation is kept up and growths removed when infected, a visible impression will soon be made on the fly.

Quite a few collections have been partially ruined by this destructive pest and there are few who have not had experience with it. Hypodermic injections to destroy the maggots have been tried, but did not prove a success. I would recommend frequent strong fumigations, especially in the spring, when the mature fly is on the wing.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE SEASON FOR CUTTING.

Some Early Varieties.

Cutting is now on in real earnest in most establishments, and prices so far are fairly satisfactory. Monrovia holds the palm as the early yellow. It is this year the most profitable thing I have grown and at this date, October 5, is all sold and the space is being utilized for another purpose. There is practically no waste with Monrovia, as every plant produces perfect buds and flowers.

Miss Mary Godfrey, as a yellow to follow Monrovia, will be largely grown. The C. S. A. gave a certificate for this variety last year on October 13, and its behavior this year shows that this certificate was richly deserved. It is now fully developed and its splendid color and excellent stem and foliage make it more profitable than any other yellow yet ready for shipping, aside from Monrovia.

Two other yellows, last year's novelties, are now ready to cut, but they are not in the same class with Mary Godfrey. Comoleta is fully open, but it has no size and has to improve immensely to be grown again. The fault may be due to my culture, but it has not been treated differently from the other kinds and I would be pleased to hear how it has behaved in other sections. Sergeant Levy, the other early yellow, is good enough in foliage and stem, but the flower is not full enough and the shape is very poor, not to mention the fact that with me it burned badly, an unusual fault in a yellow variety.

Director Gerard is cut and gone. It is a fine variety. It shows too much of the bronze to be called yellow, but it is large, finely formed and bound to sell so early in the season.

Lady Hopetoun, which I have cut for some years by October 6, is only just showing color and will have to hustle to be up in shape for the late October shows.

Of the other earlies, Pacific and Polly Rose are being shipped into the market in fine shape and they are very popular this year. There is no white to touch Polly Rose for the first week in October.

It is a trifle early to see yet how the general line of exhibition stock will be, but some kinds are opening rapidly.

Mrs. J. A. Miller, the finest thing in its color that we have, is finishing grandly, as usual. The stem and foliage of this variety are not equaled in any other sort, and a deep yellow sport that has appeared gives hopes of a sterling novelty for next year.

Mrs. George Heaume could be cut in a week if one so desired, and though the color, a salmon bronze, is against it as a commercial variety, it is a splendid thing nevertheless.

Beatrice May, by present showing, is going to hold its title as the peerless white. A bench of it just now about half developed is a glorious sight. It is a pity the foliage is spotty. The absolutely perfect is an ideal that we can never attain, perhaps, but if Beatrice

May had the foliage and stem of Mrs. J. A. Miller I would say that the ideal was not so very far off.

Morton F. Plant is putting up an enormous bud and I think will possibly be set up in much better shape than last year.

Mary Mann is making up very nicely and should give a good account of itself.

Dakoma, a novelty of last year, should be fine. It is only showing color yet, but foliage and stem are excellent.

Magnificent is magnificent in foliage and stem, but I fear that the flower, by present indications, will not correspond to the balance of the plant.

Mrs. A. T. Miller will be in shape to cut by October 10, and for an absolutely pure white is the largest we will have so early. I see no reason why Miller should not find a welcome place as a second early, to follow Polly Rose.

The Novelties.

The imported novelties this year show no early types, the earliest with me being an Australian unnamed seedling which will be ready to cut by October 15. It is building up for an immense flower and is, by the appearance of the leaf, a seedling of Mrs. W. Knox. The color is a rosy red.

Mary Mason, also a Wells variety, is extra fine in foliage and stem so far and, by the looks of the bud, it should line up as one of the best of the year. Every year we get a few that stand out more prominently than the rest, and Mary Mason will be one of them. Color, old rose. Another one is W. M. Moir. This variety has the largest bud at its present stage of development that I ever saw, and if the finish is as it should be, we shall, as W. Wells says, "shake hands with ourselves." Watch for Moir at the shows.

Mary Donnellan I am watching with a good deal of interest. It is rather tall in growth and will need to be started later another year. Mr. Godfrey recommended it as a good commercial variety last spring in these columns, and so far it looks promising.

O. H. Broomhead is showing splendidly, and if it finishes as I anticipate, every one will have to grow it as a deep pink exhibition flower. Every bud is fine, both the early and late buds showing equal fullness, and the center of the bud is crowded with petals. O. H. Broomhead is a Silsbury seedling and it is worthy of note that few of his productions have been successful in our climate, though sweeping the boards in England, notable examples being Mrs. F. W. Vallis and J. H. Silsbury. If Broomhead does finish well here, it will be interesting to watch its behavior on the other side. W. Meredith, by the same raiser, is at present very promising. It is an exact counterpart of the old Edwin Molyneux, a color we need badly. Crimson and gold form perhaps the most striking combination of color in the range of the mum, as any one admits who has ever grown Lady Roberts in good shape.

From now on the interest will increase daily and the mum lover is in his glory. No flower excites the interest and admiration of the world at large as does the chrysanthemum, and it is the flower that renders possible all the fine exhibitions that will be held throughout the country in the next six weeks.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

PROTECTING HYBRID TEA ROSES.

Hybrid tea roses require protection in some form in the northern states, and for their winter protection there are several methods practiced successfully. Where the number is limited, it may be practicable as well as profitable to lift the plants before very severe frost sets in and, after they are potted, place them in coldframes, covering the pots and also the plants halfway up with soil, and covering the remainder lightly with hay or straw, or even with leaves.

Where there are large numbers of plants to be cared for and the method of potting them for the winter is considered too expensive, it will answer, perhaps, quite as well if the plants are dug up on the approach of very cold weather and heeled in frames, covering them with soil in the same manner as advised for the potted plants, covering the remainder of the wood also in the same way, with hay, straw, leaves or similar litter.

Another method is that of allowing the plants to remain where they are growing, and for their protection manure is placed a few inches in depth all over the ground where the roses are. Then all the wood is securely covered with hay or straw, which should be left untouched until spring opens. In the case of the others, however, ventilation can be given them from time to time, when the weather permits. D. M.

RED SPIDER AND STIGMONOSE.

I enclose a growth from one of my Enchantress plants, in a diseased condition, and would be thankful if you could inform me what the ailment is, how it is caused, and what the cure is, if you know of any.

How often should fine bone be given to the plants, which are budding fast?

F. N. B.

Your case is identical with that of E. L. B. and is covered fully in my answer to his query, under the head of "Punctures by Insects," on page 9 of the REVIEW of October 3. You have both red spider and stigmonose infesting your plants.

Do not be too liberal with the bone this early in the season. If you mixed a fair quantity into the soil at planting time, and if the plants are growing strong, a light application in connection with a mulch at this time will likely prove beneficial. Then do not give any more for two months. After February you can give a light dressing of bone every six weeks with good results, but up to that time it is not wise to indulge in too much feeding.

A. F. J. B.

RUST ON CARNATIONS.

I have heard that good results may be obtained from the use of a solution of arsenic as a remedy for the rust of the carnation—about one ounce of a solution known as Fowler's solution to eight gallons of water. I should be glad to have your advice before trying such a remedy.

J. W. G.

Some years ago we used the arsenic solution in combating rust on carnations, and with more or less success. We have since found, however, that we can control it much more easily and with less danger to the crop. We have seen serious damage to the crop result from the improper use of this article, and unless you can be sure of just what you are doing I would advise you to leave it alone. We find that by keeping the foliage of the plants dry and keeping the atmosphere charged slightly with sulphur fumes, the spores of the rust will remain inactive and harmless. You will now be running a steam pipe in each house at least a part of almost every night, and if you will drop a pinch of sulphur on that pipe every few feet it will answer the purpose. Dusting the plants with sulphur and lime will also prove effective. By picking off all the affected leaves and burning them you can destroy millions of the spores in a short time.

A. F. J. B.

COMPRESSED AIR SPRAYER.

I am a beginner at greenhouse work and would like to know what would be the best kind of sprayer to get for general use among carnations and chrysanthemums, with special reference to keeping down thrips and aphids. I note in the REVIEW of August 15 that Mr. Baur recommends a compressed air sprayer for thrips, but does not mention any particular style. Would a small force pump with a fine nozzle be satisfactory?

H. P.

There are a number of compressed air sprayers on the market, all of which I understand are good. The principle upon which they operate is much the same, which is to partly fill a tank with spraying liquid and then pump into it enough air to cause enough pressure to force the liquid out through the spraying nozzle. We use the Simplicity style of sprayer and like it very much. I like these better than the force-pump sprayer, because after pumping them up you are free to devote all your attention to the spraying. Before we bought this sprayer we used an ordinary brass syringe with good effect, but we find this sprayer a great saver, not only of time, but also of spraying material. With a steady spray you walk right along and do not go over a large part of the space a second time, as one is likely to do when attention is drawn away every few seconds. The sprayer soon pays for itself.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.Carnations Registered.

H. A. Jahn, New Bedford, Mass., registers Carnation Lloyd, white, flowers three and one-half to four inches; free and continuous bloomer; habit the very best; seedling of 1902; parents two pedigreed seedlings dating back to Scott and Hinze's White.

The annual premium list of this society will soon be issued and any one having special premiums to offer is requested to send full particulars for the same to Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

FORCING WHITE LILACS.

I have some white lilacs in the garden which were forced under glass in the spring of 1905. Can they be forced again with good results this season? Please give directions how to do it.

MORRIS.

Lilacs, like some other shrubs of a like nature, can be reforced after two seasons' rest. Our experience has been, however, that pot-grown plants will give better results. Lift and pot the lilacs at once. Keep outdoors until frost has removed the leaves, then store in a cool pit, shed or cellar until you want to force them. I would not advise starting before January 1. A warm, moist house and frequent sprayings overhead are needed and the plants should be removed into a cooler house as the flowers expand.

C. W.

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Lorraine Begonias.

Now is the time that popular winter bloomer, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, is growing rapidly. The plants should double in size this month, if well looked after. They now need a warm house; one with a rather moist atmosphere and little shade suits them well. Keep the shoots pinched and stake out the plants with thin sticks. Leave them a little longer than the shoots, so that you can give them an additional tie later.

If any Lorraines are not yet in their flowering pots or pans, lose no time in shifting them. Use plenty of flaky leaf-mold, well rotted manure and sand in preference to a heavier compost. Pick off any flowers appearing. You do not want any of these much before Christmas. Do not try to grow Lorraines in a cold house. They will endure 50 degrees at night while blooming and be of improved quality, but 10 degrees higher is needed for a while.

Poinsettias.

Late propagated cuttings of poinsettias which are in small pots can still be made up into pans, in which they always sell much better than in pots. Some growers plant a few small perisor nephrolepis ferns in the pans. They make the pans much more attractive, and also assist in covering the lower part of the stems, which a little careless watering will quickly defoliate.

Poinsettias should now be in a house kept not below 55 degrees at night. With careful watering they will stand 5 degrees lower and hold their foliage well. This cannot be done if the man in charge persists in giving each plant a regular morning allowance of water, no matter whether it be wet or dry. With foliage of a dark green color down to the pots, poinsettias are very attractive; far too often we see long, naked stems.

The plants are now growing rapidly. Stake them wherever necessary and, if any are well rooted in the pots or pans, give them weak manure water or a top-dressing of some such chemical as Clay's Fertilizer.

Azaleas.

The Belgian-grown azaleas will soon be arriving in quantity and where many are grown this will entail a good deal of labor in potting. Quite a few of the balls may have become very dry in transit. It will be unsafe to pot them in this condition. Soak in water for a couple of minutes first. Pot the plants in as small pots as they can be conveniently squeezed into. It may be necessary to pare off a little of the ball to accomplish this. For compost use a mixture of loam, leaf-mold and sharp sand, but not any manure. Drain the pots well and pack the soil firmly around the pots, using a flat-pointed, wooden rammer for the purpose. Allow a good margin for watering on. The plants should be stood after potting in a cold house, shed or cellar, one from which, however, frost can be excluded.

If you are busy with other pressing work, the azaleas will not suffer any harm for a few days if stood on the floor where it is cool and moist.

Freesias.

A late batch of freesias should now be potted or placed in flats. They will not be long in appearing above ground. Room in the greenhouses will be at a premium until the pressure of chrysanthemums wanes, but the freesias will be all right in a coldframe for some weeks. Mats may be needed for protection by the middle of the month.

The earliest batch, wanted for Christmas or New Year's trade, which ought to be on a bench in a light, sunny house kept at 50 degrees to 55 degrees at night, will need some staking if you want straight flower-stalks. The plants will now have their receptacles well matted with roots and a weak dose of liquid manure once a week will be found helpful.

Use care in fumigating where freesias are grown. They will not stand strong doses. The leaves will burn at the tips and this much decreases the value of the flowers. Be especially careful prising to note how the uses of cattleyas are being extended. Many retail store florists who turned up their noses at orchids a decade ago, find them a necessity now. Cattleya labiata is not a difficult species to grow and flower. Just now, as the buds are pushing through the sheaths and the blooms are in some cases expanding, use care in watering. The plants are better kept moderately dry at the root while the flowers are open. A dry atmosphere will also assist in keeping the blooms fresh. For store trade nothing will so quickly attract the eyes of passers-by as a basket or two of orchids. Even if you do not sell the plants, they will prove a good advertisement.

Cyclamens.

How are your little seedling cyclamens, sown in late summer, coming along? They should all have appeared before this and some will be making their second leaf. If you sowed them rather thinly in flats, as recommended some time ago, they will not need disturbing yet awhile. Do not allow the surface soil to become green and slimy. Stir it up with a pointed stick. Give the little plants a light bench or a house kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night.

Plants for winter and early spring blooming will all have received their final potting before now. If you have housed them, keep them cool and airy, not over 50 degrees at night, and 5 degrees lower will be better. If your frames are well built and you can protect with mats, you can keep your cyclamens in them for a month yet. Do not neglect an occasional fumigation. Thrips will quickly disfigure them. As the sunlight decreases a reduced water supply will be needed.

you will lose many of them. Early varieties again are proving the most profitable sorts to grow. Take note of valuable early kinds you have not yet got.

Give Euphorbia jacquiniæflora (fulgens) a warm house. This makes a capital Christmas seller in pots and the sprays always take well.

Mignonette must be grown cool. Use as little fire heat as possible and you will have stronger stalks. Attend to dis-budding and give supports before the stems become twisted.

Ardisia crenulata should have a light, cool house. Its berries and foliage are both attractive and well grown plants are always easy to sell.

Do not be in a hurry about lifting roots of cannas, dahlias and gladioli. Cut the two former down to within a few inches of the ground after frost comes.

Do not trouble to save old plants of Salvia splendens for stock. You can get better plants from spring-sown seed.

Continue to divide and replant hardy herbaceous perennials on all favorable occasions.

Make a sowing of a good strain of stock for bench culture. Sow in flats and pot off singly.

Do not allow the hydrangeas to feel too severe a frost; 2 or 3 degrees below freezing will not injure them, but 10 degrees may destroy all hopes of flower for another season.

Be sure to fumigate all the houses regularly now. Never mind if you can not see the pests. Prevention is better than cure.

Last week the types made the assertion that seventy-five to 100 tulips could be started in a flat 12x14 inches, when it should have been 12x24 inches. Don't plant too thickly.

THE JACOBS ESTABLISHMENT.

Since S. Jacobs & Sons moved into their new factory at 1365 to 1379 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., their business has shown the increase which seldom fails to follow improvement in facilities. There is a stimulus in greater room and wider possibilities that is almost always felt in the selling department, even before the work turned out from a modernized plant has a chance to speak for itself. In the case of Jacobs & Sons the increase in business has been so great that already an addition to the plant is being planned. They have fifty men employed. This enterprise began in 1871, thirty-six years ago. The new factory has 50,000 square feet of floor space. There are two 150 horsepower boilers and an engine capable of 400 horse-power. The first floor is the mill department, where all the lumber is planed and prepared for its various uses. Modern machinery has been installed. The second floor is the sash department, and it is crowded to the doors. Everything is ordered, and the firm is already oversold. In the glass storage room are 5,000 boxes of large greenhouse glass and 5,000 boxes of hotbed glass. The lumber yard, filled with air-dried cypress, covers nearly an acre. The putty department is an interesting one, for 150 tons of putty are manufactured and shipped yearly. The machinery is never idle. No mineral oils are used, or anything causing artificial weight. Four brothers constitute the firm, every one an expert in his special department.

if you are using tobacco stems. An experience has been that the use of these damaged the foliage far more than a fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas.

Cattleya Labiata.

Labiata, the most useful of all fall-blooming cattleyas, is now coming in season. It is always welcome, arriving, as it does, at a time when flowers are none too abundant. It is really sur-

Use the watering pot instead of the hose now and the plants will benefit from the change.

Brief Reminders.

It will hardly pay you to run any houses now without a little crack of fire heat at times. This is especially true in dull and damp weather.

Some shading will be needed over the chrysanthemums as the flowers open, or

MIDDLEMAN AND SALESMAN.

[A paper by Wm. E. McKissick, of Philadelphia, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, October 1, 1907.]

This paper, gentlemen, is not written with an antagonistic spirit, for we wholesalers are far from hunting trouble. A full share is already portioned out for us, and we are pretty sure to get it without looking for it. But it is written with a hope that it may in a measure bring the middleman and the storekeeper, or the buyer, into closer touch with each other, and with the idea that it will help each to more fully realize and appreciate what one is doing for the other.

Some Bygone Salesmen.

Some of you will probably remember how, twelve or fifteen years ago, the few wholesale houses which were in existence at that time employed men and boys at from $8 to $12 per week and called them salesmen. Their business was to sign for express packages, check up the contents, wait on a customer or answer the telephone—which was first installed about this time in one of our houses. In other words, these men were a sort of jack of all trades and master of none. As a rule their employer was a frank, open-hearted, honest sort of man himself, and one who felt that his employees were equally so whether he was on deck or not, and he never thought it necessary to see whether these so-called salesmen were handing out $1 worth for $1, or $10 worth. He simply took their word for it, and when the end of the week came he possibly sat down and figured for hours and hours in his efforts to locate the sale of certain material which he was positive he had received from his growers and for which he found no bill of sale. Finally, after all his efforts had been exhausted, he would go down in his pocket to pay for the goods and take chances of finding the leak later. Another week would go around, with possibly the same experience and the leak still unfound.

Mysterious Disappearance of Stock.

Now, in other markets, I am told, it is customary for the buyer, in order to secure a bargain, to pass slyly to the so-called salesman a piece of money, possibly 50 cents or $1, and if he did not resort to this method he would probably have to pay an exorbitant price, or, to use a common phrase, be burned. The word "burned" needs no explanation; we all know too well the meaning of it. Now, while conditions were in days past nearly as bad on this market, it never came down, to my knowledge, to the deliberate handing out of cold money. To be sure, there were times when material disappeared mysteriously from the wholesale houses. After accepting a cigar or a dinner on the quiet, or after visiting some neighboring grog shop at the invitation of some of the buyers who were not burdened with an oversupply of principle, the so-called salesman did the work, and should these buyers have suddenly gotten religion, and on the impulse of the moment revealed what they knew to the proprietor, he would probably have had a solution to the leak in his sales.

Another bad feature of the business at that time was the overgenerous spirit of the wholesaler in allowing his employees and others what was known as a donation. When Saturday night came it was not considered out of place by the employer to allow an employee a portion of the flowers left over as a donation. But this privilege became sadly abused, so much so that flowers at times took wings, and the privilege had to be stopped.

Selling From Wagons.

Another ancient idea was the sale of flowers from the wholesale houses by wagon. This custom you are all familiar with, and while at one time a success, of late years, since we have had the telephone and understand more thoroughly what could be accomplished by it, the wagon has almost entirely been abandoned. If it were not for the fact that one of our wholesalers, whom I have the honor to regard as a good neighbor and a close friend, still persists in using his wagon, I would be inclined to say about such a man, as our friend Mr. Meehan said about the grower who still carries his own stock, that "he was ten years behind the times."

But today, gentlemen, things are different. The wholesaler, profiting by his past experience and that of others, and awakening to the call which competition has made, is running his business direct from the shoulder and on the most up-to-date principles and methods. The day of the donation is past; he has discovered that the flowers in his possession are not his own but the property of some grower. If his employees want them they are welcome to them at the lowest market price; but they must be paid for. The day of the would-be salesman is done, and in his place we have those who have stood the test and have proven themselves to be capable salesmen without a question of doubt. The wholesaler of today employs the most fully experienced men he can get, systematizes his business, puts the men in their respective places according to their knowledge and ability as salesmen, packers, graders and delivery clerks, paid them their price, and demands results. He has an eagle eye on the goods coming in—where they come from, how they are handled and graded, how sold and at what price, how packed and delivered—thus keeping in touch with the stock he is handling from the time it reaches his place of business until it is handed over to the storekeeper and the bill is O. K.'d, or is delivered to the express company for shipment.

The Modern Salesman.

The salesmen in our wholesale houses today are a class of experienced and energetic young men of whom our storekeepers should feel proud. As compared with the salesman of fifteen years ago, these are real salesmen and real men, who are fully capable of selling material at its market value and who do not have to stoop to the low standard of giving the buyer more than a dollar's worth for a dollar, with the idea of securing his business and making a large book or appearing to be more than he is to his employer as a salesman.

Philadelphia's middlemen, I am glad to say, are all progressive and have made wonderful strides along the lines of advancement, credit for which has been handed out to them in various forms. One will say, "He's a wise, shrewd business fellow." Another will say, "Mr. Blank, his former employer, taught him all he ever knew." And still another will say, "His financial backing is his whole success, and without that he would be lost." But, gentlemen, let me put you right; all of these things are in a measure responsible. A man must have a good, level head to manage his business successfully, but a great percentage of his success is due to the ability and untiring efforts of the men who plug away from morning until night to sell the stock, and who after hours will give him valuable suggestions to aid him in the daily routine of his business; this man is the salesman. Now, where do we get these good salesmen of whom we are boasting? Were they born salesmen or made salesmen? Allow me to answer this by saying that in my judgment it is ability and experience on their part, combined with keeping in close touch with their employer, which has made many of these men what they now are; but I hope they will not take my remarks as flattery, for they are simply intended to give them the encouragement which they deserve and which has long been coming to them.

We have few college-bred men in our profession, but we have men of character and ability, who are slowly but surely pushing to the front. Why not a course in scientific salesmanship for some of Telephone Service and Its Cost.

Possibly two-thirds of our local business is at the present time done over the telephone. Each wholesaler has his trade divided, and a careful man appointed to look after the requirements of every customer. The stores are only beginning to appreciate what these men do for them in the way of keeping them in touch with the market conditions, and especially in the way of prices and new material, which some of the out-of-the-way stores would not know about for possibly a week if it were not for the telephone. As it is, they can now find the exact conditions in a few minutes.

But does our friend the storekeeper realize the great expense item that the telephone is to us? The total cost to the wholesalers combined for local telephone service is probably from $5,000 to $8,000 annually, and while we cannot do without such service, I assure you the cost is a problem which gives the middleman some occasion at times to phone service and the information which it brings. But there are still a few stores where the management is so poor that they allow their employees to treat a call from a wholesale house as a joke, and believe the salesmen have nothing else to do but to make telephone calls to pass away the time. Sometimes the employees of such stores, when answering the telephone, are not courteous enough to inquire the purpose of the call, but as soon as they learn that a call is from a wholesale house simply say, "Nothing doing," and hang up the receiver. This is one abuse of the service which needs attention. We can make allowance in some instances, where the storekeeper may be busy with a customer, or again where he may have a good supply of stock on hand and no prospects of business, but salesmen are human beings, and a little courtesy extended to them, though it costs nothing, may work wonders for the storekeepers at some future time, when certain material may be scarce and the proprietor badly in need of it. Mr. Storekeeper, try my prescription, and instruct your employees accordingly, and if it fails to cure we will refund your money with pleasure.

Prompt Delivery Service.

Just a word now in regard to delivery service. Our city today is doing for the retail trade what no other city does, as far as I know—giving them prompt delivery service at any hour of the day from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m., and during the holiday season, I may add, at any time during the day or night. This is all free to the storekeeper, but not to the wholesaler. To give the proper service the larger houses are compelled to employ for their delivery at least from five to ten boys, at a cost of anywhere from $4 to $5 per week. Total this up, add the amount it costs weekly for car tickets, etc., and you will find it runs into money.

The prompt delivery service which we are giving today has been brought about by competition. Often our larger stores will divide a very large order between two or more wholesale houses, ask for immediate delivery, and then watch carefully to see which house has their order delivered first. This is an important item to the buyer, who makes a note of the best service given him and in return places the next important order which he may happen to have, with the man who gives him the attention and on whom he can depend.

Excessive Competition.

I have endeavored to show you what this service means to our most up-to-date storekeepers, and to make it plain to you that they fully appreciate our efforts, but in some ways the competition has been overdone in the way of delivery. We have been at times so ambitious to please the trade that we have delivered at a loss very small bills of goods, possibly 75 cents' worth, or, to make it round figures, $1, the commission on which will amount to a paltry 15 cents. The goods are placed in a box probably worth 5 cents and the carfare to the customer may run anywhere from 8 cents to 15 cents. Figure this up yourselves, gentlemen. This is what some of our less thoughtful storekeepers expect and insist that we do, but I tell you that the wholesaler is beginning to realize that this is making money backwards, and one of our houses has boldly come out recently and told its customers, in a

these young men, that it may develop them and fit them for the positions which will surely be to offer if the wholesale florists' business continues to advance with the same speed it has done?

put on his thinking cap. With this amount of money expended we expect results, and in most instances we get them, as I am glad to say that the majority of our stores appreciate the telepolite way, that while it wants their business, and is willing to give them the service, it cannot afford to and will not deliver a bill of goods under $2 to any point where it is necessary to pay carfare, unless the carfare is added to the price of the goods. This, in my judgment, is a step in the right direction, and while I believe in every man running his own business, I do not think he would make a mistake in following this example. Every sound-minded storekeeper is well aware of the fact that the existing competition in our business is bringing not only this service but dollars and cents to his door every day, and it would be suicide for him to discourage us in our efforts. Is not 10 or 15 cents' worth of carfare a small matter to you, Mr. Storekeeper, if you want an accommodation and want it quickly?

To make a long story short, allow me to say that the wholesalers have to be and are a hustling class of men, who are willing to work night and day for results, and who have been doing it for a number of years. Today they are commencing to see light ahead; the grower and storekeeper alike are slowly grasping the fact that the wholesaler is a better man than they had given him credit for. They have had a look at his brighter and better side and are profiting in more ways than one by his efforts. The sun is rising for him; I will not say in the east, but just as surely as the sun must rise somewhere, so surely will the middleman continue to advance.

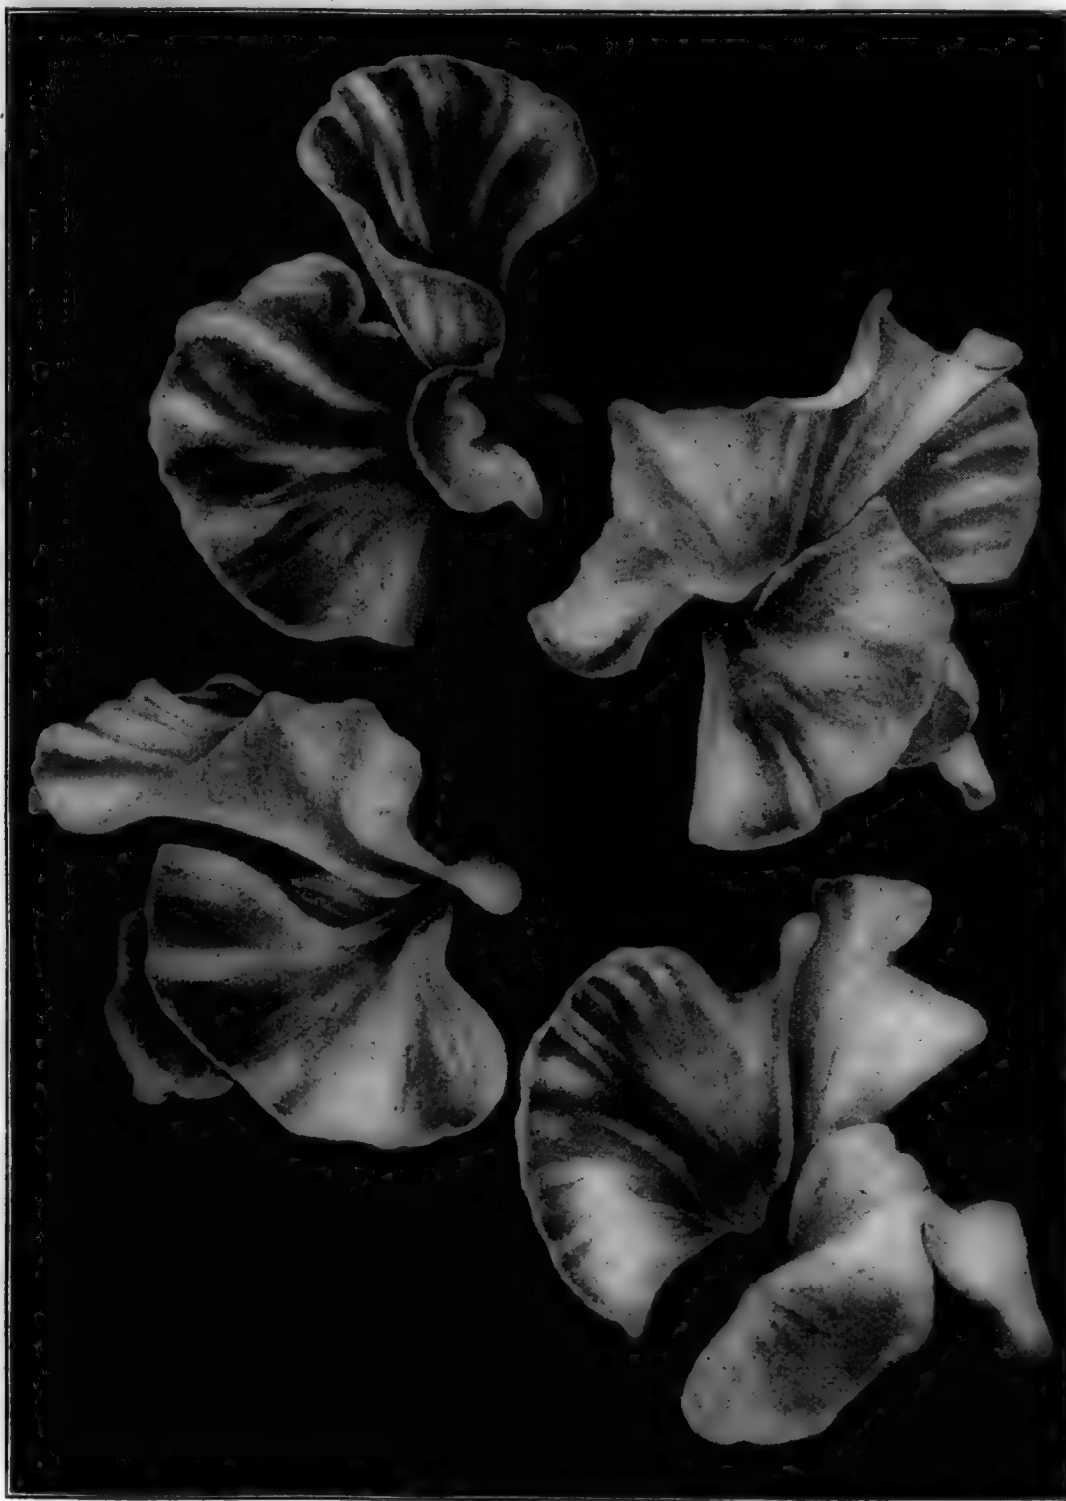

Our business is in its infancy, and while it is so, why not bring it up in the way it should go? We can never form a Philadelphia florists' protective association, after our experience of one year ago, but we can show our fellow business men, both wholesale and retail, that we are willing and ready to meet them halfway on any proposition that will be for the mutual good and advancement of our profession, or that will in any way make this rough road, which the florist must travel, more smooth.

THE SPENCER SWEET PEAS.

It is quite certain that no sweet pea ever created more interest than has resulted from the introduction of Countess Spencer, for not only was the variety of itself a marked advance, but it seems to have been imbued with a sportive character all its own, and we now have Spencers of many colors, the one trouble being that several European firms have sent out practically identical Spencer sports under different names, so that some confusion has resulted.

Two Spencer sports of special interest originated with L. C. Routzahn, of Arroyo Grande, Cal., and are now being exploited by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, in their own proficient way, prior to distribution to the trade. One is a pure white and is called Burpee's White Spencer. It is unquestionably a magnificent variety, white seeded and true to the type. The large, waved flowers are borne three and four to the stem and are uniformly well placed. The other variety is Burpee's Primrose Spencer, as good in all respects and equal in depth and richness of color to The Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon, which, of course, it outranks in form and size.

Lester L. Morse gives these two varieties a splendid sendoff, the white especially, which he says excels all other whites. Mr. Burpee himself says: "From examination of Etta Dyke and Purity as grown in England the past summer we should not be surprised if these and Burpee's White Spencer (all of similar origin) would prove to be identical. This remains to be proven when they can be thoroughly tested side by side in 1908." In this connection the following, written by a London seedsman for the Horticultural Advertiser, will be of interest:

"There are some good Spencer breaks in the States, for I have before me as I write blooms of deep mauve, light mauve, lavender, white, magenta, and cream Spencers grown from seed sent me by a well-known American. I have seen similar things in home gardens, but certainly not finer types.

"I have seen a good many white breaks from Countess Spencer, but certainly none to surpass this American selection, which will probably be sent out this coming season. To all intents and purposes it is synonymous with Breadmore's Etta Dyke, which will appear shortly. At Reading, Breadmore's stock was quite fixed, but the flowers were very impure, being greenish, and not comparable with the blooms I have now before me. These open with a greenish edge, which very soon fades, leaving the flowers quite dead white.

"This White Spencer seems to take more time to develop than most sorts, but when cut with two flowers open, and finished in water, it is glorious. Much as I love Dorothy Eckford, this true White Spencer is assuredly delightful. It is more waved than any other Spencer, large, and although not so leathery as D. Eckford, it is still very good.

"I have no hesitation in saying that the White Spencer, or, as it is to be known on this side, Etta Dyke, is going to be one of, if not the, leading varieties for 1908. It has created much excitement wherever I have shown it, and a friend in Victoria, B. C., tells me that his White Spencers fairly made people gape. However, one need go carefully when buying stock, as there are many different lots about.

"It is curious that while a number of growers may get a break, all apparently the same, yet when comparisons are made, one may prove to be brighter, larger, or more vigorous. It is so with John Ingman. There were many who found a rosy carmine among their Countess Spencers, but they were not all the same although the color was practically so."

I CONSIDER the REVIEW the most practical paper printed.—E. TRETHEWAY, New Haven, Conn.

THE WEEKLY

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01.

Officers for 1907: President, William J. Stewart, Boston; vice-president, John Westcott, Philadelphia; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

It is not always economy to employ the fireman who will work for lowest wages.

A BOSTON florist has for a motto under the monogram on his stationery, "Nothing succeeds like success."

E. E. STEWART, Rives Junction, Mich., sends the REVIEW a box of gladioli which arrived in fine condition, October 9.

It is worth while keeping an eye on the pages of European advertising in the REVIEW. There are many offers there that will mean money to you to know about.

THE paper on "The Growing of Vegetables," by W. W. Rawson, Boston, which appear on page 26 of this issue, is of interest to other than forcers of vegetables. It contains many points of value to every man in the trade.

WHEN the REVIEW delivered to its engraver the set of photographs of the work of Charles Henry Fox, the first of which appears in this issue, the engraver, necessarily a man of artistic perception, remarked: "Well, there certainly are in this world some men of excellent taste."

H. B. May & Sons, of Edmonton, near London, England, who have long been famous as fern raisers and growers, have purchased the stock and good will of W. & J. Birkenhead, Sale, Manchester, who are among the most widely known British fern specialists, having a considerable business in America.

THE strongest opposition to a parcels post comes, not from the express companies, but from the country merchants, who see in it a means for their certain extinguishment by the mail-order concerns in the cities. On the whole, is not the prosperity of the country merchants of greater importance to the people at large than is the success of a few big mail-order houses?

A RETAIL florist should have stationery in the best of taste; it often is regarded as an index to one's capabilities in the matter of executing orders.

THE police authorities in the city of Washington have ordered all bay trees and other plants removed from the sidewalks, where they stood in front of many flower stores, hotels, etc.

It is interesting to note that at the Congress of Horticulture at the Jamestown exposition both F. R. Pierson and W. W. Rawson advocated the building of large greenhouses, rather than covering the same area with smaller structures. One is a leading cut flower grower and the other an authority on vegetables under glass.

WILLIAM KUYK, of Hillegom, Holland, who is the owner of the new type of carnation originating with the French grower, Alfred Giraud, reports that the first variety of the set of five, deep pink in color, has been named Rose Giraud and exhibited before the Societe Nationale d'Horticulture of France, where it was given the highest award, as he says, La Prime de premiere Classe.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Leon Duval.

Word comes from Paris, France, of the death of Leon Duval, widely known as a nurseryman at Versailles. He was 63 years of age and has devoted much painstaking attention to chrysanthemums, orchids and anthuriums.

John E. Olsen.

John E. Olsen, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, died September 27, after an illness of only five days with appendicitis. He had been with the Illinois Seed Co. for many years and had many friends in the seed trade and on the Chicago Board of Trade. George S. Green, president of the Illinois Seed Co., and of the American Seed Trade Association, pays Mr. Olsen a high tribute when he says his demise brings a sad loss to the trade and to the firm, while individually he feels a deep sense of personal bereavement. Mr. Olsen leaves a widow and a son 4 years of age.

E. E. Petersen.

E. E. Petersen, of Denver, who was well known in the trade, died September 28 at Los Angeles, Cal., where Mr. Petersen and his wife had been for four months in hopes of benefiting his health, which had been steadily failing for some time. He leaves a widow and three children.

Andrew D. Pryal.

Andrew D. Pryal, a well-known horticulturist and a resident of Alameda county, California, for over forty years, died at his residence at Claremont, Cal., September 28, and was buried in Oakland, Cal., three days later. Mr. Pryal was probably the oldest nurseryman on the Pacific coast, and although he had not for many years been actively engaged in business, he kept in close touch with horticultural matters and for several years had acted as inspector of fruit pests for Alameda county. He was much interested in the growing and hybridizing of vegetables and bulbs and he had considerable success with potatoes, gladioli and berries. Mr. Pryal is survived by a family of grown-up sons and daughters.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS!

All Colors—All Sizes

Our stock is extra fine and our supply is large—grown by chrysanthemum specialists. You can wire us your orders and be sure of getting the grade you want. We are prepared to handle large orders as satisfactorily as small ones.

CARNATIONS

We do not remember a year in which the carnations were so good at this early date. We have fine Enchantress, Victory, Aristocrat, Patten, etc. Keeping quality is excellent.

BEAUTIES

Quality not to be beaten and our supply is large. All lengths of stem.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There is considerable difference in the reports as to the state of business this week, some houses saying that the demand is still excellent and ahead of what it usually is at this period, while others say that the big rush which began September 28 lasted only a few days and that this week finds the market decidedly slow. The difference appears to be in proportion to the supplies available in the different wholesale houses. Those which have large cuts of good stuff are doing a fine business this week, and those which have only odds and ends and whose regular winter stock has not yet come in, are feeling the absence of demand. Brown-edged dahlias are not salable and the fag end of the aster and gladiolus crops is little more in request.

There continues to be an excellent demand for Beauties, although prices have eased off a little since a week ago, especially on the longest. Medium lengths are not equal to the demand, which is strong for this grade. In fact, all good roses are selling well, but at somewhat weaker prices. While the extra select grade is still bringing the top quotations, the grading is a little closer than it was when the market was stiffer. The quality of the roses is improving rapidly.

The supplies of carnations are this week considerably greater than a week ago, for the several days of warm weather brought out the flowers rapidly. Some growers have not yet begun to cut, but the production is larger than it was in the first half of October last year and the quality of stock generally better. Some dirty whites are seen, but most of the stock is really fine and the stems are of satisfactory length. Enchantress leaves little to be asked for and White Perfection is in splendid shape. Prices on the best grade hold up well, and it looks as though there would be a good market unless the weather is too warm and takes the shipping quality out of the stock.

Chrysanthemums have come on at a rapid rate this week and supplies are now equal to all demands. Prices have weakened perhaps 25 per cent as a result of increased supplies. From reports it appears that there are more mums being grown for this market this year than in any recent season. Wholesalers who have visited among the growers say the stock all is in fine shape and that they look for an inundation of chrysanthemums in the next couple of weeks. This naturally will have the effect of weakening prices in other lines.

The receipts of Hudson river violets have increased and the quality improved since last report. The flowers now received are as good as one could expect before settled cold weather arrives. There is no active demand for them and prices hardly seem to warrant such heavy early shipments.

Lilies have become one of the scarce items and are in good demand. There is quite a call for valley, as the autumn wedding season is on.

The store-opening decorations, which made so good a demand for greens last week, have ended, but there is still a good market for wild smilax. The indoor article seems rather overabundant. The call for plumosus in bunches regularly exceeds the supply.

First Provide a Supply.

It seems to be generally understood that the Chicago market is certain to be well supplied with stock this season. There has been no great increase in the amount of glass, but inspection shows that everywhere conditions are excellent and good production assured. One or two growers seem inclined to take alarm, but they should bear in mind that the assurance of supplies is also an assurance of large demand. It has been proven over and over again that when buyers know their orders will be filled they send them liberally, but when there is a doubt as to the supply they often refrain from ordering stock they well could use. A steady and adequate supply is the basis for building a big business.

Various Notes.

The employees of the wholesale florists will give their second annual ball at Columbia hall, on North Clark street, on Wednesday evening, October 30, and have laid plans for an event which shall eclipse in all respects the successful affair held a year ago. The committee in charge consists of Charles Erne, John Enders and Herman Rodgers. They speak of the decorations as being a special feature of the affair.

Bassett & Washburn say that if the retail business is as good everywhere as it is in the wealthy suburbs along the Burlington, the retailers should have no cause for complaint. In the towns of Hinsdale, Downers Grove, Riverside and La Grange there are a large number of well-to-do people, and there is no florist in any of these towns catering specially to the local demand, a large part of which comes unsolicited to Bassett & Washburn at Hinsdale. C. L. Washburn says September was away ahead of all previous records with them.

F. Stielow, at Niles Center, has been in the growing business there since 1874. He says that in his early days he came to town with a pasteboard box containing stock for which he frequently secured $50, while now to get $50 one must send in a whole express-wagon load. In the early days he brought in his stock personally and peddled it among the retailers, who were forced to buy when the growers presented themselves in the morning, as there would be no further opportunity to secure stock that day.

A. L. Randall resumed active work in the store October 7. His annual period of rest on his fruit farm in Michigan gives him renewed vitality for the strenuous winter season indoors.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, says that they are surprised at the demand for fertilizers thus early in the season, especially for pulverized sheep manure. The factory also is behind in orders for To-bak-ine.

Percy Jones says that the receipts of stock in the Flower Growers' market on Monday, October 7, were at least sixty per cent greater than the receipts September 30, and that quality showed considerable improvement.

Autumn foliage is one of the specialties with the E. F. Winterson Co., which reports the well-colored bunches in good demand. Wholesale bulb business is brisk. The counter trade in bulbs is only just starting.

Vaughan & Sperry report that the principal demand at the present seems to be for chrysanthemums. The retailers do not yet want any considerable quantity of violets, especially since they know they can replenish their supply at any hour of the day. The quality of the violets is much improved by the cooler weather.

John Zech is far from being well.

He was able to be at the store for a few minutes October 7, but is too weak to attend to business. Zech & Mann had a big order October 7 for a wedding. A large quantity of green stuff was called for and 750 valley, which was supplied by a grower at Milwaukee.

C. W. McKellar calls attention to "The Orchid," now playing at the Garrick, as an evidence of the increasing popularity of that flower.

Weiland & Risch say that the New York violets are decidedly better than they were at this season last year and that the supply is much larger.

Leonard Kill and a party of his friends gave a supper October 7 to Mordecai Brown, the star pitcher for the Cubs, during which they presented that gentleman with a diamond scarf pin of Mr. Kill's designing. Peter Reinberg, John Kruchten and A. C. Spencer were among those present.

Sam Pearce has been drawn for the October grand jury, which is scheduled to investigate gambling.

John Sinner is now at the sales department in the Growers' market two or three days each week, but will put in the balance of the time in the greenhouses until the carnation crop comes on.

Ernest Weber has his place all in Brides and Maids this year, except two houses of chrysanthemums, which will be followed by sweet peas and lilies. He says his prospects are good, his first cut just being on.

C. H. Fisk says he expects to buy the business and take over H. F. Halle's lease on the West Madison street property about October 15 and will in the future make his headquarters there. Mr. Halle will in that event give his whole attention to his new north side store.

E. C. Amling says that the local chrysanthemums are about a week earlier than last year, he having begun to receive large local supplies the middle of last week.

In the sales department at J. A. Budlong's they keep a record of every rose cut on the place. It is possible to look back for three years and see what has been the production of each variety and the total sales. The record also is of value as showing the periods of each year when prices have been high or low or cuts on or off. There is a similarity of the records each year in these respects which makes the information especially valuable.

John Reardon says that the chrysanthemum pot plants at the November show will be larger and better than any the local growers ever have exhibited. They were inspired by the wonderful plant Arthur Herrington, exhibited last year.

In framing the premium list the Horticultural Society provided for such plants by permitting in certain classes the carrying up of as many growths as desired. Heretofore an inch of single stem above the soil has been required on all plants.

George Frobey entered the firm of C. Frauenfelder in August, 1906, when it became Frauenfelder & Co., and he is now doing the buying on the market. He is Mr. Frauenfelder's father-in-law and often is mistaken for Billy Mason.

George Reinberg is preparing to build a large house to be devoted to his orchids, which now occupy two smaller houses. He will have a considerable output of green goods this year.

Wieter Bros. say the chrysanthemums are coming on very fast as a result of the good growing weather of the last week.

Kennicott Bros. Co., so E. E. Pieser says, find October starting a great deal better than last year.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. reports that up to September 1 it had taken in to within a few dollars as much on Beauties as it did all season last year, with the same space in Richmonds.

Frank Felke, at Wilmette, has his entire place in vegetables this season, being ready this week to market his first crop of lettuce.

Hugo Luedtke, at Maywood, says Aristocrat is in splendid shape, but does not give promise of giving many cuttings. He had the first 500 cuttings sent out of this variety.

The Florists' Club meets tonight and will have as guests several visitors from Lake Forest and Lake Geneva.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is considering renaming its new rose, thus far called Morton Grove, in the interest of the flower show, the management wishing to have a new rose named after a local society lady for advertising purposes. This is a pink sport of Chatenay and a fine thing.

S. B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, was in town this week. The executive committee of the Horticultural Society had a meeting at the Auditorium Annex Tuesday evening and had several retailers in for supper. The pledges of support were reassuring. James Burdett, press agent, thinks everything especially favorable for a big show and a large attendance this year.

The orchids at Lincoln park are in fine flower and attract much attention.

F. W. Timme and family have returned from their ten weeks' trip to Europe. Mr. Timme reports a most enjoyable vacation and looks the picture of good health.

John Van Bochove and Gerry Van Bochove, of Kalamazoo, Mich., were visitors this week. They report excellent prospects for a big season in their territory.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

At the Illinois State Fair at Springfield, October 1 to 3, considerable effort was made to enlarge the professional flower show feature. The display of plants was very good and in nearly all cases well worthy of the prizes, especially so in nephrolepis ferns, but the display of cut roses and carnations in the professional classes was, with a few exceptions, very poor. H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, came in with a fine lot of roses and carnations, most of which came too late to be judged. In roses, especially, he would have swept the board. The few of his exhibits that were up in time all took first prize. The Thompson Carnation Co. and Chicago Carnation Co. showed some fine stock in carnations. In miscellaneous cut flowers competition was more keen, but mostly confined to local growers. In artistic designs the displays were very good, with a few exceptions.

It is to be regretted that some growers and retailers that stand among the leaders in our profession will exhibit stock and design work that is wholly unworthy of any premium at all. This was done at this show in a good many instances. Another thing that is much to be regretted is that the leading cut flower growers of our state, especially in and about Chicago, do not avail themselves of the premiums offered at this show. Their attention was called to this opportunity just previous to the fair, and they failed utterly to respond. Hence the work done by members of the State Florists' Association, with the assistance of Hon. Robt. O'Dwyer, to get the increased appropriation from the board of agriculture for premiums in this department, has to a great extent gone amiss, and most of the time put in by these men has been a sacrifice. Therefore there is not much encouragement to keep it up.

ORANGE, N. J.

Dahlia night was observed by the New Jersey Floricultural Society on the evening of October 4. Besides a large display of dahlias by private gardeners and amateur growers, there were many trade displays. J. C. Williams, of Montclair, exhibited fourteen varieties of dahlias, and also peaches and grapes. Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, exhibited orchids, including Cypripedium Fairieanum, the celebrated lost orchid rediscovered in Thibet by Col. Younghusband. Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, showed several rare orchids. Joseph A. Manda, of West Orange, exhibited orchids, including a number of his own seedlings. Thomas Jones, of Short Hills, brought a vase of dahlias. J. B. D.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A most unsatisfactory week, at least among the wholesalers, has passed since last report. The early part of the week there seemed to be a big demand for stock and nothing with which to fill orders, but the last two days stock arrived in great quantities, especially dahlias and chrysanthemums. There were not enough orders to take the stock. The present week opened with beautiful, bright days and chrysanthemums are coming in quantities.

The retailers were not much better off than the wholesalers last week. They were out of humor because they could not get stock to fill orders and what they did get was not always satisfactory.

These conditions will, no doubt, change now, as the quantities of mums coming will lighten the demand for other stock, which is also becoming more plentiful every day.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met October 1, with thirty members present. The subjects for discussion were ferns, dahlias and bulbs.

O. McClintock & Co. have signed a ten-year lease for the entire building at 545 Liberty street, where J. B. Murdoch & Co. have their salesrooms, forcing that firm to vacate November 1. However, Murdoch & Co. have succeeded in getting a most desirable building at 714 Penn avenue, which is considered one of the best locations in the city. The firm will occupy the entire building as soon as improvements are completed.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business last week was excellent. Entertainments extended President Roosevelt and the visiting governors, with the carnival, kept most of the trade busy. Quite a few wedding decorations also were furnished.

Chrysanthemums are now coming in freely, Willowbrook and Opah, in white, and Monrovia, in yellow. Prices rule high on these, as they always do when they first come in, but by the end of the present week prices will no doubt come down. Roses in all varieties and grades are coming in more freely, with prices the same as last week, but a slump is expected soon. Carnations are cleaning up almost every day, with some extra good blooms coming in, but the bulk of them are still short in stem. Violets are slow in sale, as they are too small and pale to command a fair price. Cosmos is fine and sells well. We had a little frost last week, which killed some of the outdoor stock. In greens we have anything one needs.

Various Notes.

Max Herzog has charge of the greenhouses at the Female hospital and has the place looking in fine shape.

Gus Eggeling, of the Eggeling Floral Co., put up a fine decoration for the banquet given at the Jefferson October 2, in honor of President Roosevelt.

The Riessen Floral Co. had the decorations at the Planters' and Southern hotels last week, where the many visiting governors stayed during President Roosevelt's visit in the city.

Adolph Brix visited the Springfield fair last week and bought a few fine plants for his exhibition next month.

Walter Weber, who has charge of the greenhouses of H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., at Nursery, Mo., is sending in a fine lot of roses. His Richmond, Killarney and Perle are among the best. The Bride and Maid are good blooms, but as yet short in stem. He expects this to be his best season since he started his rose houses.

The Foster Floral Co., John Burke and Alex Siegel did a large over-the-counter business last week. Carnival week proved a good one for them.

Henry Ostertag had a number of large decorations last week, for downtown stores, and has a number of good weddings booked for this month.

Mrs. H. Lohrenz, wife of Henry Lohrenz, of the Park Floral Co., is visiting her son in Chicago.

Frank A. Weber, secretary of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., has succeeded in bringing Geo. T. Powell, of Geneva, N. Y., here to address the fruit growers and others interested in protecting their trees from San Jose scale, also other orchard insect pests. Mr. Powell will lecture at Clayton October 12.

The Bentzen Floral Co. and Grimm & Gorley had handsome floral floats in the annual label parade October 5.

Chairman Schoenle, of the Florists' Club trustees, will call a meeting next week to prepare a program for the fall and winter entertainments and social meetings of the club.

S. B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, and E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, were visitors last week. J. J. B.

The Market.

Business is still none too brisk for this season of the year. Some of the florists have been busy with store decorations, etc., but further than that there is time for much more work. Several large weddings are booked for this month and numerous small jobs spring up daily. There is some funeral work being done, but not enough to keep all hands busy, although the market remains well cleaned up.

Many good roses are arriving at this market daily and meeting with ready sale. Bride, Maid, Killarney, Meteor, Richmond and Kaiserin are the different varieties of good roses on the market. The price ranges from 3 cents to 8 cents. The first chrysanthemums were sold in this city last week, but not at the commission houses. Carnations are arriving in fairly large quantities and the stock is good. Of course so far the supply has not been nearly equal to the demand, but the outlook is for a better supply soon. Many fine gladioli are going to waste, with the price down to 3 cents for the best stock. Green stock is plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was well attended. Vice-president Browne occupied the chair. President Scribner gave a lengthy talk on the last convention. It was a well-prepared speech and showed much thought. Mr. Scribner is to give the ladies of the Twentieth Century Club a talk on garden work. A committee consisting of Messrs. Breitmeyer, Scribner and Sullivan was appointed to wait upon the above club. The date for the coming outing was left open until the next meeting. There was some talk of a local show, but so far nothing definite has been done.

Various Notes.

This city has gone baseball mad and, now that we have the world's championship series on, all the stores are displaying some sort of appropriate decoration.

White Enchantress has proven a ready seller with the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. Many field-grown plants are being sold and numerous inquiries concerning cuttings of it are coming in daily.

This has been a busy week for Schroeter's men, with three store decorations on their hands, the largest being for Newcomb, Endicott & Co. The two main floors of this store were a profusion of Beauties, foliage baskets elaborately trimmed with ribbon, and several hundred palms, ferns, etc.

J. F. Sullivan's store is decked out in a new coat of paint. The ceiling and walls are tinted a delicate green, set off with white enamel woodwork, making a very pleasing appearance. H. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It is Indian summer weather and the wholesale streets are one vast flower garden. The windows are brilliant with color and the quality of stock is now superb. The retail demand is growing daily. There is a market for everything that is good, and none too much stock.

Prices have hardened all along the line. Some selected Beauties touched 30 cents October 7. A marked improvement in their quality is evident. The Brides and Maids, too, begin to assert themselves. Stems are longer, heads are larger and there is little mildew. There is no difficulty in getting 6 cents for the best of them. The lower grades, too, are improving and seem likely to hold steady at present rates if the chrysanthemum flood is not greater than usual.

The mums are coming rapidly. Polly Rose, Monrovia and Pacific are most in evidence. All the earlies will be in by the end of this week and prices will doubtless take a tumble. Totty sent some Monrovia to Fenrich last week that were sold at 50 cents to 75 cents each. A big wedding in the near future at the Waldorf will use 10,000 Polly Rose. It will be the largest mum wedding ever seen in New York. Traendly & Schenck are booked to furnish half of them.

Some grand dahlias are arriving daily from Lovett, Herbert and other specialists. With a continuance of the delightful weather with which the week has opened the dahlia will round out an excellent season.

Carnations are improving rapidly and for novelties and specials as high as 3 cents is easily obtained. All the medium and low grades have advanced, but there is no call for short-stemmed flowers.

Violets are improving in price and quality. One specialist on Twenty-ninth street found demand on Monday strong enough to make them touch 75 cents a hundred, but 50 cents is high for the average grade. There will be no steady violet selling before November.

Gladioli and asters have had their day and are now retiring. The few that straggle in at the rear of the procession are not wanted and this week will see the last of them. Of asters especially the shipments have been beyond all needs. Gladioli of the new and better kinds have sold well to the end. America still holds the palm.

Of green goods of every kind there is an abundance. Bronze galax is scarce. The price has advanced to $1.25 per thousand and will be $1.50 before the week is over.

There is a grand assortment of Cattleya labiata, Oncidium varicosum, Dendrobium Phalaenopsis, Vanda cœrulea and Dendrobium formosum. The shipping demand is materializing early and many of the large cities have booked season orders. The outlook for the orchid is better than ever.

Various Notes.

Frank L. Moore, of Chatham, was in the city October 5. He is now pushing rubber hose as a side line.

James McManus, best known as an orchid specialist, also is handling large quantities of mums, gardenias, daisies, valley and Farleyense.

H. H. Berger & Co. report a fifty per cent rise in values of kentia seeds. Their big importation is nearly sold, many of the palm growers using as high as 50,000 from this shipment. The demand for bulbs is said to be excellent.

Ambrose Cleary, at 62 Vesey street, is conducting auction sales Tuesdays and Fridays, with a large attendance. His sister, Miss Cleary, of Haverstraw, is office manager. Business is far ahead of last year at this time and many large growers are shipping stock.

B. Suzuki is no longer with the Yokohama Nursery Co.

Walter Sheridan was operated on for appendicitis October 1, after two weeks' serious illness. The latest news was encouraging. He rallied from the operation promptly and his splendid health and constitution will soon, it is hoped, place him out of all danger. No one in the trade is better liked or more respected than Walter Sheridan.

Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. Y., are building another greenhouse for sweet peas and chrysanthemums. James Scott gives indication of life in the nursery trade by exhibiting over $2,000 in orders for fall planting as the result of one week's hunting. That is better than hunting bears in Louisiana swamps.

M. Adler, at 30 Wooster street, who had an exhibit of pins for florists at the S. A. F. convention, finds the result of his Philadelphia display most gratifying.

B. J. Lambros, formerly with L. Mulinos, has opened a store at One Hundred

T. P. McCormick, formerly with J. B. Murdoch & Co., Pittsburg, and before that with Chicago firms, is now with J. K. Allen.

Carl Hartman, of Hartman & Wagenfohr, of Woodside, has invented an airship which has been exhibited at the Jamestown exposition and will be seen at the exhibition at the Grand Central Palace, New York, October 24.

Do not forget the Florists' Club's meeting October 14 at the new rooms, Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue. A lecture by Professor Nash, of Bronx park, and an exhibit of mums and novelties and the unusual efforts of Messrs. Nugent, Rickards and Schultz ought to bring out the banner attendance of the year.

T. Wendell Braxton, formerly with Fleishman, has taken the store formerly conducted by A. Warendorff at Seventy-fifth street and Madison avenue.

William F. Upson has been appointed receiver for J. M. Hodgson, whose bankruptcy was reported last week.

Wertheimer Bros. say the ribbon business is the best ever, especially among florists. S. B. Wertheimer has been in the west for ten days. The business there is always much earlier than the local demand. The firm is receiving many compliments on its new catalogue.

Arthur T. Boddington has had a phenomenal sale of lilies, especially rubrum and melpomene. He says there will be no surpluses of bulbs this season.

H. E. Froment is now receiving large shipments of L. B. Coddington's Beauties, and from now on the supply will grow daily from his 50,000 square feet devoted to this rose, in addition to the fine Brides and Maids, the entire outfit being handled by Mr. Froment.

Charles Millang has turned half of his conservatory into a mum exhibit, and it makes a light spot for particular buyers. He is handling great quantities of ferns and plants, as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. Leikens are back from Newport, although their Newport branch is still open and a good, steady trade is maintained at that society center.

Oscar Schultz, of Newport, R. I., was in town this week.

John Young says business has improved greatly in the last few days. He is getting $30 per hundred for the long Beauties from his Bedford place.

The Yokohama Nursery Co. says the longiflorum bulbs arrived in particularly fine shape this season and that, contrary to the experience of recent years, they have a surplus of the larger sizes to offer.

John King Duer, 644 Madison avenue, under the management of J. J. Coan, is rapidly establishing a fine business. Many novelties in statuettes, engravings and works of art add to the distinctiveness of the establishment. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

Some delightful cool weather has had a bracing effect on business and good reports come from nearly all the stores. George Cooke says a decided improvement is noticed. Blackstone has his annual palm sale on. J. A. Phillips has a fern sale, mostly Piersoni and Barrowsii, fine stock from Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia. F. H. Kramer also has a plant sale on. Mayberry & Hoover have a force of paper hangers and painters at work at their store and will soon be in shape for the coming season, which is predicted to be a good one.

A lady passing Gude's store so admired the old mill and millrace, with the pond of lilies, water plants, etc., that she purchased it as it stood and had it installed in her home.

A visit to Twin Oaks shows that Peter Bisset has everything in the best of order. The three new houses just finished are up-to-date in every respect. He has added a fine cellar for mushroom culture. Mr. Bisset and family are doing the big show at Jamestown this week.

Gude Bros. are cutting a fine lot of white chrysanthemums.

The October meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the Scottish Rite hall, to give the public a chance to view the dahlias on exhibition. The hall was well filled with this beautiful flower. W. R. Gray, Oakton, Va., exhibited fifty varieties. Mr. Gray has been compelled to erect a new building for packing express and mail orders. Henry A. Dreer showed a collection, including quite a few of the newer ones. Dr. W. W. Evans showed select blooms of the cactus varieties.

Geo. H. Cooke, J. R. Freeman and Wm. F. Gude were appointed as a committee to see the heads of the police department, who have ordered all bay trees and plants from the sidewalks.

Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, was a visitor this week. O. O.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While we have not yet had any sharp frosts, outdoor flowers have been about destroyed by recent storms of wind and rain, and this has materially strengthened the market, flowers clearing out much better, although prices have not shown much advance. Roses, with the cooler weather, are steadily improving and meet with better sale. Carnations are coming with gradually lengthening stems, and some nice flowers, for this early season, are arriving. Chrysanthemums are now fairly abundant. In addition to Mme. Bergman, Fitzwygram, October Frost and other earlies, some nice Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific and Monrovia are seen. Prices are holding up well on these. Violets are a little better in color, but are not yet in great demand. Lilies are not abundant. A few callas appeared this week.

While some asters are still seen, this flower does not now cut much figure in the market. Really good blooms bring fancy prices. There would seem to be an opportunity for some grower to produce a late crop in frames to come in at this season, which would pay well. Some dahlias are seen, but retailers seem chary about taking these in hand. Gladioli, candytuft and tuberose are seen in small lots. Asparagus plumosus, Sprengerii and adiantum are all of fine quality, but selling only moderately as yet. The better class stores are now getting a good supply of Cattleya labiata and Oncidium varicosum Rogersii.

Various Notes.

Col. Castle, who had been announced to speak at the club meeting October 15, has advised the secretary that he cannot be present. The address of the evening will be by Wilfrid Wheeler, of

At the Brockton fair, New England's leading autumn carnival, held October 1 to 5, the floricultural show was largely of dahlias from such well-known growers as J. K. Alexander, Geo. H. Walker, W. D. Hathaway, Johnson & Hall, W. P. Lothrop, Mrs. H. A. Jahn and others. Waban Conservatories showed a fine vase of Wellesley rose through their Brockton agent, W. W. Hathaway. Paid admissions on October 3 totaled 78,000, with gate receipts of $32,000. Possibly if the managers of the coming national flower show can arrange for a Midway of the Brocktonian stamp as a side issue, they may be able to approximate the foregoing attendance. Shrewsbury, England's greatest show, combines the two. Why not try it at Chicago?

Welch Bros. have just rounded out thirty years as a commission firm, making them probably the oldest firm of the kind in the country. As most of their growers have increased their glass area this season and new firms are shipping to them, they anticipate a banner season for cut flowers and other lines which they handle.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have been marketing some fine dahlias. They have an unusually fine lot of winter blooming stock of various kinds in pots for the coming season.

Thomas Pegler, as usual, was first in the field with blooms of Campbell violets, of nice quality for early October.

September gave us a rainfall of over seven and one-half inches. Of this amount three and one-quarter inches fell September 29.

Edward Hatch, the respected secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, is a director of the Exchange Trust Co., which opened its doors for business October 1.

H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, says his new white seedling carnation is looking splendid this season and will be heard from at the coming exhibitions.

Wellesley rose from Waban Conservatories is coming in of fine quality. This rose has a host of friends and grows in popularity. W. N. CRAIG.

Horticultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Good Templars' hall Friday evening, September 27, with President Howard Nichols in the chair.

Wm. Will, of Katonah, N. Y., and Alex Maitland, of Irvington, N. Y., were elected to active membership.

Some very good exhibits of vegetables were on the tables, and in this connection there was a lively discussion as to methods of judging.

The tickets are out for the November show, and our secretary urged the members to push the sale of them.

Interstate Fair.

The annual interstate fair was held in Lynchburg, Va., October 1 to 4. The weather was fine, which induced a large attendance. The exhibits in the agricultural, horticultural and pomological sections were large and of an excellent grade. The horticultural and pomological exhibits were judged by Hon. George E. Murrell, president of the State Horticultural Society.

The following is the horticultural prize list:

- Largest and handsomest rose, cut bloom, Jas. J. Curran, Salem Conservatories, Salem, Va., first.
- Best collection of roses, cut blooms, not less than ten varieties, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Collection of carnations, cut blooms, not less than five varieties, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Bunch of purple violets, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Bouquet, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Collection of growing ferns in pots, not less than five varieties, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Rustic hanging basket, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Floral design, cut flowers, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Display of palms and other plants for decorative purposes, not less than ten varieties, Harry R. Brown, Lynchburg, Va., first.
- Collection of general greenhouse plants, not less than twenty-five varieties, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Second-best collection of general greenhouse plants, not less than twenty-five varieties, Jas. J. Curran first.
- Largest and best collection of dahlias, cut flowers, not less than five varieties, Harry R. Brown first.

Largest and best collection of cosmos, cut flowers, Jas. J. Curran first.

Best and most artistic basket of wild flowers, Mrs. James W. Hughes, Lynchburg, Va., first.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The arrival of October, first month of society weddings, brings an increased demand for choice and white flowers. Cattleyas are selling briskly. Valley is scarce. Really fine white roses command an excellent price, while in carnations whites are perceptibly more favored than the colored varieties. Where showy effects are desired there is nothing equal to the dahlia, which is sold in enormous quantities at moderate prices. The fancy varieties are about the same as those enumerated recently. They are now at their best.

Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful, with prices receding slightly on all flowers that are not of finest quality.

The Market.

While we have not yet had any sharp frosts, outdoor flowers have been about destroyed by recent storms of wind and rain, and this has materially strengthened the market, flowers clearing out much better, although prices have not shown much advance. Roses, with the cooler weather, are steadily improving and meet with better sale. Carnations are coming with gradually lengthening stems, and some nice flowers, for this early season, are arriving. Chrysanthemums are now fairly abundant. In addition to Mme. Bergman, Fitzwygram, October Frost and other earlies, some nice Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific and Monrovia are seen. Prices are holding up well on these. Violets are a little better in color, but are not yet in great demand. Lilies are not abundant. A few callas appeared this week.

While some asters are still seen, this flower does not now cut much figure in the market. Really good blooms bring fancy prices. There would seem to be an opportunity for some grower to produce a late crop in frames to come in at this season, which would pay well. Some dahlias are seen, but retailers seem chary about taking these in hand. Gladioli, candytuft and tuberose are seen in small lots. Asparagus plumosus, Sprengerii and adiantum are all of fine quality, but selling only moderately as yet. The better class stores are now getting a good supply of Cattleya labiata and Oncidium varicosum Rogersii.

Various Notes.

At the Brockton fair, New England's leading autumn carnival, held October 1 to 5, the floricultural show was largely of dahlias from such well-known growers as J. K. Alexander, Geo. H. Walker, W. D. Hathaway, Johnson & Hall, W. P. Lothrop, Mrs. H. A. Jahn and others. Waban Conservatories showed a fine vase of Wellesley rose through their Brockton agent, W. W. Hathaway. Paid admissions on October 3 totaled 78,000, with gate receipts of $32,000. Possibly if the managers of the coming national flower show can arrange for a Midway of the Brocktonian stamp as a side issue, they may be able to approximate the foregoing attendance. Shrewsbury, England's greatest show, combines the two. Why not try it at Chicago?

Welch Bros. have just rounded out thirty years as a commission firm, making them probably the oldest firm of the kind in the country. As most of their growers have increased their glass area this season and new firms are shipping to them, they anticipate a banner season for cut flowers and other lines which they handle.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have been marketing some fine dahlias. They have an unusually fine lot of winter blooming stock of various kinds in pots for the coming season.

Thomas Pegler, as usual, was first in the field with blooms of Campbell violets, of nice quality for early October.

September gave us a rainfall of over seven and one-half inches. Of this amount three and one-quarter inches fell September 29.

Edward Hatch, the respected secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, is a director of the Exchange Trust Co., which opened its doors for business October 1.

H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, says his new white seedling carnation is looking splendid this season and will be heard from at the coming exhibitions.

The varieties of the Pacific family, named last week, have been reinforced by Polly Rose, Tint of Gold, and October Frost. Prices are excellent on fine stock, but there is no especial demand as yet, excepting for yellow. Asters are falling back. Double violets have made their appearance. Single violets are improving. Smilax is in better demand than the other greens. Some Giant cosmos is seen. Autumn foliage is becoming an important factor. Gardenias are less scarce.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting, reported briefly last week, the superintendent of the S. A. F. trade exhibition reported a balance of a little over $200 after all bills had been paid. When this account is closed, one-half will be paid to the national society and the other half to the Florists' Club. President-elect Hahman made a happy speech when the result of the election was announced. Robert Scott & Son exhibited a beautiful vase of their new rose, Mrs. Jardine, which was much admired. William Kleinheinz, of Lynnwood Hall, exhibited a vase of remarkably well grown standard and seedling varieties of carnations. Mr. Kleinheinz told the members that the flowers were cut from plants that had never been grown outside. He said he believed that pot-grown plants, properly handled, so that they did not receive a check, were superior to field-grown plants, as the water could be controlled. It must be added that Mr. Kleinheinz has remarkably cool houses, with side as well as top ventilation, so that his stock planted in the benches in July is really almost as cool as if in the field, and much better off in every other way.

A Durable Plant.

Ever since H. H. Battles tested the durable qualities of Ficus pandurata and found that it would stand almost anything in the shape of drought, gas and high temperature in a dwelling, its success as a decorative plant has been assured. It remains for the Robert Craig Co. to push this splendid plant as a necessary adjunct to hotel, restaurant or apartment house decoration. Today they have raised a stock that is unrivaled both in single specimens and in branched plants. The larger sizes, grown in the now popular cedar tub, show the true character of this ficus to advantage.

a methodical person, called on exactly the day named, and found that a big wedding order had carried off every vestige of bloom from the orchid plants. Mr. Wolff has been on his mettle, despite the fact that Phil scarcely referred to his disappointment in this column, and on Monday he called Phil up to say that the orchids were in bloom. Without losing a moment, lest some lovely lady should decide to get married before he arrived, Phil rushed out to Twenty-eighth and Sedgley streets, and found a really beautiful display of choice blossoms. Cattleya labiata was at its best. A fine spike with four perfect flowers was especially showy. The scarcer yellow Cattleya Dowiana was also in bloom. Current Comment.

Trade is slow just now. The only business being done is funeral work; this uses up a great deal of short stock. Carnations are quite plentiful, but the stems are rather short as yet; 35 cents per dozen, retail, is the price generally asked. Roses are of good quality; $1 and $1.50 per dozen, retail, have been the prices the last week or so. A few early violets are now coming in; 50 cents and 75 cents per hundred, retail, are the prices realized. Sweet peas from outdoors are about all over for this season. We have had no frost as yet in this section of the state, so everything is still in full bloom outdoors.

E. Y. Peirce, on Cottage street, is busy changing over his heating plant. He has put all his boilers in one central boiler pit. This will make it very convenient for him.

R. H. Woodhouse has a nice house of mums that would be hard to beat anywhere. His carnations are looking fine and healthy.

Fred C. Coull, for a good many years with E. H. Chamberlain, has severed his connection with that florist. At present he is taking a rest.

It is rumored that R. E. Nofftz, who recently returned from Germany after a good many weeks' vacation, has brought back a wife from the fatherland.

The usual sale of bulbs is now on, all the florists having them displayed in their stores.

Of white carnations grown in this section, the Queen seems to be the favorite. Fair Maid is the best in the light pink shade, while Winsor, from all indications, will outclass Lawson. W. L.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE GROWING OF VEGETABLES.

[A paper by W. W. Rawson, of Boston, Mass., read before the Congress of Horticulture at the Jamestown exposition, September 23, 1907.]

The culture of vegetables is one of the most interesting and profitable of the many branches of agriculture, and from the fact that the demand for fresh vegetables is so great in our larger towns and cities the growing of these crops has become a business followed by many situated near the large markets. The business as carried on today is termed market gardening, to distinguish it from the old-fashioned farming. It requires a vast amount of knowledge and experience to be a successful market gardener, and one must not only know how to grow, but also what to grow. There are many crops of vegetables which may be termed annual products, but there are a number of varieties which may be grown to a high point of perfection at all seasons by the use of glass.

The kitchen garden, as it is often termed, includes many of these varieties and especially those which are most desired by the market gardener, namely, lettuce, cucumbers, cabbage, onions, radishes, spinach, beets, celery, carrots, parsnips, tomatoes, cauliflowers, squashes, peas, beans and corn.

A good many of these may be called luxuries and are quite difficult to grow, but there exists a large demand for them in our larger cities and towns, and those market gardeners who specialize in the varieties mentioned and grow them successfully have built up a business or profession which is very profitable.

Vegetables Under Glass.

It is a well-known fact that it is more difficult to grow crops in the field than under glass and those who have the best knowledge of the business grow many of the finer vegetables inside. To be successful it not only requires a large capital and good land, but also a thorough knowledge of the business. While in field culture we use the land for what it will produce with a little cultivation and some fertilization, under glass we use land as a machine, putting into it such crops as we wish to produce and using such fertilizers as each special crop requires. As the manufacturer puts into his machine the materials which, with proper care and attention, turn into the finished product, so it is with the grower producing his crop from the soil.

The largest material necessary to produce any crop is moisture or water; consequently no vegetable grower or market gardener can succeed without an irrigation plant. This is true in the field as well as under glass, though under glass the water can be regulated better according to the requirements of the crop, while in the field the rains are often so heavy as to cause more damage than benefit.

The fertilizers are applied before the crop is planted and as the crop to be grown demands.

The Complete Fertilizer.

There is only one complete, perfectly satisfactory fertilizer, and that is stable manure, which is applied in such quantities as the crops require. Wherever stable manure cannot be obtained, it is desirable to use some form of commercial fertilizer possessing the required amount of nitrogen and potash for that particular crop and soil, but for a general fertilizer there is nothing equal to stable manure.

There is, however, another complete fertilizer that has been used to some extent during the last two or three years, and that is sheep manure. When used as a top dressing for second crops in the houses, I have found it to be very satisfactory. It should be used sparingly, however, and only in the pulverized form, which hastens its availability. Where it is impossible to obtain stable manure, sheep manure may serve as a substitute better than the commercial fertilizer, as it is a complete manure, possessing all the elements necessary for plant life.

Many wonder how the land can stand so much stable manure, applied many times a year and for many years without a rest, but it does stand it and will produce the best of crops even after such treatment has been continued for forty or fifty years.

In the greenhouses there are many insects, weeds and fungi that get into the soil and endanger the crop, but these are eliminated by a system of sterilization, or cooking the soil to a temperature of 212 degrees. This process will renovate the soil and produce astonishingly large and perfect crops.

After sterilizing and getting the soil into perfect condition, with an application of twenty to thirty cords of manure the crop surely should grow, with proper care and attention. All crops require a certain amount of light, heat, air and moisture, and it depends wholly on the application of these four items how well the crop will grow and how perfectly it will mature.

Electricity in the Greenhouse.

During the short days of winter we are deficient in light, but this can be supplied by the use of electric arc lights, which will quicken the crop about fifteen per cent.

The air should be always pure and so regulated by ventilation as not to hurt the growing crop by a draft.

The heat is supplied by the sun and by steam conducted from the boilers by pipes to all portions of the houses. The amount of steam can be regulated by valves placed near the boilers, thus giving in each house the necessary amount. Large boilers are required to produce steam, at as low a pressure as possible, to heat large territories of glass; that is, by the acre. The use of hot water is an ancient process to the modern market gardener. When heating by steam the pipes are placed three to four feet above the surface of the soil, at such distances apart as the desired temperature requires, and only enough pipes to give the highest temperature required in the coldest season.

The moisture or water is supplied from pipes arranged similarly to the steam pipes and used as the crops demand.

I have spoken of the use of electricity in the giving of light, but we have found that it is equally beneficial when applied to the soil by means of a current passing through the soil from a battery at each end of the bed and connected with a wire. The circulation is manifest through all the soil to a marked degree. The amount of this has to be tested at all points of the bed until the proper amount of current is obtained, for if it is too high the crop will show a forced growth. This experiment has only just begun and when we can regulate the current to that amount which is of the greatest benefit without forcing the crop too much, it will prove of the greatest value to the modern market gardener. I have tried the experiment in one of my houses in a bed 400 feet long, and the difference in growth between that bed and one not treated was quite marked.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

VISITED CHICAGO: R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.

THE estimates of delivery of seed peas on the contract basis range all the way from thirty to 100 per cent.

CATALOGUE paper will cost from 50 cents to $1 per hundred pounds more than it did for 1907 books, and press-work and binding also have advanced.

THE reports from European seed-growing centers are of more encouraging character. The splendid weather of late summer has done much to repair the damage of a bad start in the spring.

THE death of John E. Olsen, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, is reported in the obituary column this week. He was highly esteemed and had a wide circle of acquaintances in the grass seed trade.

It is reported that the field bean for commercial purposes will go as high as $2 to $2.50 per bushel. If this is the case it will make it easier for the seedsman to get $4 to $6 for the garden varieties for planting purposes.

THE improved forms of the Japanese morning-glory deteriorate rapidly if great care is not exercised in seed-growing. This is particularly true of seed grown in this country, and it appears Japanese growers are getting careless.

REPORTS on vine seeds, especially the pickling varieties of cucumbers, are not encouraging except in so far as they indicate that high prices will be the rule and thus give those who have any carried-over stock a chance to recover losses.

C. C. MORSE & Co., San Francisco, have a Countess Spencer sweet pea sport to introduce this season. They call it Florence Morse Spencer, and describe it as white with picotee edge of pink, of Spencer type. They have several more Spencer selections for next season.

THE Michigan radish seed crop is reported to be short. Michigan vine seeds will not pan out more than half a crop. Garden beans in the Michigan district are probably better on the average than in any other of the large producing centers, but in many cases even there the reports point to a comparatively short crop.

ONION SETS are now worth about 6 cents per pound, for all colors; shipment immediate. For later shipment 1 cent additional per pound is being offered, but holders are not anxious to sell. It is thought by some that 10 cents per pound will be the value of this necessary commodity when time for spring shipment arrives.

THE milling and hand-picking thus far done on the pea crops of the year show a much greater shrink than was expected when the peas were taken in at the growing stations. The grower depends to a certain extent upon the dockage taken at the time of delivery to make up to him the natural shrink, but as a rule he loses out and this year more so than usually.

It is worth while keeping an eye on the pages of European advertising in the REVIEW. There are many offers there that will mean money to you to know about.

THE NON-WARRANTY.

In discussing recent comment on the legal phases of seed-selling, a leading western seedsman said:

"If those who object to the justice of the seedsman's non-warranty clause could realize, as the seedsman does, the necessity for making it stand out prominently in catalogues and on stationery, their views would be different.

"Seeds are not, properly speaking, a product. They are simply the germs which under favorable natural conditions will result in a product. The seedsman may safely say that the seeds, or germs, that are contained in the package he is handing over were taken from the article that his customer is seeking to obtain, and that to the best of his knowledge the substance handed over has in it the inherent characteristics of the article from which it was taken; and furthermore, that the chances are in favor of "What more can he say? What more could be asked of him? Will anyone else in a similar line guarantee more? Or if a Leghorn is hatched from what to his best knowledge was a Plymouth Rock egg, can he be held responsible?

FIELD NOTES ON SWEET PEAS.

C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, have just issued the second edition of their "Field Notes on Sweet Peas." In the introduction Lester L. Morse says in part:

"A substantial evidence of the continued popularity of the sweet pea is the numerous requests from many of the seed trade for copies of our 'Field Notes.' Since the great fire destroyed all of our surplus copies we have been unable to meet these requests, for the fire left us with just two copies for our own use.

"We promised many of our friends that we would rewrite the 'Notes' and add all the introductions since our issue of 1905, and bring it up to date, and this issue is now presented to fulfill that promise, and we trust it will prove a useful guide to the seed seller, which is its chief mission.

"In anticipation of our rewriting the 'Notes' we arranged this season for unusually comprehensive trial grounds, and planted practically every variety mentioned. Many of these varieties we never expect to see again, for one can never appreciate the progress of evolution in the sweet pea till he contrasts the old and obsolete varieties with the modern new ones—for instance, Adonis with George Herbert, Cardinal with King Edward VII, Queen of England with Shasta, or Mrs. Gladstone with Countess Spencer.

"The demand for sweet pea seed this season is even greater than when our last book was written two years ago, and our acreage is larger. The introduction of Countess Spencer, as we predicted, has added to the popularity of the flower, and the greatest amount of development work is now being done on this type, so that within a short time we will have them in all shades. of mixtures, and it is questionable to our mind whether the names given these should be allowed to stand.

"In the eagerness to be first to exhibit new varieties, a great repetition of names has resulted, and the future promises a hopeless confusion unless something is done to establish a recognized list.

"There is no tribunal better qualified to establish such a list than the National Sweet Pea Society of England, and the only hope of our avoiding the multiplication of names for the same thing is for this society to arbitrarily decide the proper nomenclature and classification of varieties as fast as introduced.

"There is still great opportunity for the development of new shades and sizes and forms of the sweet pea, and it is safe to predict that the next few years will develop even greater changes than the past.

Two Grand Novelties for 1908

Eschscholtzia Dainty Queen We have the greatest pleasure in being able to introduce this exquisite new color in Eschscholtzias. It is so delicate and striking that we are certain it will excite universal admiration, especially with the ladies, and become one of the greatest favorites of this charming race of our new improved compact Californian Poppies. It is almost impossible to adequately describe its soft and delicate shades of color, but we are having a plate prepared which we think will do justice to its beauty.

The color is a tender blush, or pale coral pink, slightly deeper toward the edges, with a groundwork of delicate cream, and like Intus Rosea, our introduction of two years ago, the petals are quite the same color inside as outside, so that the color effect is the same when the flower is open as when closed—a quite unusual point in all other Eschscholtzias.

It has the same upright, compact habit as Eschscholtzia Intus Rosea, forming a small, compact bush, very free blooming, with the flowers standing well above the bright green foliage, which gives it a singularly attractive appearance for bedding or massing.

$15.00 per 100 packets; $2.00 per dozen packets. (25c retail.)

Godetia Crimson Glow This splendid new Godetia will be eagerly sought after when once known. It forms a compact little bush about 9 inches in height, completely smothered with flowers of the most dazzling, intense crimson. A bed of this variety produces a vivid effect, the intensity of which it is impossible to describe. We are having a plate prepared, which will perhaps convey some idea of its splendid color, but to be fully appreciated, it must be seen growing. In habit it resembles our Godetia Sunset, which is without doubt the most compact in habit and most free blooming Godetia yet introduced.

Countess Spencer and its kindred types may, however, prevent their general use, and the standard forms will always be in demand and we shall continue to work with them as well as with the new Spencer types."

The pamphlet contains classifications by form and color, with descriptions of some 275 named varieties and several lists of preferences. It is a volume of great value to the seed trade.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending September 28 were as follows:

Kind.	Bags.	Value.	Kind.	Bags.	Value.
Anise	7	$ 71	Clover	566	$12,466
Caraway ..	300	1,972	Coriander ..	440	965

Castor ...	4,174	17,802	Rape	80	517
Celery ...	30	420	Other		2,075

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $35,758.

REAPPRAISEMENT.

The Board of United States General Appraisers at New York gave notice October 5 of the following reappraisement:

Bulbs.—From C. J. Speelman & Sons, Sassenheim, exported Aug. 16, 1907; entered at New York. File No. 46519. Invoice No. 30845. Findings of Sharretta, G. A.: Single tulips, various colors; entered at 2.50, advanced to 3.50 U. S. dollars per 1000. Double, ditto; entered at 3, advanced to 4 U. S. dollars per 1000. Add cases and packing. Cash discount 5 per cent.

PEAS AND BEANS.

Although the spring was late and delayed sowing, and a dry summer followed, we had a very satisfactory yield on early varieties of peas, giving us surpluses on Alaskas, Wonders, Premium Gems and Nott's Excelsiors, while Advancers, Horsford's Market Garden and later sorts are very short with us.

The continued dry weather shortened the bean crop and during harvest we have had so much rain that the sample will not be as good as we expected, requiring more work in hand-picking. A month ago we expected to be able to fill our orders on beans in full, but now find we will be short twenty-five to fifty per cent on quite a number of kinds.

W. H. GRENELL.

CALIFORNIA CROP REPORT.

Writing as to conditions in the Santa Clara valley September 30, Lester L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., said:

"In regard to crops, the late planted pieces, which are now being harvested, are turning out much shorter than we anticipated.

"Onion seed is considerably less than we figured a month ago, and personally we are going to have very little onion seed left after filling our autumn orders.

"Onion bulbs remain high, which will probably materially affect planting for the 1908 crop.

"We have been able to do our harvesting and shipping much earlier than usual and within two weeks will be ready for our early rains."

LONGIFLORUMS.

dian Pacific Co., which left Yokohama August 27, 1907, for Vancouver, B. C., took the largest cargo of lily bulbs ever shipped from Japan. A regular record breaker it is on one steamer, consisting of the immense amount of 4,699 cases, or about 360 tons measurement; one ton equals forty cubic feet. Taking as an average 225 bulbs per case, this steamer carried 1,057,265 bulbs.

The principal portion of this shipment goes to the United States and Canadian cities, although a rather large number reach Europe by this route, partly direct via Montreal and partly by transshipment in New York. The bulbs shipped are at this season principally Lilium longiflorum and its different types and varieties.

MEADOW FOXTAIL.

Alopecurus pratensis, the meadow foxtail, is an important item to all dealers in grass seeds, for it is in wide demand as a permanent pasture grass. The crop in Germany turned out larger than last year and Conrad Appel, of Darmstadt, says the samples he has received at the date of his last report, September 16, show a satisfactory quality and contain less larvæ than the year before. "As you know, last season the owners asked very high prices for the raw seed, and therefore the demand for cleaned seed was not very animated. In spite of the bigger new crop the owners are now quoting much higher figures, having made

IMPROVING THE TOMATO.

The firm of W. Mauger & Sons, Brookdale Nurseries, at S. Sampson, in the Channel Islands, is doing a good work in improving the old Large Red variety of tomato. For some years Mr. Mauger has carefully selected the seeds of the best shaped fruits, at the same time always keeping the main features of Large Red, its heavy cropping capability, and its amenability to hard forcing, clearly and distinctly preserved. All Mr. Mauger's tomatoes have been improved in their stamina and robustness by having a year's outdoor growth each second or third year. Last year the best of the strains of Large Red were sent to a specially selected district of France and there grown in the open. The plants from the seed of these are now growing under glass at Brookdale and have a heavy crop of fruit, beautiful in appearance and as healthy as it is possible to be. There is no trace whatever of the ill-shapen, rough-looking old variety. Though still corrugated, the markings are quite regular, and very gradual. The fruits are solid and heavy and of a deep red color, which adds greatly to the salability of the fruit. Even the worst of the tomatoes are infinitely to be preferred to the misshapen fruit often produced by Winter Beauty and Stirling Castle when forced hard, says a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

CULTURE OF PENNISETUM.

Please state how to handle the pennisetum, so as to have bedding plants in the spring. I have fine clumps.

T. C. B.

There are two methods of getting stock of this useful grass for spring sales. The simplest is to sow seeds in heat in January and pot off when large enough to handle, gradually hardening them. We have had excellent success with plants grown in this way. The second plan is to lift the old clumps before severe frost; pack them closely together in a frame or under the bench. Use a cold north house. If just clear of freezing, they will be all right. About the end of February break up the clumps and place in 3-inch pots in a warm, moist house, where they will soon commence to make roots and foliage. P. longistylum is the best species for florists.

RIVES JUNCTION, MICH.—E. E. Stewart is shipping cut spikes of gladioli to Detroit and Chicago. He is cutting 4,000 to 5,000 spikes per week. They meet with a ready sale now, as most outdoor flowers have been killed by the severe frosts.

BURPEE'S

Two New "Spencers" for 1908

A Single Flower of the New
BURPEE'S WHITE SPENCER
Exactly Natural Size.

BURPEE'S PRIMROSE SPENCER

THIS is a fitting companion to BURPEE'S WHITE SPENCER. The vine is equally thrifty and free flowering but slightly shorter in growth, attaining a height of eight to nine feet. The flowers are well placed on strong, thick stems, ten to twelve inches long, and are borne never less than three flowers, but sometimes four flowers, to the stem, as shown in the illustration opposite. The standard measures one and three-quarters inches to nearly (if not quite) two inches across by about one and one-quarter inches deep; the wings are an inch across by one and one-eighth inches deep. The texture is fully as substantial as in BURPEE'S WHITE SPENCER.

The color is a PRONOUNCED PRIMROSE or creamy yellow throughout both standard and wings. It is equal in depth and richness of color to THE HON. MRS. E. KENYON, which, of course, it outranks in form and size. Both standard and wings are thoroughly crinkled or "waved." Burpee's Primrose Spencer will hold its own with any of the so-called "Yellow" Sweet Peas in color, while it SURPASSES ALL OTHERS OF THIS COLOR in size of flower, length of stem and vigor of growth. A decided acquisition to the Spencer type and the first of its color to be introduced.

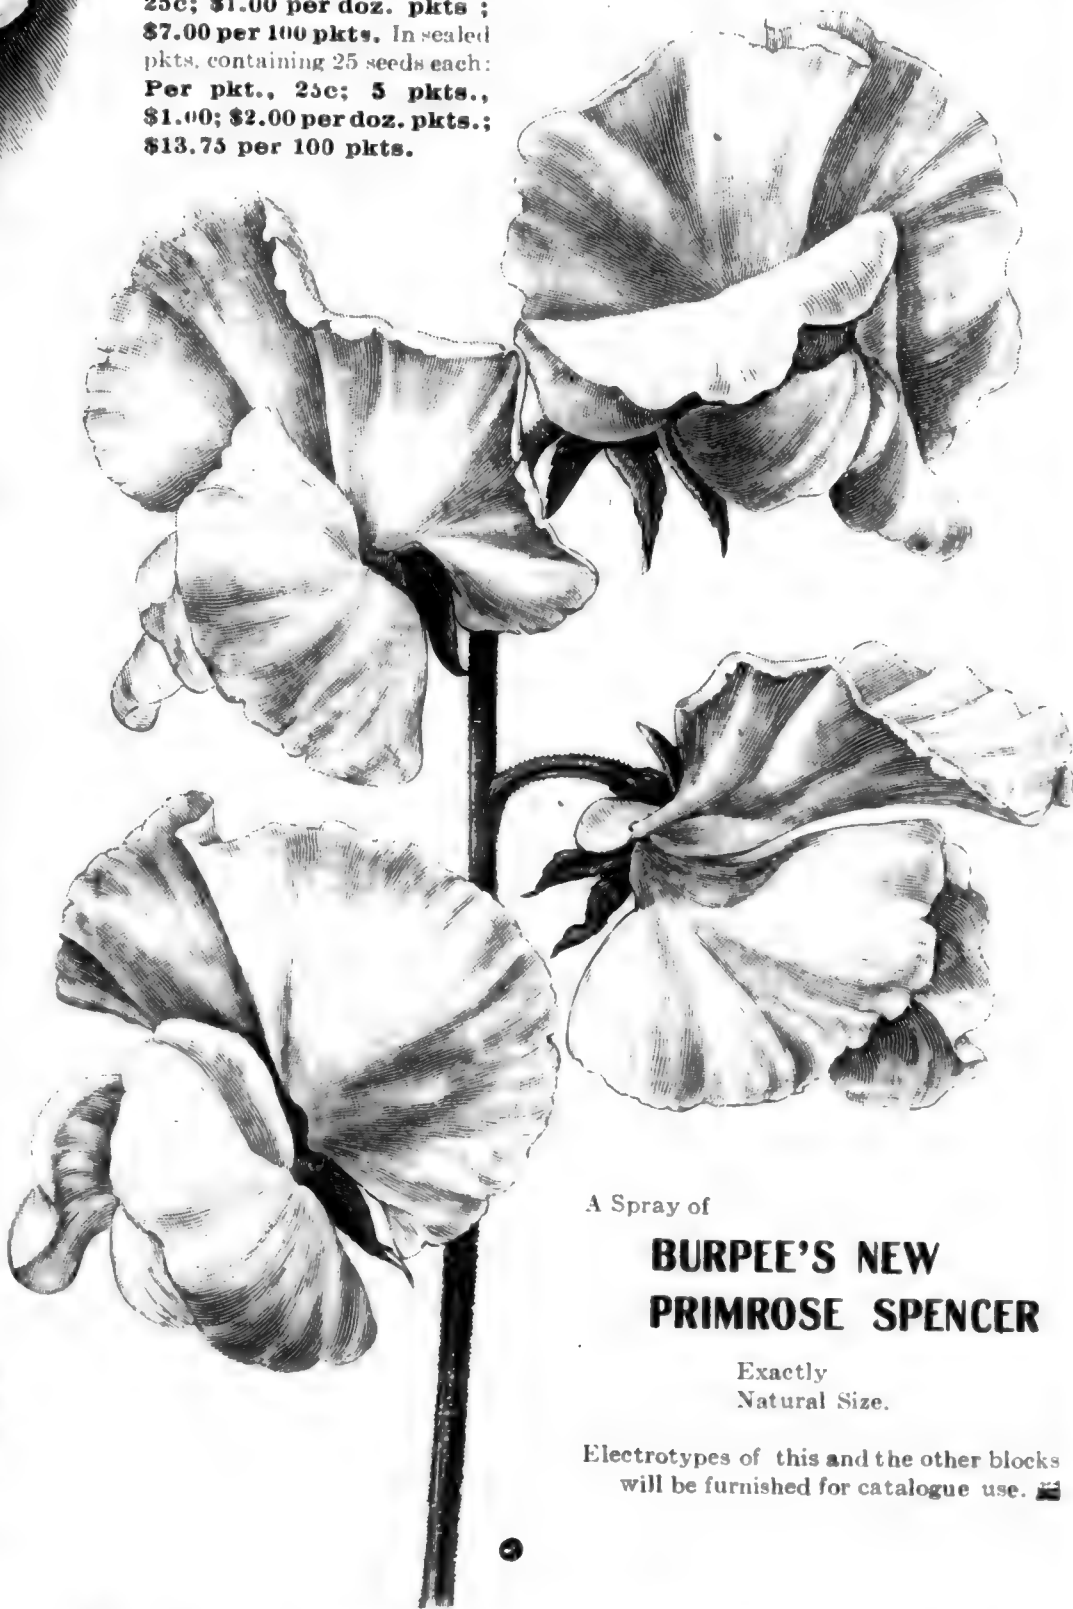

In sealed packets containing ten seeds each: per pkt., 15c; 2 pkts. for 25c; $1.00 per doz. pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In sealed pkts. containing 25 seeds each, per pkt., 25c; 5 pkts. for $1.00; $2.00 per doz. pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts.

A handsome ILLUSTRATED CIRCULAR will be mailed upon application.

BURPEE'S WHITE SPENCER

BURPEE'S WHITE SPENCER produces in the greatest profusion flowers of enormous size that are ABSOLUTELY PURE WHITE. It is white seeded and comes true to the Countess Spencer type. The standard is DECIDEDLY WAVED, crinkled and fluted; the wavy wings are so folded that the keel is almost hidden. The standard measures from one and three-quarters to two inches across by one and three-eighths to one and five-eighths inches in depth. The wings are fully an inch wide and nearly as deep as the standard. The flowers are borne three and four to the stem and are uniformly well placed. The stems are extra strong and measure from twelve to fifteen inches in length. The vines are most vigorous in growth, with heavy foliage, and attain a height of from ten to twelve feet. They are nearly covered with bloom, while the flowers retain their enormous size throughout the season. Of fine substance, the magnificent flowers are unsurpassed for cutting and for keeping after being cut.

In sealed packets containing 10 seeds each: per pkt., 15c; 2 pkts. for 25c; $1.00 per doz. pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In sealed pkts. containing 25 seeds each: Per pkt., 25c; 5 pkts., $1.00; $2.00 per doz. pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., O. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 38d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

It is worth while keeping an eye on the pages of European advertising in the REVIEW. There are many offers there that will mean money to you to know about.

S. C. CLAPP, for the last six years connected with the John A. Young nursery at Greensboro, N. C., has been appointed state inspector of nurseries and orchards, to succeed S. L. Smith, who has gone to Illinois to take up similar work.

THE San Benito Nursery Co., of San Benito, Cameron county, Texas, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are H. G. Stilwell, Alba Heywood, W. H. Steiger, F. P. Foley and R. L. Watts.

W. B. SANDS, the florist of Baltimore, Md., has joined with his sons, W. B. Sands, Jr., Geo. M. Sands, Frank N. Sands and Hugh K. Sands, in the chartering of a company at Towson, in Baltimore. The new corporation, which will be known as the W. B. Sands & Sons Co., has a capital stock of $5,000, and will engage in a general nursery and landscape gardening business.

THE East Highlands Nurseries, Columbus, Ga., of which Mrs. Adele L. Foley is proprietor, suffered a loss of about $1,000, September 25, by the falling of a large water-tank. The tank fell to the ground, a distance of eighty feet, and was broken into fragments. The flood of water, suddenly released, swept everything before it, even breaking down a brick wall and carrying some of the bricks fifty or sixty yards. No one was injured.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

English ivy can be protected in winter by placing a coat of loose stable manure over the roots and spruce or hemlock branches over all the vines. This will afford just the amount of protection in the way of shade that the leaves of ivy require.

It is not yet too late to put in quantities of ivy cuttings. In many parts of the country it is only quite recently that English ivy started to make such headway that cuttings in considerable numbers were available.

Hydrangea cuttings may also be put in now, either in flats or pots, or in sand in the bench. It will have to be carefully seen to that the cuttings are not allowed to wilt during the first few days.

All the planting that can be done now, before cold and hard freezing weather makes such work impossible, should be rushed to a finish. And then there will be time for the covering of things that require such protection.

It will be well to bear in mind that maples may be seriously injured by pruning or cutting back during the winter and early spring. That work, if necessary, can be done yet for a little while.

Although Ampelopsis Veitchii is quite hardy, or nearly so, in most parts of the country, sometimes it gets killed right down from some unknown cause. To make sure that it will not get killed by frost for want of protection, it will be well to throw some manure or litter over the ground covering the roots.

It will be well now to pick up all the acorns that may be required, before they become useless by remaining on the damp ground.

All newly planted trees, shrubs or vines should have a coat of manure or some other substance, like litter, over the roots and well up to the trunks or stems. This will not only prevent injury by heaving with frost, but will also modify the evil effect of a cavity between the

MISTAKES IN PLANTING TREES.

The frequent complaints made by planters, to the effect that their trees have died, and the ever repeated query as to what is the trouble and why the trees live a few months and then give up the ghost, constitute an important subject for discussion at this time. Many people are now making up their lists of stock and frequent consultations with the landscape gardener or the nurseryman are held.

To a man who understands the nature of the growth of hardy trees and plants there is little mystery as to why so much good material perishes. With careless or incompetent gardeners much of the fault lies. Many of them use little or no judgment in the selecting of sites for the planting of specimen trees, and the one that should be put on high ground, where there is bound to be but little moisture in the rainy season, is probably planted in a low, moist situation, where it dies at the earliest opportunity.

One of the greatest mistakes made by planters—and the gardening fraternity are not entirely without blame in this matter—is to dig a hole in a mass of hard clay soil and, because the ground is apparently poor and heavy to excavate, fill in around the newly planted tree with well broken up soil or sand. Almost invariably the poor tree makes an abortive effort to overcome the excess of moisture at the root, and, after a few leaves have been thrown out, it is no longer able to continue the struggle against such tremendous odds and it grows no longer. This usually happens after it is too late to plant again for the same season and the grower or dealer is usually called on and asked why he sold trees that did not grow.

This may sound like a story told to children, but every grower who has had any experience at all is up against such propositions many times during the season. I have called attention to the planting of trees in an excavation in hard soil and filling up the hole with sand, all of which acts as a sponge, keeps the water and allows for no drainage, and as a result we have a puddle of sour water and a dead tree.

Thousands of deciduous and evergreen trees are planted on sidewalks and hillsides, usually with no topping or trimming, and then left to shift for themselves, with the possible chance that they may be favored by some late rains and kept alive until they get a fresh start the following winter and spring. Of course only a few survive and invariably the nurseryman is called on for an explanation as to why so many of the trees have died. As an argument, he will have it called to his attention that some of the stock lived, showing conclusively that the others must have been of inferior quality. The customer will gravely say that they all received the same amount of care; therefore, why did some of them die? California is a comparatively new country, and nature has been so prodigal with her natural gifts that the careless way of merely planting a tree, and expecting the powers that govern to do the rest, has permeated all branches of the profession in a measure. However, with a few more years of experience and more attention to detail, the proposition of educating planters up to the first principles of tree planting may not be an impossibility. G.

The Market.

The retailers have had considerable trouble for the last week to keep up even a semblance of a show of flowers in their windows. The mum crop, owing to the rather unfavorable weather we have experienced for some weeks, is not so far along as it should be, and as a consequence the factor we depend on principally at this time is not sufficiently in evidence to do us much good. Carnations are apparently scarcer than they were a week ago, and although the prices have not been raised, the growers could get much better figures than they are receiving for their stock at this time. Good roses are not to be had, either, and the heavy, dry winds of the last few days have done their share toward making this class of stock scarce. Violets are fairly plentiful and sell well. Sweet peas are beginning to show the results of the long nights by their ragged appearance. Other kinds of outside stock are not up to the standard, but the weather has to be taken into consideration when comparisons are made.

Valley is in fair supply. Japanese lilies are gone for the year. Amaryllis are scarce and only a few of the late-blooming kinds are seen. Smilax is plentiful and all kinds of green stuff can be had in any quantity.

A few Roman hyacinths have been brought into town. They will, however, not be very plentiful this year, as comparatively few are being grown. Several of the large growers have complained that there is nothing to be made

The Clinton Falls Nursery Co. commenced cutting October Frost and Monrovia chrysanthemums October 5. They report the demand for good stock as excellent and will build one more house this fall. In the spring they intend putting up three more houses, all 27x180. They have 65,000 square feet of glass, the material all furnished by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago. Speaking of the season's prospect, Mr. Cashman said: "We are looking for a brisk demand this winter, as there is plenty of money in the northwest. Farmers are receiving big prices for everything raised, and although the crops are not quite as good as last year, which were record-breakers, the farmers will receive more money for what they have and make it up in that way. When the farmers have money, good business is assured for everyone else."

Club Meeting.

The annual election of officers of the Cleveland Florists' Club resulted as follows: President, F. C. Bartels; first vice-president, H. P. Knoble; second vice-president, F. C. Witthuhn; secretary, Isaac Kennedy; assistant secretary, A. Hart, Jr.; treasurer, H. A. Hart.

Various Notes.

Chrysanthemums have made their appearance in this market. F. C. Bartels, of the Essex Greenhouses, was first in with October Frost, a grand white, and the Lamborn Floral Co., with Willowbrook. Other lines of stock are a little scarce and the prices are on a steady rise.

Smith & Fettes have several large weddings for the first part of this month, which will help the market for the better class of stock. The funeral trade was lively last week and has kept the market well cleaned.

INDIANAPOLIS.

State Florists' Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Society was held at the state house on the evening of October 1. There was a good attendance. The business of the evening was the holding of a fall show and it was decided to hold it in A. Wiegand & Sons' conservatory, the firm giving the use of the building and decorating it for the occasion. As the show is to be free, the question of the expense of hiring a hall for two days was the chief topic, and after much discussion it was unanimously decided to accept the offer of A. Wiegand & Sons. Their place, being centrally situated among the best flower buyers, should prove a good attraction. The money saved in hall rent will be added to the premiums and will make the list that much better.

Various Notes.

Frost is holding off well and outdoor stuff is still plentiful. Roses and carnations are improving in both quantity and quality.

Baur & Smith had the first chrysanthemums on the market October 5.

All the seed stores are receiving large shipments of bulbs for fall trade, which promises to be extra good this year.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

In spite of the fact that weather conditions are not any too favorable, business keeps on coming. Naturally, with increased trade, stock is shorter than ever. In almost any flower you might mention there is a marked scarcity, and as a result prices have gone up, but are still reasonable.

Chrysanthemums have filled a big gap, but early mums bring a fancy price, which seems to increase each year. Violets are increasing in quantity but very little in quality, being still very small. One of the florists at Corfu has succeeded in raising some very fine violets in frames, and, coming such a short distance, they hold their fragrance, the lack of which is one of the drawbacks to Hudson river violets. The latter come too long a journey to hold their fragrance, and half the time we are accused of selling stale stock.

Early frosts have held off this fall, and very fortunately, too, for in this season of the year there is always a hurry to get outdoor stock, both flowering and bedding.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was called to discuss plans for the proposed flower show. The affair is an idea of a society formed by Buffalo's moneyed men, who are in love with flowers and have organized a society called the Buffalo Horticultural Society. The plans for the affair are not settled for a certainty, so it will be better to mention particulars later.

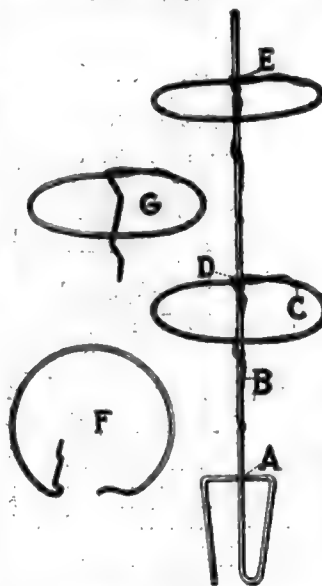

Alterations are now completed in W. J. Palmer's uptown store. The change has added very much room, utilizing all possible space, and, after repainting, the store is very attractive.

Mr. Graham, of Bradford, is a frequent visitor to Buffalo nowadays, but for very serious reasons. For a few years past he has been troubled with his eyes, and it has now come to the point where an operation on his eyes is necessary. We all realize Mr. Graham's position and wish him success and good eyesight.

TAKE NOTICE

Every Carnation Grower who uses the COMMON SENSE CARNATION SUPPORT has demonstrated to himself the necessity of its use over that of the present stringing method or any of the other so-called Wire Carnation Supports.

The Common Sense Carnation Support

Description—A 24-inch Galvanized Stake that will hold 1 to 9 rings. A—The anchor that firmly holds the support and keeps it standing erect. B—The spring wire to remove the rings from the stake. C—Open and close ring by the simple twist of the spring wire ring and yield to form around the plant. D and E—The crimp in the stake that prevents the twisting or sliding of the ring. F—The open wire ring. G—Closed ring.

The old-fashioned, slow, expensive stringing method costs you more money and embodies continual work during the season of plant growth.

Other so-called Wire Carnation Supports are puzzles in construction, troublesome to maintain and impractical to a great degree, and usually after a season's trial get in the junk pile.

The COMMON SENSE CARNATION SUPPORT is simplicity in construction, easy to put up, easy to apply and to take apart, and when in position no difficulty is found to cultivate among the plants. It fits every size plant, and stays permanently until removed from the bench. After use, the stakes and rings are bundled separately, like the ordinary galvanized wire or cane stakes.

RICHMOND, VA.

The Market Case.

City Attorney Pollard has advised the council committee on public markets that it has no right to sell locations in the street adjoining the market house while any stall or stand in the market remains unoccupied.

The complications now existing grew out of a complaint made some time ago by another florist against J. D. Hooper. Both sell in Sixth street near Second market. It was a custom long observed that the choice position fell to the earliest dealer to arrive in the morning with his stock. Finding it inconvenient to make the race each morning with other growers who sought the best places, Mr. Hooper offered the markets committee $50 for the coveted position on the sidewalk and the bid was accepted. His competitors in the business protested and the matter was taken up for inquiry by the committee. The point was raised that an old ordinance forbids the committee to sell stands outside the market house until every stand and stall in the building is taken.

Then the committee called on the city attorney to define their powers. The opinion of Mr. Pollard, it is said, sustains the objection. It is probable, however, that the committee will ask the council to amend the ordinance so as to give them the right to dispose of sidewalk space adjacent to the market regardless of the vacant stands in the building. There are several undesirable stands in remote corners of the market for which it is impossible to get tenants and under the ordinance these vacancies prevent the committee from obtaining good revenue from the sidewalk stands.

Hammond Claims Damages.

W. A. Hammond has commenced proceedings to set aside the orders entered in the suit in the circuit court under which the property of the Brook Turnpike Co., for nearly three miles, was condemned by the Richmond and Chesapeake Bay Railway Co., the trolley line running from this city to Ashland, said to be owned by the same interests. Mr. Hammond claims that the landowners were not properly notified; that therefore their rights and damages have not been considered; that the condemnation proceedings were in many other respects not in accordance with law. He further contends that he has been largely damaged by the absolute destruction of one of the finest boulevards in the state, and that this destruction was entirely unnecessary. Other landowners also have been complaining, but Mr. Hammond is the first to come into court and ask for a hearing.

CLARENCE, N. Y.—E. A. Muchow has completed two new greenhouses. He has also built a propagating house and has planted it with carnations and geranium cuttings. He says the aster crop this year was almost a total failure here, owing to lack of rain in the summer.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business shows little change from last week, excepting that a few wedding decorations are on hand and funeral work has dropped off a little. Many cut blooms are on the market and little goes to waste.

Dahlias are a glut, as also are tuberoses. Cosmos is not up to the usual supply. Roses and carnations are a little more regular. Asters have nearly disappeared, but here and there a few can be seen. Greens of all kinds are enough to meet the demands.

Our farmers are bringing dahlias in by the thousands and selling fine blooms as low as 5 cents a dozen. Cosmos will soon share the same fate.

Various Notes.

H. C. Caines, of Catonville, Md., is growing some extra fine carnations and roses.

W. Terry, of Owings Mills, brought the first of his chrysanthemums to town, the lot consisting of Glory of Pacific and Polly Rose, and he will have about 1,000 for Home Coming week.

F. Reitz, of Franklinton, is erecting a new house 20x100 feet and building a new boiler-room 10x18 feet, with concrete walls. He will make a general change of boilers and is also building a new violet house 200 feet long at his old home place.

On the night of October 4 Charles Cook, West Mosher street extended, lost nearly all the cut flowers that he had cut for the Saturday market. His horse was loose in the stable and made for the feed box, and when through helping himself and inspecting the stable he trampled on nearly all the cut flowers, making them unfit for sale.

J. C. Reinecke, of Catonville, has changed his rose house into a carnation house and the stock is in a fine growing condition.

L. Struntz, of Westport, will carry on his business as usual, as the business that was owned by his mother was bought by him. Many improvements are under way at this place. J. L. T.

PADUCAH, KY.—Schmaus Bros. have started on building a new house 42x140.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business has picked up quite a little, although it could yet stand more activity. There was quite a demand the latter part of last week and the market developed a scarcity of all kinds of cut flowers.

Asters, dahlias, gladioli and other outdoor flowers are practically off the market. There were a few asters, but mostly inferior stock. Good American Beauties have become scarce and the best grades have sold at $6 retail. Bride and Maid are not overabundant. Killarney is good, having materially improved with cool weather.

Few carnations are yet being cut. Chrysanthemums are arriving in limited quantities and sell according to the size of the flower, at from $2 to $4 per dozen wholesale. The largest growers say that the chrysanthemum crop is about a week further advanced than last year, the September weather forcing the buds earlier.

Violets are coming in, but are somewhat light in color and the odor somewhat weak. They range in value from 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred.

Various Notes.

Charles Benson is cutting some fine carnations for this time of the year.

The name of a new firm starting at Fort Collins, Colo., is Espelin & Warren. Mr. Espelin was with the Park Floral Co., Denver. Mr. Warren has been in the seed business at Fort Collins for some time.

R. S. Mahan, of the Alpha Floral Co., spent ten days hunting deer in the North Park country.

E. E. Petersen died September 28 at Los Angeles, Cal. His remains were brought here for burial at Fairmont cemetery October 2. Mr. Petersen had been in poor health for some time. He and his wife went to California some four months ago. He leaves a widow and three children. Mr. Petersen was well known among the local florists, having been connected with the trade for many years. His greenhouses are located at 33 South Lowell boulevard.

ARAUCARIA is our specialty. Watch us grow.

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, Sept. and Oct. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 3 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii. Have 3 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5,000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

My customers went into ecstasies over their brilliant colors." Fine, stocky, field-grown, seed-bed plants, just right for transplanting, $3.50 per 1000; 500, $2.00; 3000, $10.00; 5000, $16.25; 10,000 or over, at $3.00 per 1000. Cash with order. Pansies a specialty for over thirty years.

L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight P. O., Mass.

Coburn's pansies. Finest strain grown for market. Seed saved from 10,000 plants, personally selected from the 500,000 we grow each year for spring sales. Strong, stocky growth, flowers largest size, rich, self brilliant and novel shades and markings, colors properly balanced.

We grow seed for our own use only, but have a small surplus this year. Trial packets, about 100 seeds, $1.00. Only one to a customer, as number is limited. If you grow pansies, try a packet and compare with others.

Plants now ready, strong from seed bed, $5.00 per 1000. Cash with order.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 35 cents

The American Carnation.

By C. W. WARD. Invaluable to the carnation grower. All departments of the business are treated in a thoroughly practical manner. This book is the work of a careful, studious grower of ripe experience. Fully illustrated. $3.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 35 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Greenhouse Heating.

PUT THE SYSTEM RIGHT.

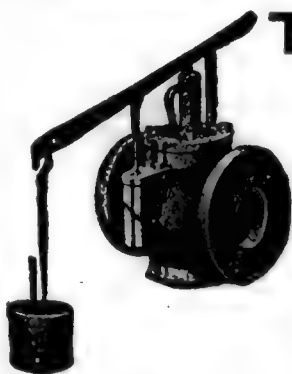

In the work of heating the houses it is impossible to overestimate the value of strict attention to detail, and to good workmanship throughout. An excellent scheme may be easily spoiled by what might be considered trifles in the matter of getting out levels, or through insufficiency of valves, or by the use of valves of inferior make and pattern. Things may go right for a time on a new system of piping, even if the work is not really well done, but after a time some little item may go wrong and throw the whole system into bad working, and necessitate expensive repairs.

The first consideration in the arrangement of a system of heating should, of course, be the boiler, and here several things have to be considered, such as the kind of fuel which is to be used, the water with which the boiler has to be fed, and lastly, the amount of piping that has to be heated. In connection with the last-named point, economy at the outset is likely to lead to extravagance during the whole period of the existence of the apparatus, for a boiler which is not really well above its work has to be fired hard in severe weather; consequently the wear and tear on boiler and grate bars is excessive. Moreover, the hard stoking consumes an excessive quantity of fuel. This strain upon the apparatus and the waste of fuel may be avoided by having a boiler that has a capacity for more piping than is used, and by using in combination with it more than the average piping in the houses, says a writer in an English gardeners' magazine.

most anything that looks like a flower finds a ready market. Of course it is time for the regular fall business to open, and it is expected that there will be a good demand, but the fact that flowers are scarce has helped things greatly and the price has been boosted accordingly. The principal demand is for funeral flowers, white and light colors going best.

Roses show considerable improvement in quality. The cool nights are doing them worlds of good. There are not enough coming in to take care of the demand, though, and the price rules fairly high for the season of the year. Beauties are scarce and sell at sight at the regularly quoted figures. Other varieties of red roses are equally scarce and in good demand. Carnations are slow in coming into bloom this year. There are few on the market, though they are of fair quality. Asters are about done, but dahlias are making up for them and are selling well and at a good price. R. B. er and grows the finest varieties in the country. The market is well stocked with cosmos. Lilies are scarce. Fine lily of the valley can be had to fill all orders.

The mum is the flower of the greatest demand now. Everybody wants it and the few blooms that come in sell at sight if they have not been ordered in advance. White and yellow are the colors. There are few pink on the market as yet. Many advance orders have been booked and it looks as if it will be some weeks before there will be anything like a surplus. Three dollars per dozen has been the highest price so far, but some extra good ones are expected to arrive soon, which will go higher.

Smilax is in fair supply, but the quality is not of the best. Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri are equal to the demand. Hardy ferns are plentiful.

Various Notes.

George E. Trome, who for many years was Fred Gear's right-hand man, has opened a retail store at 923 Vine street and will do a general retail business. He had his formal opening Saturday and his store was visited by thousands of people. With his long experience in the business, Mr. Trome ought to be very successful. He is well known among the trade and every one wishes him success.

Sunderbruch & Meier are in with a good crop of roses, and, as this flower is scarce, they are hitting the market about right.

The Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., was in with the first mums of the season. This firm is shipping some very good early ones into this market, the blooms being handled by E. G. Gillett.

Current Comment.

From what we have seen among the chrysanthemum growers, we shall this year have a large supply of good flowers for All Saints' day. The weather has been favorable all the way and, outside of the regular florists, there are some new special growers. On the Bayou St. John we found St. Armant and B. Shaky cultivating large patches of chrysanthemums. On Gentilly road Herman Dasher has nearly a square of ground of good flowers. Several other large growers also are in that neighborhood.

James Newsham is building an elevated tank to give a better supply of water. His chrysanthemums at the Half-way are good, but his main crop is at his nursery uptown, where he grows them under glass. His orchids are doing finely. He intends to take a trip to Central America. R. Lockerbie has taken charge of his uptown store, in place of R. Newsham, who is now at the Metairie Ridge Nursery.

At the Metairie Ridge Nursery I found Harry Papworth carting from his field a large lot of areca palms to be potted for winter quarters. The constant use of that stock during the winter for decoration injures the plants and the best remedy to make them come back green and healthy seems to be to let them pass the summer in the open ground. They are certainly a fine lot of plants, worth a good deal of money. Mr. Papworth is confronted just now with a problem which gives him no little trouble. The water he has been using, from some climatic change or other cause, has become salty, and he must either bore an artesian well or dig a canal for fresh water. His chrysanthemums will be in prime condition November 1. He is certainly the largest and the best grower of chrysanthemums under glass around here. One house of Adiantum hybridum and Adiantum Farleyense is in a good way to give an ample supply of nice fronds. A large plot of ground has been just plowed for hardy perennials. A fine new wagon, with plate glass sides, adds to the general reputation of the nursery, which is up-to-date in every detail.

Work on the construction of the new greenhouse at the city parks is progressing nicely. M. M. L.

FUNERAL WORK.

Trimming a Casket With Loose Flowers.

Before going into details in regard to the making of casket covers, I will suggest and describe a way of trimming a casket that will appeal to the smaller pocketbook. The plan I would suggest is trimming the casket loosely with flowers at the funeral house. Select about six or eight dozen roses, carnations or almost any flower of medium size, and a suitable green, then take some green silkline and some strong pins and proceed to the funeral house.

First form a garland around the glass plate with the flowers and green, fastening these firmly in place with the pins, which you can stick under the cloth covering of the casket. Then cover the lower end of the casket in the same manner, arranging the flowers as loosely as possible. To hold them more securely in place, draw a piece of silkline across them about every eight or ten inches, fastening the silkline on each side with a pin. Stick the pin through the cloth, allowing both the point and head to show about a quarter of an inch, and wind the string around this.

In this manner you can trim a casket nicely for a small sum as compared with the cost of the regular cover. Of course, when a customer wants a cover, do not suggest this substitute unless the customer is unwilling or unable to pay for the more expensive work.

Casket Covers.

Now for a few words about casket covers, or blankets, as they are often called. These are made in much the same way as panels, but of course on a more elaborate scale. They are made in various styles and almost any flower can be used.

Let us first consider the frame or the body of the cover. For this purpose wire frames are used by most of the florists, but a better and less expensive way is to use cloth or wire netting.

When you desire to make a cover of a small flower, such as the violet or sweet pea, you will find that a piece of dark green cloth—denim or overall goods, as it is commonly called—will work well.

Before going any farther, it will be necessary to make, out of some pieces of wood cut from strips 1x2 inches in thickness, a frame upon which to stretch the cloth. Leave the latter a little larger than the desired size of the cover and fasten it to the frame with a few tacks. Then place one end of the frame on the work-bench and the other end on a high desk-stool or stand, so you can get underneath with your hands. Have one of your assistants put the violets up into little bunches of about ten each, tying a few violet leaves in with them. Sew these small bunches to the cloth with some green string, placing the little bunches just close enough together so that they will cover well. Begin at the outside and work toward the center. No extra green or ferns will be necessary.

A very fine cover of all smilax can be made by fastening the smilax to some denim. In this style of cover the cloth should hang well over the sides of the casket. Sew or pin—with safety-pins—the smilax to the cloth in the full length of the strings. Wire netting is used in the same way, but usually for larger flowers, such as roses, carnations, asters, etc. You will find it handier to fasten the flowers to the netting with wire instead of sewing, as in the cloth. For this purpose I usually bend some 6-inch lengths of No. 24 wire into square-shaped fasteners, similar to hairpins, but about two inches wide at the top and square at the corners. These will enable you to fasten several flowers at the same time. Always insert the wire from underneath and tie at the top, so as not to leave a lot of ends to catch in everything.

It will be well to lay a few fern leaves between the flowers and the net-30x46 inches you will find will be just about right for covering the lower end of a casket.

Of course, if you are planning on making a cover with galax leaves as a background, you will have to use a wire frame, for, as in the panel, you will need moss to hold the fern-pins or toothpicks. As the wire frames used for the covers are usually made to extend over the edges of the casket, they are somewhat difficult to moss. The best way is to moss the sides first and then the top.

For large flowers, such as lilies, large chrysanthemums, etc., it is advisable, in my estimation, to use a wire frame, as you may experience trouble in fastening the flowers tightly on the netting.

It is always advisable to make a cover in two separate pieces—that is, when a whole casket is to be covered—as it is much easier to handle. When it is desired to cover a casket down to the very edge or part-way down the sides, in using cloth or netting all you have to do is to get the piece large enough. Of course, in a stiff wire frame it is desirable to have the side and end pieces separate.

As you go along making up panels and covers, it is a good plan to keep exact count of the number of flowers required for the different sizes of pieces. In this way you can soon manage to have a sort of reference list to turn to when asked the price of these designs. Of course, the quantity of flowers required depends to a large extent upon the size and closeness of the ting. There are several reasons why the cloth or the wire netting is preferable to the stiff wire cover. One of these reasons is the comparative cheapness of the cloth or netting, and another reason is the flexibility of these materials, which allows them to conform naturally with the top of the casket.

In some cases customers have even asked to have the cover laid crosswise, thus giving more the effect of a rug of flowers.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

It must be gratifying to those engaged in the commerce of floriculture to notice how rapidly flowers are taking the place not long ago occupied by imitation monstrosities of paper and cotton fabrics. The better-class hotels, of course, are often beautifully decorated with plants and flowers, but during the last few years many quite humble establishments have followed suit. The dusty imitation plants and the decrepit aspidistras have been consigned to the dustbin, and neatly arranged vases of the flowers in season, with azaleas, genistas, deutzias, lilacs, roses and chrysanthemums, show how the taste of the public has improved. Recently we noticed a very charming arrangement of flowering plants at the base of the columns supporting a balcony in a west end restaurant, white chimney campanulas and lilioms of the speciosum group being placed alternately, the pots being hidden by spreading plants of Spiraea Japonica. The captious critic may feel tempted to say that it is merely a matter of fashion, but it is impossible to believe that we can ever return to the days of paper flowers and imitation palms—quite as impossible as to think that we shall ever again fill our empty fireplaces with the paper shaving abominations of thirty years ago.—Gardeners' Magazine.

RETAILERS' ADVERTISING.

Every now and then a retail florist feels called upon to keep up an advertising contract when he really has nothing to say. To such a suggestion as to how the space may be filled to some advantage will be welcome. The accompanying illustration of an advertisement shows one used by Dobbs & Son, of Auburn, N. Y. There is good talk in this

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

A glance about The Sign of the Rose, the unique flower shop of Charles Henry Fox, makes the visitor feel that he is in London rather than in Philadelphia. The rich, old-fashioned furniture, the wainscoting, the old English clock, the open fireplace and the general absence of obtrusive business signs are all most pleasing to the fastidious flower lover. Mr. Fox's aim has been to create a quiet, restful atmosphere, where his own and his patrons' artistic ideas of flower and plant combinations should not be interfered with by the rush of American business life. The accompanying illustration shows one corner of the main salesroom as it appeared last Easter, and affords a glimpse into the inner room, where the fittings and decorations are of the same type. On the left is the open fireplace, an indispensable feature of substantial English architecture. The carved mantel over this fireplace has a bit of history attached to it that is of more than ordinary interest. When the old Lippincott mansion, at the neighboring corner of Broad and Walnut streets, was sold to make room for modern improvements, Mr. Fox bought the first selection of the Lippincott elm. The tree had been a landmark to Philadelphians for several generations. This piece of wood from the elm forms the mantel over the open fireplace in The Sign of the Rose. WINTERING FUCHSIAS.

I have a number of fuchsias left over from last spring. Would they remain in good condition if kept in a cellar over winter in a dormant or semi-dormant state?

The fuchsias should winter nicely in a cellar if kept on the dry side and just clear of freezing. Keep them in a cool and light position and water just sufficiently to keep the wood plump. A warm cellar and much moisture at the root would cause the plants to make weak, spindling shoots and would spoil them. C. W.

GROWING OF CUT FLOWERS.

Improvement in Greenhouses.

In the character of the greenhouses devoted to the cultivation of cut flowers there has been a wonderful advancement in the last twenty-five years. Twenty-five years ago 11-foot houses were in the majority. Then came houses eighteen to twenty feet in width, and when, fifteen years ago, we built a range of four iron houses, each 20x300 feet, it was considered a model range, being much in advance of anything that had been built up to that time; but during the last five years especially, there has been a marked increase in the size of the houses erected, and today we believe that the best house that can be built is one ranging anywhere from fifty to sixty feet in width. We are now building houses fifty-six feet in width, running east and west, in which we use 16x24 glass and reinforced concrete sides, and we believe that houses of this kind are the most economical in construction and operation. While houses fifty-six feet in width are seldom seen today, I do not believe that the limit of size has been reached, by any means, and I believe that the tendency will be toward still wider houses.

Styles of Construction.

Large ranges have been built of the narrower ridge and furrow connected houses, in an effort to obtain large areas under one roof, but we do not consider this style of construction as advantageous as the large, separate, wide houses. Ten years ago no one had any idea that such houses as are being built today were even practicable. Today the tendency is to gather under one roof more area than ten years ago would have comprised an entire establishment. The reason for this is the tendency toward specialization and the growing of one or two varieties of flowers by different growers, one grower devoting his attention to one variety of roses, such as American Beauty, one concern alone growing as many as a hundred thousand of this variety. The same thing applies to carnations, some concerns growing between one and two hundred thousand carnations alone; and, of course, with the increased quantities of one variety, much larger houses have become a necessity.

The tendency here in greenhouse construction is to increase the size of the house and the size of the glass, and, by the use of steel rafters, to eliminate as much woodwork as possible in order to get the maximum amount of sunlight, thus enabling the grower to produce the largest number of flowers during the short midwinter days when flowers bring the highest prices.

Cost of Production.

Today flowers are no longer considered a luxury, but rather a necessity. In this connection, we might say that few people realize what it costs to produce the finest flowers, especially during the short midwinter days. In fact, I believe that in midwinter, when flowers seem to bring phenomenal prices, they are actually produced at a loss, when one takes into consideration the capital invested, the fuel consumed, and the labor involved. Even with the prohibitive prices at the holidays, I doubt whether they return the grower an adequate recompense for the capital invested. Even in California, that land of flowers and sunshine, where nature is so kind, it is necessary to grow flowers of good quality under glass, so that there, where one would naturally expect that flowers would have little or no value, it costs considerable to produce flowers of high quality. In the east, during midwinter, when there is little or no sunshine and when the amount of fuel required is enormous, the cost of production is much greater.

Looking back at the progress that has been made during the last twenty-five years, and the improvements that have been made even during the last five years, one wonders what the next twenty-five years have in store for us. Certainly, the end is not yet, for we have reason to expect as much advancement in the future as has occurred in the last quarter of a century. Twenty-five years ago, anyone could have gone into the florists' business with little or no capital, and if careful and industrious, failure could hardly result; but today, with the large amount of capital invested in large establishments and the consequent ability to produce flowers more cheaply, larger capital is required, and first-class, up-to-date business methods must be practiced. A man cannot hope to succeed under the conditions that exist today as he would have been able to succeed in the earlier days of the business; in fact, the florists' business, as it is conducted now in the larger establishments, is fast assuming the proportions of a flower factory, and the same up-to-date business methods will have to be observed as in any other manufacturing business, to insure success.

Selection of Proper Location.

In the future, the man who will make the most marked success is the man who is located in the right place; that is to say, where labor is plentiful, where he can obtain a supply of coal at the least possible expense—preferably near a large city, where the shipping facilities are quick and frequent—where an abundant supply of water is to be had, and where the soil is first-class. One of the most important considerations is the selection of a proper location. Heretofore most greenhouse establishments have been located without much reference to this, as they have been developed from small beginnings; but the proper location is a large element to be taken into consideration if one would be successful.

I believe that today America leads the world in the production of fine cut flowers, and, while we have many large establishments that we may well be proud of, I believe that the business is only in its infancy, and that we may expect to see marvelous progress in the future.

TREATMENT OF DENDROBIUMS.

My plants of Dendrobium nobile and D. Wardianum giganteum have finished growth. Please advise me as to the treatment from now on. What temperature do they require and what amount of water?

MORRIS.

Remove the dendrobiums into a somewhat cooler house, where they can get more sunshine. A temperature of 55 degrees at night will be ample. This can be reduced a few degrees later. Keep much drier at the root, but spray the plants overhead on bright days and water just sufficiently to keep the pseudobulbs plump. Keep the plants in a dry house until the flower nodes appear, after which they can be placed in a warmer and moister house, but must not be allowed much water at the root or many of the nodes on Dendrobium nobile may produce growths instead of flowers. When you can actually see flower buds, water more freely.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Keeping Qualities.

It is not enough that we grow carnations each year equal to those produced the previous year; there must be an advance in some direction, but recollect that size is only one quality of a carnation bloom.

Better that a flower be of medium diameter and possess lasting qualities than that it be extra large but sleepy on short acquaintance. You may perhaps recall instances when at exhibitions the winner of some much-coveted prize kept awake only long enough for the judges to go around. Whether this is or is not all right on such occasions, is not the question at this time, but any one will agree that the flower-buying public is not eager for that class of stock.

Sleepiness may be traced to several causes, the most prevalent being overdevelopment, heavy feeding or unwise use of fertilizing chemicals, improper treatment after cutting and rough handling.

Overdevelopment can easily be guarded against by cutting the blooms when about three-quarters out, allowing them to finish in water and to reach the buyer in the best condition. The sooner they are in his hands after twelve hours of standing in water the better.

Treatment Before Cutting.

Heavy feeding is very often the outcome of a desire to increase the size of bloom on a batch of plants which have been giving small, inferior flowers. This behavior is very likely due to an excess of nitrogen in the soil, causing a strong growth of plant at the expense of bloom. In such case it is obviously wrong treatment to apply either strong liquid manure or a solution of nitrate of soda. The need is for either potash or phosphoric acid or both, and while these can be supplied in chemical form, there is more or less danger connected with their use.

The only time I would advise the employment of chemical fertilizers in the bench is near the close of the season, and then merely as an experiment. Unleached hardwood ashes furnish potash in a most desirable form and also contain lime, which is beneficial. Bone meal of a reliable brand carries a fair percentage of phosphoric acid, besides being a slow-consuming natural plant food. Use these as alternate top dressings at intervals of ten days or two weeks, as circumstances require.

Treatment After Cutting.

As soon as severed from the plant, a flower can no longer receive moisture from the soil and therefore must depend upon an artificial supply carried to it through its stem, but if this be exposed to the air long enough for the sap exuding from the cut end to evaporate or dry, its system of water pipes becomes clogged, with the result that the bloom suffers.

Get the stems into water "directly if not sooner" after cutting, and provide vases deep enough so that the stems may be immersed two-thirds their length. When cutting, it is a good plan to remove the two lower sets of leaves. Place the vases of bloom out of drafts, in a temperature about equal to that where grown, and allow the temperature to fall gradually eight or ten degrees. Handled thus, stock is in prime condition after twelve hours to ship or fill retail orders.

The rough handling to which stock is subjected cannot all be charged to the express companies. Allowing that they do their share, much carelessness is displayed in packing, and who has not seen boxes of flowers thrown into the delivery wagon on end, side, top or bottom—it mattered not which to the driver? It is up to you to stop it.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Autumn Temperature.

Up to this date, October 14, we have had no frost severe enough to kill vegetation outside, and to those who grow only low temperature stock this mild weather must have been a great temptation to put off firing until colder weather sets in. While we have had no nights cold enough to do actual damage to the plants in the houses, yet it is a mistake to delay putting on the night man and starting up the fires until everything is actually frozen up. The plants should be making rapid strides now, and they cannot do so unless the temperature is kept at a proper level.

We have heard it argued that during a bright, warm day the sun warms up the soil and the boards, etc., that these in turn will throw off warmth most of the night and that the houses will be low only a few hours. That is a mistaken idea. If the day has been warm, in fact warm enough to cause flagging, it is a mistake to allow the temperature at night to drop below the ideal growing temperature. The combination of two extremes does not produce an ideal condition, by any means. The plants will freshen up in a temperature of 40 degrees, but that does not necessarily mean that they have recovered from the effects of the flagging of the previous day.

One of the Rice & Co. Wedding Outfits.

One of the Rice & Co. Wedding Outfit.

It would be far better, after a warm day, to hold the temperature most of the night a couple of degrees above the normal night temperature. It is only by making progress that the plants will really overcome the effects of flagging or any other check. After such a day the ventilators should not be closed down tight until the temperature is down to normal, with a steam pipe running. Our method is to lower the ventilators to about two inches. Then, if necessary, we turn on one steam pipe in a house of medium width. If the temperature outside drops so low that one pipe will not hold the temperature up to the mark, we close the ventilators down tight and after that turn on more pipes, as may be needed. It is good policy to run a crack of air on the houses whenever possible, but it would be folly and a waste of fuel to run several pipes in a house and keep the ventilators up.

If the temperature outside hovers around 48 to 50 degrees and you need no steam to keep the houses up, it is a good plan to run the steam around a couple of times during the night anyway. It will keep the air moving and prevent the dampness from settling down on the plants.

CAMELLIAS.

Camellias, at one time universal favorites, are but little seen in the markets today. We are pleased, nevertheless, to find an increasing call for them at the better class of stores. Plants carrying a few flowers make exceedingly useful stock for Christmas trade, and we expect to see a very large demand for them the coming winter.

The treatment recommended for azaleas will suit camellias well, but they seem to prefer heavier compost, and the addition of a little well decayed manure will prove beneficial. Camellias will not stand forcing like azaleas. Such treatment will cause a loss of flower buds. A sufficiently high temperature is 50 degrees at night and they will winter in one 10 degrees lower. When making their growth they enjoy frequent syringings and a warm, moist atmosphere.

THE WEDDING OUTFITS.

The photographs reproduced on this and the opposite page show the great progress that has been made in up-to-date accessories for the decorator, in reproducing almost any effect desired in enameled wicker or willow ware. These wedding outfits, which are made in several styles, are made by M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, who have the reputation of producing some of the most practical and original ideas in the florists' supply business.

To give an idea of the size of these wedding outfits, the following dimensions are given: Height of large posts with globes, nine and one-half feet; height of gate posts, four feet, without the vases; width of the entire wedding gates and posts complete, about eighteen feet. The set is so constructed that it can be readily taken apart in sections, and used in many different combinations. Where space is limited the 4-foot posts and gates can be used, producing a pleasing effect for a house wedding, as shown in the illustration in which the kneeling stool is shown. The outfits are made both solid and open, and the sections are interchangeable, so that a decorator who possesses two outfits can create with them a sufficient number of combinations so that it has the value of a new set for every decoration. Electric lights can be used in the globes on top of the posts, if desired. The globes and vases are detachable and can be lifted off and plants or flowers used in their place.

Rice & Co. state that the first of these outfits made, the ones illustrated, were turned out to order for a leading retail florist.

HARDY AQUATICS.

What do you consider the best aquatic plants for our short seasons in North Dakota? I want to use something of that sort in my park work next year.

C. E. M.

There are quite a few aquatics which will succeed well in North Dakota, and which would form attractive features in private gardens or public parks. A few reliable and easily cultivated sorts are: Nymphaea alba, European water lily; N. Marliacea, in pink, yellow, rose and white colors; N. odorata, fragrant pond lily, in variety; N. tuberosa rosea, pink; N. Laydekeri, in several colors. Nelumbium speciosum, or Egyptian lotus, with magnificent flowers and superb foliage, is worthy of a trial. It is perfectly hardy, as are other members of the lotus family.

There are many other aquatics suitable to use on the edges of ponds in which you may be growing water lilies. A few easily grown sorts are: Myriophyllum proserpinacoides, parrot's feather; Limncharis Humboldtii, water poppy; Caltha palustris, marsh marigold; Peltandra Virginica, water arum; Pontederia cordata, pickerel weed; Sagittaria Montevicensis, giant arrow-head; Limnanthemum Indicum, snowflake; Jussieuia longifolia, and others. All these will be found of easy culture, but do not mix them indiscriminately among the nymphæas. Keep them near the edges of the ponds.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

OCTOBER FROST.

This has been another excellent season for the growers of early chrysanthemums, the first earlies realizing as good prices in practically every market as they ever did. The season of maximum prices for the earliest varieties was not quite so long as last year, for the second early sorts came along quicker than they did a year ago, when the way they hung back was a great disappointment to those who did not have stocks of the earliest kinds.

This year, as for the two preceding seasons, Monrovia has been the leading early sort, for yellow sells better than any other color. But October Frost, for white, has proved a fit companion. This was the first year it has been grown in any quantity and by a large number of growers. While there have been some failures with it, due to the selection of the wrong bud, still the average grower has had excellent success with it and has had it early and in shape to bring excellent prices. These two early sorts, Monrovia and October Frost, have proved especially valuable to the vegetable growers who use mums for a fall crop, as they had these varieties cut before the middle of October and the space available for other crops. Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., with whom the October Frost mum originated, says that in taking the bud it is a decided advantage to secure the early one, as the flowers from such are much larger and more double than from the later buds.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Shading the Blooms.

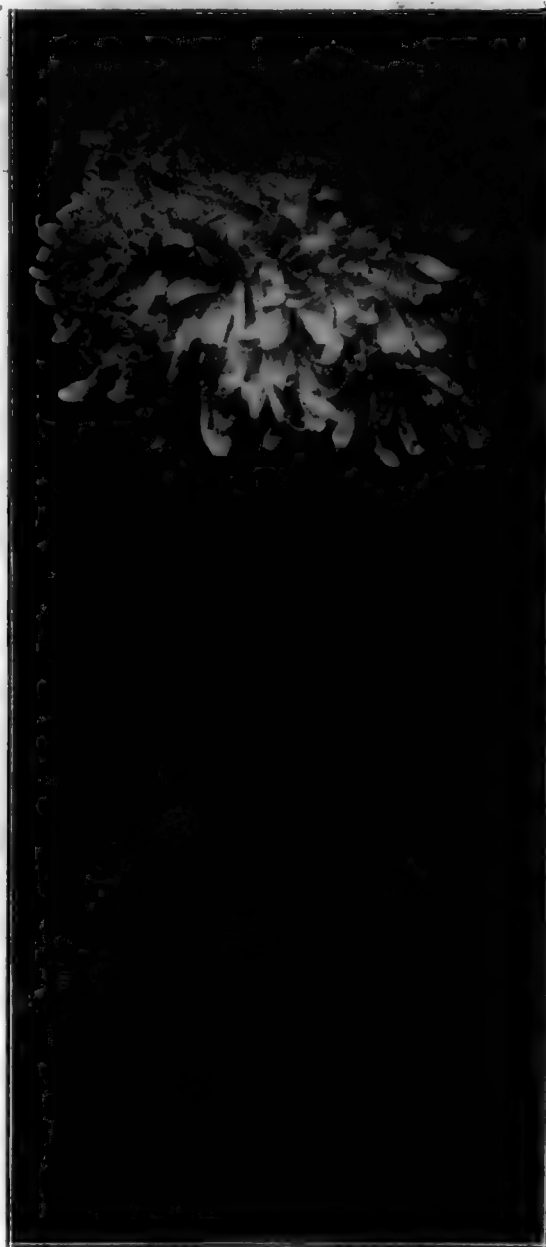

There appears to be in some quarters a prejudice against shading the opening blooms, but why I cannot say. Blooms grown naturally, that is, not fed to any extent and running several blooms to a plant, need no shading, because they are harder grown and the small flowers have no superabundance of petals to lie on each other and rot. But plants that have been heavily fed have large and comparatively soft petals and must be protected from the sun, at least in New Jersey if not in other sections of the country. It will be observed that in spite of all one can do to keep the atmosphere dry and moving, some moisture will settle on the petals. When the sun comes up strong early in the morning and hits these flowers, moisture laden as they are, damping of the petals is inevitable.

For a little while papers or cheesecloth spread over the kinds that are just opening will be all right, but as soon as everything shows color I always spray the whole roof with lime or whiting and am not bothered much with petals damping afterwards. Growers along the coast line are bothered a great deal more with damping than those in the interior, because the sea fogs that occur night after night leave the flowers dripping with water. The present season, so far, happily has been free from heavy fog, but

I have seen in some years a loss equal to fifty per cent from the fogs alone. We may, as some experts claim, have the advantage of the moist atmosphere in the summer, but we certainly are handicapped late in October by that selfsame moist atmosphere.

Cutting the Blooms.

There is something to learn in cutting chrysanthemum flowers, as there is in cutting any flowers to have them just right. We are none of us proof against temptation when the first flowers are coming in and the market will take the flowers at a good price, whether they are finished or not, but from now on the market is well supplied and flowers should be left to finish on the plant. When the center of the flower is still hard and green, let the flower stay till the color is even all through.

If the stem happens to be cut at a joint, where the wood is hard, it is often difficult to get the water up the stem. Make a second cut before putting the stems in water and also see that the jar is deep enough so that the stems will be held erect to take the water right up to the flower. A stem bent over cannot take up the water and the flower will of necessity wilt. Such kinds as Merza, that make a very hard stem at the bottom, should be cut sufficiently high so that the water will have a chance to get up the stem.

If the flowers are to travel any distance they should have twenty-four hours in water, so that they will start on their journey with the stems full of water.

Packing.

In packing flowers some care should be exercised, so that the product of the labor of months shall not be rendered unsalable. Some exhibitors send their flowers out in high boxes with the flowers erect and tied to wires. Such a system is too cumbersome and expensive for commercial use. Make pillows of excelsior covered with paper and have a pillow under the neck of each row of flowers and lay the flowers down. If a little tissue paper is used between each flower it will prevent rubbing and if slats are nailed across the stems to keep them from threshing around, a box so packed can travel in fairly good shape.

If, as sometimes happens, the box falls into the hands of a fiend in the guise of an expressman who plays ping-pong with it, and tries how many times he can turn it over in a given time, no system of packing can stand it. There is a special corner reserved for that kind of expressman in Carmody's health resort.

SPLITTING OF DUCKHAM BUDS.

Please let me know what is the cause of William Duckham chrysanthemums splitting at the bud. Is there any way to prevent it? Will the buds which are now split amount to anything?

MORRIS.

If Morris will look up the notes on feeding in the REVIEW of October 3, page 8, he will see why his Duckhams split at the bud. It is due to an excess of sap pumped up to the flower. When the bud is small it cannot take all the sap, and trouble ensues. The buds will finish satisfactorily and the petals will drop down enough to hide the disfiguring cut in the stem. Here and there a bud will be bent over and useless, but most of them will develop flowers. The finest flowers I have seen exhibited were some of them hanging by almost a thread. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

For the approaching meeting and exhibition at New York the Lord & Burnham Co. offers a gold medal for the best new chrysanthemum never before exhibited in this country.

Work of the Committees.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—No. 20, dark old rose, Japanese, exhibited by C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored eighty-five points, exhibition scale. DAVID FRASER, Sec'y.

NEVADA, MO.—G. P. Kaupp & Son are erecting a greenhouse which will be larger than any of their present houses, and which will be so arranged that a two-horse wagon can be driven through it in hauling soil. The new house will also be equipped with an automatic watering device.

MORE AIR WANTED.

I enclose some leaves of the Bride rose and would like to know if the yellowed condition is caused by too frequent fumigating with sulphur on the pipes, or if it is the result of too much water. It has not been at all serious, but the trouble is growing worse and the leaves finally drop off the plants. J. F. D.

The apparent cause of these bushes dropping their leaves, from the indications furnished, is want of ventilation. There is no sign of their suffering from overwatering, or the reverse, to cause such an effect. The texture of the leaves shows that the atmosphere has been too close.

Extra strong fumigating has a very bad effect on rose foliage and should always be avoided. Fumigate periodically, say once a week, and if this is persisted in a light fumigation will suffice.

Keep on plenty of air both night and day, even at the expense of firing, and be careful in watering for some time, till the plants have got over the period when nature calls for a rest. RIBES.

ROSE DOROTHY PERKINS.

Among rambler roses Dorothy Perkins is one of the best for clothing a fence, wall or unsightly object, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle. As with climbing roses in general, plants under three years old transplant more successfully than older plants and are capable of making a good display in less time. The plants should be obtained in October, or early in the following month. As it is always advisable to trench the soil for roses and allow time afterwards for the settling of the soil before planting is commenced, the work of trenching should be undertaken in September. If the trenching is three spits in depth, place about four inches of rich manure, not greatly decayed, two spits deep, say eighteen inches, and if the trenching should only permit of two spits being taken out, put the manure at the bottom after loosening the base with a digging fork or mattock. A small quantity of weak manure should be mixed with the top spit in each case. See that the roses, when they come to hand, do not suffer from dryness at the root, and after cutting back the strongest roots a little, dip all the roots into a puddle of clay and water, adding a little cow dung if this is procurable. In planting a rose tree spread out the roots in all directions and cover them with some of the finer soil; partially fill in and make firm with the feet, then complete the filling in and again make the soil firm. In planting these climbers and any roses that are not growing on their own roots, bury the point of union of rose and stock two inches deep, and those on their own roots a little deeper than when they were growing in the nursery. If the soil be dry at the time of planting, afford the plants a good soaking with clear water; and before hard weather sets in, apply a strawy mulch over the roots. Cut back the plants to five or six inches in the following April and encourage growth in after years as much as possible.

POOR VENTILATION.

We have a number of plants going off as if of low vitality. They don't bloom much and many shoots die at the top and wither. The roses were planted in May in new soil, one-fourth cow manure in the soil. Can you tell us what the trouble is? J. C. F. C.

From a careful examination of the specimen sent it appears as if the atmosphere in which it was grown must have been close and damp, as the plant is suffering from the disease known as anthracnose. Although this condition may not be the cause of the disease, it certainly fosters it, and so long as the condition exists there is no chance for recovery.

Keep the house at night at a temperature of 56 to 58 degrees, with ample ventilation, allowing it to run up to 85 degrees during bright sunshine, but with plenty of air on.

At this season great and extra care is required in gauging the supply of water, as the plants are not able to use much by reason of the sluggishness of root action and the decrease in evaporation. The soil is not of a really good quality for roses, being deficient in fiber and clay and possessing few of the constituents required by roses. RIBES.

WINTERING WATER HYACINTHS

I would like to know how I can carry through our North Dakota winter a lot of water hyacinths which I have had growing in a small fountain all summer. They have not bloomed, but have grown finely. Is there any way in which I can keep them over winter and have them in shape to put out in the spring? C. E. M.

The water hyacinths, or eichhornias, can be carried over winter successfully in tubs of water, in which they may be stood quite thickly in a moderately warm greenhouse. If you have a tank which gets good light, they will do well in it. Both Eichhornia speciosa and E. azurea (lavender blue) increase in size rapidly, a small plant often growing several feet across in a season. As is well known, these pretty aquatics have proved a terrible pest in Florida waterways, where they seriously impede traffic, and large sums are being spent to keep them within bounds. C. W.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Cannas.

Frosts now will have cut cannas down in most localities, unless it may be in some of the warmer and more southerly states. Cut the tops off a few inches above the ground and allow them to stand a few days before lifting. The stems will bleed considerably where they are cut off and it is not good policy to dig the roots until they have dried. Let the roots stand in the sun a few hours to dry out somewhat. Do not shake too much soil away. They will keep all the better with a fair amount of loam attached. Some growers place them under the benches in a cool greenhouse. The water dripping on them may create mold in the winter months and start premature growth if the house is warmer. Shelves in a shed or cellar are excellent storing places, a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees being ample, indeed, being preferable to one 10 degrees higher. Be sure the labels are tied securely to each plant if you grow a number of sorts, for a mixture spoils your bedding.

Dahlias.

The first breath of frost blackens the dahlias, most gorgeous and increasingly popular of late summer flowers. Do not be in too great a hurry about cutting them down. It is a great mistake to hoe off the tops level with the ground as soon as frost has struck them. Far better let them stand a few days and allow the stems to dry up before doing so. Do not cut down nearer than six inches of the ground. Shake away all soil from the tubers and let them dry well in the sun before storing them. A cellar or shed where potatoes will keep well is ideal for dahlias. They must be quite dry at the root. Any moisture is ruinous. They are also better in an unheated cellar. The tubers will shrivel badly in a furnace-heated cellar. Better have them in one which occasionally goes below freezing. If the roots are stored in boxes or barrels of dry sand, sawdust, refuse hemp seed, dry earth or any similar material they will take no harm.

Gladioli.

While the lifting of gladioli is less urgent than that of dahlias and cannas, it should be attended to sometime in October. Gladioli, like montbretias, will winter with a little winter covering and are not by any means tender bulbs. They are, however, better lifted and replanted yearly. If they can be dug and left on the surface of the ground to dry a few days, all the better. In a treacherous climate, this is hardly possible, but if laid on boards in a sunny spot and some awning or other covering placed over them on cold nights, they will soon dry and ripen sufficiently to allow of the stems being cut off a few inches above the bulb. It is unwise to cut the stems down too far while green. Shelves in a cool shed or cellar make excellent storage places. Where many are grown it is customary to stack them in shallow crates. If you wish to increase your stock of any particular varieties, save all the little bulbs or corms and plant next season. These will bloom usually in a couple of years.

Caladium Esculentum.

If you only grow a limited quantity of Caladium esculentum it is far the better plan to buy a few tubers at some seed store each spring. If, however, you desire to keep some roots, lift as advised for dahlias and dry well in the sun, pack the tubers in perfectly dry sand in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees and they will come through all right.

Lemon-scented Verbena.

Perhaps you have an all-sufficient stock of lemon-scented verbenas. If not, it will pay you to lift a few old roots. Never mind if they have had a little frost. Pack them quite thickly in boxes of earth and store in a cool house, where they are just clear of freezing. Keep fairly dry all winter and in early spring put them in a warm, moist house. They will soon give you a fine crop of cuttings, which will root readily if rubbed off with a heel.

Hydrangeas.

It was remarked in recent notes that hydrangeas should be kept somewhat on the dry side to assist in ripening the wood and that a little frost would be beneficial. We all have seen painful effects of October frosts on plants with green foliage and soft, sappy wood.

While a temperature of 28 or 30 degrees would do no harm, if the temperature should suddenly drop to 20 degrees, as sometimes happens, probabilities are that any plants not well ripened would have their flower buds all killed. Better be on the safe side and if your plants are still outdoors get them together in a batch and be prepared to throw some covering over them on frosty nights.

Hardy Perennials.

Much outdoor work now demands attention. Many of our customers, having had their tender bedding plants cut down, are clamoring to have the beds filled with bulbs. There is no immediate hurry for this work, for the bulbs are just as well off if not planted until the last of the month. More and more small growers are planting collections of peonies, phloxes, larkspurs and other hardy herbaceous perennials. There could be no better time than the present to do any replanting of these, either for yourself or your customers. The average retail florist does not half appreciate the value of these plants. By planting a bed or row of a few of the more useful sorts he can depend on a good supply of flowers from May until October. In replanting be sure to give the stock well spaded and enriched ground and plant firmly. A winter mulch of some sort is also advantageous to this class of plants.

Trees and Shrubs.

A great amount of planting of trees and shrubs which is usually crowded into the strenuous spring months would be better done during the latter half of October and first half of November. There are many advantages in planting at this season. The ground is more moist than in the spring, the sun less powerful and roots less likely to become dried up. Shrubs moved at this season make a much better start in spring than those replanted at that time. All fruit trees, except peaches, are better planted in the fall even in a northern state, provided they are planted firmly and sufficiently early to allow the roots to make a little start before the ground is sealed by frost. The same applies to about all deciduous trees and most of the shrubs. Some subjects, like Viburnum plicatum, the Japanese snowball, are better spring planted, but as a rule better results may be had by doing more of this work now and less in the spring. Nurserymen can more readily make delivery now and you are more likely to get just what you want than in the overwhelmingly busy spring season.

Brief Reminders.

Do not give mignonette too much fire heat; 40 to 45 degrees at night is ample. Attend to disbudding and give a little weak liquid stimulant where plants are coming into flower.

As your early mums are cut be sure to reserve an ample supply of stock plants of the best sorts. Throw away any kinds which do not do well with you. It is a mistake to grow too many varieties.

Do not forget the shading for the mums. We get very hot days in October and if petals are damp in the early part of the day through false economy in withholding fire heat, scalding will result when the sun strikes them.

Cinerarias are now growing rapidly. Look out for aphids among them. Keep renewing the tobacco stems among them.

Sow candytuft or sweet alyssum on the edges of any beds where there is a chance for them to flower, or give a separate piece of bench to them in a cool house.

Wash some of the heavy shading from palms and other foliage plants. Do not remove it entirely, for the sun will still be too strong for many of them.

Have protecting material in readiness for coldframes and if breakages in glass are not repaired, attend to them at once. Let the greenhouses have an overhauling at the same time to make them tight.

DUTCHESS HORTICULTURISTS.

MONTREAL.Current Comment.

Everybody reports business to be rushing, with all kinds of orders. Flowers are much better in quality and quantity, though carnations are not yet at their best. Mums are in all the stores, though they are expensive as yet. Violets and valley are seen in large quantities and one sees occasionally some splendid orchids.

The weather has been very disagreeable, rain nearly all the time and a few hail storms. We have had some sharp frost and all outdoor plants and flowers are now things of the past.

Campbell's are having their large store thoroughly cleaned and rearranged, white being used for the woodwork, etc. It promises to be one of the handsomest stores in Montreal. They have had a few large orders for balls and dinners and can boast of having some of the finest mums in town.

Miss Murray has had one of her windows beautifully decorated with violets and valley, with a background of ferns, while another window showed huge bunches of American Beauties.

Miss Carmichael's little store looks fine this week. She has a large number of good ferns and palms and reports business to be very good.

E. Gurnae has opened a wholesale store near the Grand Trunk station.

We regret to report the sad bereavement which befell F. C. Smith, gardener to Sir William Van Horne, October 11 by the death of his wife. Besides three little girls, she leaves three sisters, one of whom is Mrs. J. Bennett.

Miss L. S. Bennett has returned from England after an absence of sixteen months. She will enter her father's business in the near future.

We extend our congratulations to Alex Lee, gardener to T. Dawes, on his recent marriage. The happy couple have settled in Lachine for the winter.

TOMMY.

REMEDY FOR SPOT.

Can you tell us if there is any remedy for the spot on violets? We planted them in August, in benches, and they did well at first, but now some plants are leafless. We inclose some leaves. The violets were shipped from Michigan. The varieties are Imperial, Marie Louise, Lady Campbell, Dorsett and Princess of Wales. The first ones got the spot badly.

E. B.

Well, the spot is not a pleasant thing to be up against and E. B. has my sympathy, but I judge by the sample sent and the query that there is no hope of any profit and, as a rule, the best thing one can do is to pull and burn all the plants, leaves, etc., in the boiler, sweeten up the house and use it for some other crop. However, if you wish to take the time and trouble to see if you can overcome the disease, you will have to pick off and burn every sign of spot. Then the first clear morning, when the plants can dry off quickly, take the hose and wash each plant off thoroughly with a fairly strong stream, as strong as you can use without injuring the plants. Scatter air-slaked lime between the plants and work it lightly into the soil. Give all the air and light possible. Watch closely, and remove and burn daily all signs of spot and you may be able to carry part of the plants through, although I very much doubt if you can get any profit from the house. Where you have to remove all the leaves, you might as well pull the plants first as last, unless they were in a very thrifty, growing condition. I wonder if you did not have your house too close, damp and untidy and then fumigated heavily with tobacco stems. This will often cause spot.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

THE SALEM CONSERVATORIES.

The accompanying illustration from a photograph shows a partial view of the Salem Conservatories, Salem, Va., operated by James J. Curran, formerly superintendent for the United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y. This place is beautifully situated, on the banks of the Roanoke river one mile from the courthouse in the town of Salem, on the Norfolk & Western and Tidewater railroads. It consists of 40,000 feet of glass, devoted to growing roses, carnations, palms, ferns, etc., with six acres of nursery grounds. Mr. Curran does a wholesale and retail trade, shipping to Richmond, Philadelphia, Washington and intermediate points. He also does a retail seed trade. He reports roses as doing remarkably well, the young stock producing a fine cut. Carnation planting was finished September 1, the young plants showing up well. Mums also are giving promise of being early and of fine grade. Business is good in Virginia and all through the south the trade is only at a beginning.

THE WEEKLY

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01.

Officers for 1907: President, William J. Stewart, Boston; vice-president, John Westcott, Philadelphia; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

You should not only have a printed letter-head, but it should be of good quality.

If you send an editor a newspaper, mark conspicuously the item you want him to see; many editors' eyesight is bad.

Do today what might be put off till tomorrow and you can drive the business instead of letting the business drive you.

CORRESPONDENTS will add to the accuracy of their reports if they will state the day of the month, instead of using such expressions as "last Tuesday," etc.

THE motto of the American Rose Society is, "A rose for every home, a bush for every garden," and its admonition, "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good."

THE long step you take every time you pass that muddy spot in the greenhouse path soon consumes more energy than it would take to get a shovelful of ashes and fix the walk.

THE Annual Proceedings and Bulletin of the American Rose Society for 1907 has been mailed to members. It is a neatly printed pamphlet, containing a report of the Washington meeting and exhibition, constitution, by-laws, etc.

BEAR in mind that you can almost invariably judge of a man's character as well as of his prosperity by the cleanliness and order that prevail in his place of business. On this evidence what will be the public's estimate of you?

BUYERS of green are scouring the Wisconsin woods, but as yet little can be said as to the season's supply and prices, so much depends on the weather, but each year it is necessary to go farther afield for lycopodium, so that there is little prospect that the market ever again will be flooded.

W. F. KASTING is a candidate for city treasurer of Buffalo at the approaching election.

W. J. GODFREY, the well-known chrysanthemum grower at Exmouth, England, is also something of an authority on sweet peas. He says the variety George Herbert is one of the best he has found, although the National Sweet Pea Society prefers John Ingman.

THE PARCELS POST.

The new postmaster general has set about making his administration memorable by establishing a sure enough parcels post in this country.

"Two interests are opposing the extension of parcels post—the express companies and the country retail merchants," said Mr. Meyer in an interview October 12. "The latter fear that the mail order houses will derive a benefit to their own disadvantage. It is in connection with the country retail merchants that I desire to speak especially. I propose to recommend the establishment of a parcels post in rural routes which will meet the objections of the small storekeepers and retailers.

"This will be a boon to our rural population and to the storekeeper, so the latter can receive his orders by mail or telephone and dispatch the desired merchandise by the rural carrier. The farmer will be saved from hitching up his horse and losing the time he needs for planting or harvesting his crops, and it will enable the storekeeper to increase his sales and meet the requirements of modern trade.

"If my recommendations are adopted it will cost 12 cents a pound for the mail order house to send parcels to the rural delivery patron from any city post-office, while for delivery from the distributing office of the rural route, or if mailed by any patron of any rural route for delivery to a patron on the same route, or at the distributing office of said route, the charge will be but 5 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound up to eleven pounds, or 25 cents for a package weighing eleven pounds."

DON'T LOSE IT.

You may have a little surplus stock in some line—not much, perhaps, but enough to cut quite a hole in the profit made on the whole lot if this little surplus is lost. But it isn't necessary to lose it. Nearly always there is someone, somewhere, who needs just that little batch of plants. You can reach that someone, everywhere, through a classified advertisement in the REVIEW, at a cost of 10 cents a line. Frequently a 30-cent advertisement will sell $30, $60 or more of stock, depending on its seasonableness and abundance. Everyone reads the REVIEW's classified ads. Don't let the little surplus go to waste.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Hugo Book.

Hugo Book, of Worcester, Mass., is dead, following an operation for appendicitis, performed at St. Vincent's hospital. He was 50 years of age, a native of Germany and of excellent family. He was well schooled and a thorough master of the trade. He had built up a fine business, which is left to his widow and three children, the eldest 15 years of age.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week we were almost too excited about what the Cubs were doing to the Tigers to pay much attention to business, but nevertheless the demand was fairly active and Friday and Saturday were big days, with the market well cleaned up by the local buying Sunday morning.

This week opened with a market which was almost a duplicate of the Monday market for the last three weeks. The receipts were decidedly light and demand, which was active, was made to appear exceedingly heavy by the running about which it was necessary to do to find the stock to fit the orders. The fact that Tuesday found the market much easier indicates that it was not so much a shortage in production as it was a disinclination on the part of the growers to cut on Sunday. For three weeks we have had a remarkably stiff market each Monday, with increasing supplies as the week progressed and no shortage whatever. The increased demand on Monday has largely come from the fact that the retailers have had good Sunday business, and have sold out whatever was left from Saturday. Still Friday and Saturday are the largest days in the week.

The crops of Beauty are lighter than they were and several growers concur in the report that all rose crops are on the downward grade. There were, however, even on Monday enough roses of all kinds, except Beauties and possibly white. Maids are in large supply. There is a much greater variety of roses offered in this market this year than in previous seasons.

Carnations are excellent in quality and the production is steadily increasing. Demand is good and on Monday a large number of orders were cut or turned down, especially for white.

Chrysanthemums have come on rapidly in the last week and prices have gone down considerably, although a few fancy blooms still bring $4 per dozen. All sizes and colors are now to be had in quantity, but the best sellers are yellows at from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen.

Home grown single violets have come to reinforce the large supplies of New York doubles. Quality is improving with cooler weather, but there is as yet no special demand. Lily of the valley is abundant. Easter lilies are less plentiful and higher in price. A few callas are arriving. There were large supplies of outdoor stock at the first of the week, but quality has become poor and the end is close at hand.

Boxwood is again in the market in quantity and all greens are abundant. Smilax is cheaper. Ferns are excellent. There is a good call for wild smilax. Bunches of plumosus are scarce.

Club Meeting.

rists' Club October 10, the west side being represented by its four leading retailers. Among the visitors present were E. Bollinger, president of the Horticultural Society of Lake Forest; J. W. Scharfenberger, Lake Forest; W. P. Longland, Lake Geneva; Henry W. Illenberger, Lake Geneva; F. R. Kuehne, Lake Geneva, and A. J. Smith, Lake Geneva.

John Vander Wal, S. P. Fischer, Frank Beu and Fred Shield were elected to membership and applications were received from Walter Scott, of La Grange, and Frank Mitsch, of Evanston. F. F. Benthey, for the trustees, reported the selection of E. F. Winterson to act as treasurer until the successor to the late Edgar Sanders shall be elected. E. F. Winterson and C. H. Fisk were nominated for treasurer, the election to take place at the next meeting, November 14.

George Asmus, manager of the flower show November 6 to 12, reported splendid prospects, indications pointing to more exhibits than in any previous year. A. J. Smith, of Lake Geneva, said that not enough classes were provided solely for private gardeners, and this precipitated a general discussion of ways and means of making the show bigger and better than ever. P. J. Foley, for the Foley Manufacturing Co., and John Degnan, for the E. F. Winterson Co., tendered special prizes for the private gardener classes, which the premium committee accepted. The final premium list will be out in a few days and will embody a number of the suggestions made. For the benefit of the retail florists who will exhibit, Manager Asmus stated that the rules will provide that any exhibitor may take at the exhibit all the orders he can for future delivery.

Randall Increases Capital.

The A. L. Randall Co. October 15 certified to the Secretary of State at Springfield as to the increase of its authorized capital stock from $10,000 to $50,000. A. L. Randall, president of the corporation, states that the increase in capital does not indicate any change in the company's affairs except the capitalization of its surplus, for which the company now has employment as a result of the rapidly increasing business in the supply department.

Flower Show Matters.

Preparations for the big annual exhibition at the Coliseum November 6 to 12 are progressing favorably, the greatest need now being for workers who can give some time to the show. There is work for everyone. Those wanting some of it should apply to George Asmus, manager; Jens Jensen, chairman committee on decorations; A. Lange, chairman committee on general advertising, or E. A. Kanst, assistant secretary. Mr. Asmus, especially, will be able to provide a means for the enthusiastic to help along the cause.

The quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society was set for October 15, but in its stead a meeting of the executive committee was held, devoted to perfecting details for the show. All reports were favorable.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling says there will be no more stenciling on the ends of his boxes, the buyers having called his attention to the fact that the stenciling makes it impossible to use the box for the retailers' own shipments. Incidentally it is worth noting that Mr. Amling was the first shipper in this market to stencil his boxes.

Harry Manheim is no longer with J. A. Budlong.

Vaughan & Sperry say they already have booked several orders for All Saints' day shipment to New Orleans, and N. J. Wieter says he has one order for 500 white mums for the same occasion.

Some of the wholesale houses are reported as saying they are not interested in the scramble for violet business which is pretty sure to come off as soon as supplies really get under way, but Weiland & Risch say they think the violet business just a little more desirable than most other lines, and they intend to push it with the best of them this season.

John Poehlmann, president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., says he thinks the market has got beyond the point of any slackening in demand until Lent. He says he looks for steadily increasing business from now on and calls attention to the fact that the roses are much better than they were at this date last year.

L. Baumann & Co. report moss wreaths as scarce and say that the price in Germany is going up every day.

T. F. McGrath and wife, of Northampton, Mass., are the guests of W. E. Lynch, vice-president of the E. H. Hunt corporation. Mrs. McGrath is Mr. Lynch's sister.

C. L. Washburn says that October 14 was one of the heaviest shipping days in many months, Bassett & Washburn having had fifty-six orders on their book at the time packing commenced.

There was a heavy frost on the morning of October 14, which finished most outdoor flowers.

Seitz & Nordell, who purchased the John C. Ure plant, have left the old stand and are rapidly completing new houses and a store at the northeast corner of Greenlake and Evanston avenues. The store will be a model of its kind.

H. E. Klunder is preparing to open a retail store, using the old State street fixtures, at the corner of Forty-third street and Drexel boulevard.

G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., visited Columbus, O., and Pittsburg last week.

E. Wienhoeber reports business good. For instance, on Saturday three wedding jobs and a funeral called for attention at the same time. A large number of weddings have been handled this month.

The George Wittbold Co. has given up the store at 54 and 56 Wabash avenue, used during the rush of the decorating season, but will retain the basement. On Sunday, October 13, the firm redecorated the Field store and several other good jobs are on this week. The lobby of the Auditorium theater has been made into a bower of autumn foliage, the foliage being fireproof and wired onto branches by the Wittbold employees. Tim Beaver is now head decorator.

Mrs. George Collins, wife of the foreman of the Peter Reinberg plant, has been ill at the Ravenswood hospital for some days and her recovery is despaired of.

While Peter Reinberg's crop of Beauties is not now as heavy as it has been, the quality is worthy of special mention.

Miss Clara Lackey and George Reinberg were married Wednesday evening, October 16, and are now in Colorado on their honeymoon.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. were cut out of October Frost and Monrovia by October 12 and that the mid-season sorts are coming on rapidly. The firm is well pleased with the mum season to date. Lady Harriet as grown by them is especially good.

E. E. Pieser, treasurer of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says that the season is one of the few in his recollection when all the summer flowers were still available at a date late enough to see all colors of mums in large supply.

L. Coatsworth went to New Castle October 15 to remain until Saturday, when an auction sale will be held to dispose of the eleven lots adjoining the Benthay-Coatsworth greenhouses, which Mr. Coatsworth has platted as the Ravenswood addition to New Castle.

Ed Benthay bowls Thursday evening with a north side club. In twelve games he has made an average of 181.

J. A. Budlong has an especially heavy cut of Maids now on.

Matt Mann is beginning to cut callas from bulbs which he is growing for the sixth successive year.

John Zech is again able to be on duty.

John Degnan was at Joliet October 14 and reports the establishments there looking good.

C. W. McKellar says the orchid stock is now complete, dendrobiums, vandas and oncidiums being in large supply, as well as cattleyas.

The wholesalers' employees are making large preparations for their dance on October 30. Tickets are selling rapidly and last year's crowd is likely to be considerably beaten.

Mrs. W. E. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's, has been ill for a week with the grip.

P. J. Hauswirth had the decorations Saturday night, October 12, for the banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce. While the banquet was the largest of the season, the decoration was not elaborate. A larger one, also by Hauswirth, was that for the National Packers' Association earlier in the week.

Gus Lange has resumed his advertising in the Tribune. H. R. Hughes has stated his intention of giving daily newspaper advertising a trial this season.

Highly as the Chicago market regards Detroit as a flower town, and thoroughly as Detroit's orders are appreciated, we had been misinformed and really thought Detroit could play ball.

Wholesalers report collections unusually good this month.

Among the visitors in the last week were Charles E. Critchell and Fred Gear, Cincinnati, and Harry Rackham, son of George Rackham, of Detroit.

MACON, GA.—The Idle Hour Nurseries had quite a big decoration on hand last week, on account of the fall opening display of the Dannenburg Co.'s department store. The artistic and original decorations were on a vast and magnificent scale. The entire store was in reception array.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

One week sometimes makes quite a difference in the outlook in the florists' business and such was the case last week. The demand for flowers of all kinds remains about the same, but the supply has increased to a great extent, so much so in some lines as to almost constitute a glut. Dahlias, which were selling out well, are now a dead article and it is hard to move them at any price. Cosmos is also a drug and there is scarcely any demand for it at all.

We have had several frosts and considerable has been done in the way of nailing up the outdoor flowers, but as a rule they are unharmed and are being cut by the thousands. It is to be hoped that we will get a good, hard freeze this week, as it would help business a good deal.

Funeral work constitutes the main demand, there being little doing in society. The demand at the wholesale houses has been steady and quite good, but nothing surprising. Mums, of course, take the lead and they are selling well. Some fine blooms are coming in and good prices are obtained, but by far the best demand is for the varieties that will sell for $1, $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Some extra good blooms are bringing $3 and $4 a dozen, but the buyers of this grade are few.

Carnations are more plentiful, but are bringing good prices, for there are not enough to fill all orders. B. F. Hensley is sending in some fine Enchantress, which find ready sale. Roses are coming steadily and the quality shows gradual improvement. Beauties are scarce. Lilies of all kinds are in good demand. In green goods this market is well supplied. Some especially good smilax and adiantum are being handled.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society has been rather quiet of late, but I judge that now, since the summer has gone its way, the members will bestir themselves and get things to moving again with some of their old-time vigor. The next meeting takes place November 9.

J. A. Peterson and wife returned October 13 from a three months' trip through Europe. Mr. Peterson visited many of his old haunts and renewed friendship with many of his old comrades. His stories of his trip and the many greenhouse plants which he visited are interesting and instructive. Both he and Mrs. Peterson are in the best of health.

E. Mack, whose greenhouses are located on Price Hill, has everything in first-class shape for the fall business. He is making preparations for a large business on All Souls' day.

J. T. Conger was judge of the agricultural exhibit at the Butler county fair at Hamilton, O., last week. He says that the exhibition was fine and the competition close. Mr. Conger is on a trip through Indiana this week.

Julius Baer's auto delivery wagon is now doing full duty. It has been in commission for several weeks and has proved to be a good investment. It makes a fine appearance and is a big advertisement.

Gus Adams, who is with the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., is in this city. He was starting on his way to Germany, to claim an inheritance of some $4,000 left to him by a sister, but on arriving in this city he found that it would not be necessary to make the trip, as all arrangements could be made through the German consul.

Myer Heller and wife are in town on a short visit. They made the run over from New Castle in their auto.

Visitors last week were Daniel McRorie, of South Orange, N. J.; J. Honaker, of Lexington, Ky., and E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia. C. J. OHMER.

month, at which some phase of the florists' business shall be taken up for discussion. After the adjournment of the meeting, A. R. Knowles, the retiring president, entertained the club at dinner at the New York cafe.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade is not as good as it might be. Funeral work is the bulk of the business done, but there are a few small weddings and dinners. The call for chrysanthemums is good. Some extra fine Monrovia, Fitzwygram, Glory of Pacific and Willowbrook are now to be had, but not in large lots as yet. These hurt the prices of roses, which are plentiful. Bride, Maid, Richmond and Killarney are fine and too many for the demand. American Beauty still has a big call. Carnations are not any too many. Last week, however, all varieties were abundant. They are now coming in with longer stems and the market price seems to hold around 2 cents, unless extra fancy, when a cent more is asked. Violets are of much better quality, but as yet there is slow sale for them.

Some extra fine lily of the valley is offered at all the wholesale houses. Cosmos is now offered in large quantities and has been selling well. Tuberoses have been quite plentiful and prices have dropped. Dahlias are fine, at cheap prices. Wild smilax has a good call, as have other greens.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting October 10, with a good attendance. President William C. Young presided, with all the new officers present. Henry Jennemann, of Webster Groves, made application for membership. Mr. Jennemann makes a specialty of dahlias and exhibited a fine vase at the meeting. Walter Retzer, of the St. Louis Seed Co., was elected to membership. A vote of sympathy was extended to George M. Kellogg in his great loss by boiler explosion. A vote of sympathy was also extended to the Chicago Florists' Club in the loss of Edgar Sanders, who was its treasurer at the time of his death.

Prof. H. C. Irish and J. J. Beneke were appointed a committee to act with the trustees who are to confer with a committee from the Horticultural Society for the purpose of entertaining the visiting florists during the flower show next month.

Adolph Brix invited the Club to attend his free flower show November 8 and to be his guests on that night, which was accepted.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, gave an entertaining talk about the Springfield flower show, given during the Illinois State Fair, and was listened to with great interest.

G. H. Pring, who has charge of the orchid houses at the Missouri Botanical Garden, was present and spoke on his trip to Europe this summer and will, during the December meeting, give a stereopticon lecture, at which all florists in the city will be invited to be present.

After adjournment all the members were taken to a near-by cafe and all sat down to a fine spread provided by the officers, who say that this will take place after all the meetings during the year.

As the next meeting will take place November 14, the week of the flower show, the trustees will make special effort for an interesting meeting, as all the visiting florists will be invited to attend.

Various Notes.

Henry Ostertag reports that he has the contract to decorate the Railroad Y. M. C. A. The order was given by Miss Helen Gould, who donated the new building. The big job will take place this week.

L. N. Van Hook, of Ferguson, Mo., will cut a great many extra fine California violets and carnations this season.

The Kirkwood florists, of whom there now are many, have this year made preparations to furnish this market with California violets and carnations. Among those who are already sending in good stock are W. J. Pilcher, F. W. Ude, Jr., Wm. Winter, Hugo Gross, J. H. Ahner, Frank Vennemann and H. Niemeyer.

J. F. Ammann, Edwin Denker, Henry Johan, E. W. Guy, H. Jennemann and Pierre Schneider were the out-of-town members present at the club meeting last week.

The School of Horticulture, which closed its season last week, distributed over $50 in prizes among the students. Walter J. Stevens made the closing address.

Fred C. Weber has daily one of the prettiest and most attractive show windows among the west end florists.

A. Jablonsky, of Central, is now cutting a fine lot of carnations and roses. His cut will be extra large this season.

The force at C. A. Kuehn's reports a steady increase of shipping orders. Chrysanthemums are selling well, which has a tendency to crowd the roses and carnations to lower prices.

The Michel Plant and Bulb Co. held an auction sale recently at the Magnolia avenue greenhouses, at which the surplus stock in palms, rubbers and ferns was disposed of.

The Missouri Botanical Garden will again hold a free chrysanthemum show. Prof. Trelease reports that he thinks the plants will be in shape to give the exhibition the week of November 4. If not, the show will be held the second week of November. J. J. B.

MOLINE, ILL.

The Tri-City Florists' Association held its monthly meeting October 10, with William Knees, of South Moline. There was a full attendance and one of the best meetings of the year took place. The topics up for discussion were "Shrubs and Trees Best Suited for Private Use" and "Street Plants." After the discussion supper was served and a social enjoyed. The next meeting will be at the home of Superintendent Boehm, of Central park, Davenport, and the subject will be "Chrysanthemums."

THE REVIEW will send Herrington's Chrysanthemum Book, with complete cultural details, on receipt of 50 cents.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

"The frost is on the pumpkin" again and it has closed the aster and dahlia season in a blaze of glory, for all the leaves on all the trees are tinted with the varied colors of the rainbow, and the days of outdoor cut flower supplies are practically at an end.

Autumnal foliage has made the retail windows of the city gorgeous in brilliant coloring and with this as the background, and with the grand chrysanthemums now coming like a flood, you can imagine, perhaps, how one may claim this as the city beautiful. There is little change in prices, but in quality of everything there is a constant advance towards perfection. The chrysanthemum display, especially, is more than was anticipated in size and beauty. The wholesale windows are filled with Polly Rose, Monrovia, Mrs. Robinson, Pacific and all the early popular varieties. Thousands of plants, too, are for sale and for the present we may as well acknowledge chrysanthemum is king.

Beauties are beauties indeed, now, and the best of them hold their top price with ease. All roses have advanced in value, if not in price, and there is ample demand for the best of them, notwithstanding the mum torrent that is pouring in. While this lasts, steadiness is all we can ask or hope for.

The finest carnations sell at $4 per hundred.

Orchids have been in good demand, owing to the increase in bon-ton weddings and the return of society folks to town. The call from other cities is persistent and growing daily. Valley is abundant, but the Schultheis and Siebrecht brand finds a ready sale. The time has come to consider the lilies. The supply is insufficient and values are rising.

Cosmos was never better. Great masses of it filled one of Small's windows October 14, the other still attractive with its great display of water lilies.

Violets begin to look natural and the time has at last arrived when common-sense coupled with experience indicates the wisdom of shipments. Good selected flowers are worth 50 cents per hundred and so on down to where the street merchants have their say, and that is law, for the inferior and left-over supplies.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club October 14 was a most interesting occasion, seventy-five members being present, President Totty in the chair. L. S. Dickinson, Frank Duggan and Leonard Barron were elected to membership and Mr. Schaefer was proposed. Several changes in the by-laws were made, the most important establishing a life membership at a cost of $75.

The exhibits were numerous and greatly admired. Robert Scott & Son, of Sharon Hill, Pa., exhibited their new rose, Mrs. Jardine, a brilliant pink of splendid substance and size, given a preliminary certificate. Fred Hollender, of Ozone Park, contributed a dozen dahlias assorted, awarded honorable mention. H. Beaulieu, of Woodside, showed a plant of variegated nasturtium, given a vote of thanks. Arthur T. Boddington staged a grand vase of the new cosmos, Lady Lennox, from seed grown by William Duckham, of Madison, N. J., awarded certificate of merit.

C. H. Totty exhibited a grand lot of novelties in chrysanthemums: Mme. Loiseau Rousseau, E. Newman, yellow; American seedling No. 60, white; Mrs. Rider Haggard, white; Beatrice May, white; Australian seedling No. 20, red, and the one that received the certificate October 12, H. Broomhead, rose-pink in color and of remarkable size, the whole receiving certificates of merit and honorable mention. Dailedouze Bros. exhibited a vase of Carnation Afterglow, being awarded honorable mention.

Prof. George V. Nash held the attention of all for an hour by his very interesting lecture, "Water Lilies and Aquatics." The stereopticon views on colored slides were especially beautiful and added immensely to the delight of the audience. The enthusiastic thanks of the club were tendered Prof. Nash at the close of his address.

J. B. Nugent and his lieutenants did excellent work, especially in the line of Virginia-cured porcine delicacies that seemed to touch a soft spot in many corporosities. William Tricker, of Arlington, N. J., and F. Lautenschlager, of Chicago, were visitors.

After adjournment Will Wordell, of Rickards Bros., turned entertainer. The ladies will be invited to attend the November meeting.

Various Notes.

Now come the exhibitions: November 6 to 8 the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York; October 30, the Monmouth county show at Red Bank, N. J.; October 31, the Morris county exhibition at Madison, N. J.; October 31, the Bay Shore Horticultural Society; November 6, New Haven, the same date Tarrytown, and November 5, Glen Cove. All within a radius of twenty miles, and several of them on the same day. One needs a flying machine to see them all.

The Fleishman baths, adorned with every adjunct of floral art and embellishment, open in November. Joseph Fleishman is president and treasurer.

Wernz & Koehne have moved to 61 Fifth avenue, corner of Thirteenth street—an excellent location.

Harry Bunyard was at Philadelphia last week, introducing Lady Lennox cosmos to the seed trade and incidentally inspecting the firm's dahlia crop at Atco.

Alex McConnell returns October 16 on the Oceanic. His consciousness that the world is not so large was emphasized last week on his visit to Ghent, where he found J. D. Eisele, of Dreer's, to welcome him. Mr. McConnell visited many European countries while away, but found his old home on the Isle of Man the most interesting spot.

J. Von der Linden, of Rhinebeck, was in the city October 10, a guest of B. S. Slinn, Jr., who handles his shipments to New York. He had spent the week in Boston with the firemen of Poughkeepsie.

John Heeremans, of Morristown, N. J., left last week for Bluffton, N. C., where he takes charge of the immense estate of R. T. Wilson, Jr. This estate is as large as the Vanderbilt place at Biltmore, which S. A. F. conventionists remember with delight.

Cleary's Horticultural Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are Ambrose T. Cleary, Haverstraw, N. Y.; George Meehan, Jersey City, N. J.; Charles E. Smith, Brooklyn.

Mrs. John Lewis Childs is president of the Woman's Club, of Floral Park, and is credited with much of the work which has made Floral Park one of the most attractive of the Brooklyn suburbs.

Felix Albert, of Buffalo, and later in the retail business in Rochester, is in the city and will engage with some New York house. He says W. F. Kasting will surely be elected treasurer of Buffalo.

The New York wholesalers are all rooting for him. If he wins we may run Traendly next year for treasurer of New York. Nothing too good for ex-presidents of the S. A. F.

A. T. Boddington's first shipment of azaleas arrived October 8, later than usual because of the stevedores' strike at Antwerp, which was a serious one and settled just in time.

Eli Cross, of Grand Rapids, was in the city October 10.

Siebrecht & Son, of New Rochelle, now have fifteen houses devoted exclusively to orchids, and will cut over 20,000 flowers of Cattleya labiata this season.

William Starke received 141 cases of boxwood from Holland October 14.

M. A. Bowe furnished the white orchid, Beauty and Killarney bouquets for the famous Boldt wedding at the Waldorf-Astoria.

October 14 Walter Sheridan was reported out of danger, a great relief to many anxious friends.

W. H. Donohoe makes a fine display of bay trees, tree box and decorative palms in front of his big new store at 17 East Twenty-eighth street.

Both members of the firm of Bonnet & Blake, Brooklyn, are on deck after the most serious ordeals in their career, one for months on the shelf with inflammatory rheumatism, the other recovered from a most serious operation in a Rochester hospital. They find their new store too small for their rapidly growing business. The only other wholesaler in Brooklyn, W. H. Kuebler, has the same fault to find, cramped quarters for increasing trade, a condition that speaks well for Brooklyn's appreciation.

Charles C. Trepel, of the City of Churches, had an exhibit of about 10,000 chrysanthemums October 12 at his headquarters in Losier's. He decorated the Montauk Club elaborately last week.

Hicks & Co. are redecorating their store at 52 West Twenty-eighth street and are crying out for more room.

Joseph Fenrich paid a visit to his Poughkeepsie growers several days of last week.

George Cotsonas & Co. have sixteen men gathering ferns in New England and their work will continue until the snow flies.

Lecakes & Co. are receiving leucothoe sprays and wild smilax from the south. They also handle the chrysanthemum stock of Garreau Bros., of Jersey City.

C. H. Totty had some grand stock in novelties, making claim for certification Saturday, that were afterwards for sale at Joseph Fenrich's.

Henry Hession, of Flatbush, is sending to Ford Bros. fine carnations, of Enchantress, White Enchantress, Harry Fenn, Gov. Bliss, Octoroon, Victory, Beacon, Boston Market and Aristocrat—a pretty aristocratic variety so early in the season.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The advancing tide of chrysanthemums is now beginning to make its mark in the market, and while trade was fairly good last week, the arrivals of the queen of autumn promise soon to be more than can be readily disposed of. Chrysanthemums are much more abundant and prices have tumbled. A few strictly fancies bring $3 per dozen, while inferior goods fetch the same price per hundred. Polly Rose and Glory of Pacific are most in evidence, but some fine Clementine Tousey are seen, also Ardel and a few Ivory and Mrs. Coombes. Roses are of good quality and so far have sold well. Beauty, Richmond, Killarney and Wellesley are all good, while Bride and Maid now have fine stems. Carnations remain about the same. Rose-pink Enchantress promises, another season, to largely displace the ordinary variety. Some nice Beacon, Victory, Octoroon and Queen are noticed. Winsor, like all the Lawson varieties, has too short stems so far.

Lilies are not abundant and bring good prices. A few asters and sweet peas are still seen, also gladioli and cosmos. Antirrhinum and mignonette are seen in small quantities. Quite a large supply of both single and double violets now are arriving, but the demand is not yet strong for them. Prices on adiantum are a little stiffer, also on hardy ferns. The latter are specially good at present.

Club Meeting.

Wilfred Wheeler was the speaker at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club October 15. His subject was "Fruit Growing" and was handled in a most comprehensive manner. The possibilities for successful commercial fruit culture in New England were pointed out, apples among the large fruits, and strawberries among small fruits, coming in for special mention. An animated and interesting discussion followed the reading of Mr. Wheeler's paper and he was accorded an enthusiastic vote of thanks. President Westwood appointed a nominating committee to bring in lists of officers at the next meeting. Several additions were again made to the membership.

The awards committee gave William Downs a report of merit for fine Celosia plumosa. W. N. Craig received a report of superior merit for Nevine Fothergilli major. W. W. Rawson & Co. had large displays of dahlias, anemones and colchicums. George Page exhibited climbing Kaiserin rose.

The nominating committee appointed consists of Wilfrid Wheeler, Charles Holbrow and William Rust.

The landscape committee reported that it is hoped to resume classes in landscape gardening at an early date. The idea is to have two classes this season, one for advanced students, the other for beginners. It also is hoped to arrange for a series of practical lectures from first-class authorities on the same subject. A good number of members enrolled themselves as pupils. There was, as usual, a fine display of seasonable flowers on the exhibition table. Refreshments were served and it was quite late before the meeting terminated. The attendance was 150 and indications point to the best winter session in the club's history.

Various Notes.

The annual fall exhibition of fruits and vegetables on October 10 and 11 at Horticultural hall was a splendid one, all the halls being called into requisition to accommodate the exhibits. In spite of the rather light fruit crop, the apples and pears were splendid and finer vegetables were never staged at a Boston show. The display of fifty varieties of hardy grapes from the T. S. Hubbard Co., Fredonia, N. Y., was a great feature and was worthily awarded a silver gilt medal. Gratuities were awarded to R. & J. Farquhar & Co. for a display of foliage plants and Lilium speciosum rubrum, W. W. Rawson & Co. for a fine collection of dahlias and G. E. Davenport for a general display. W. C. Strong received honorable mention for seedlings of Weir's cut-leaved maple.

Blue Hill Nurseries have had a very heavy fall trade in hardy perennials and have shipped more evergreens than usual for early fall planting.

Some very fine Clementine Tousey chrysanthemums are coming into the market from W. C. Ward. Another successful grower of this fine variety is William Nicholson.

Alexander Montgomery reports his white sport of Killarney rose is doing finely. He expects to have 5,000 plants of it next season. One grower who has seen it ordered that number alone. It will not be introduced before the spring of 1909.

William A. Walke, of Salem, has a splendid lot of several thousands of Lilium Harrisii coming for Christmas.

Alexander McKay is growing freesias more heavily this season, these, with carnations, being his specialties.

Thomas Galvin is making some effective window displays of oncidiums, cattleyas and other seasonable orchids.

ing some of the finest specimen chrysanthemums of the season.

S. J. Goddard finds Rose-pink Enchantress a splendid variety. Winsor comes short-stemmed. Octoroon, White Perfection, Beacon, Victory and Queen are all doing specially well with him. White Enchantress he speaks of in the highest terms and considers it hard to beat in its color.

H. N. Robinson & Co. are planning for a celebration of their first year's business as a cut flower commission firm October 29. They have had a most prosperous year.

David Smith, of the firm of Thomas Smith & Sons, Stranraer, Scotland, sailed for home October 12, after his annual pilgrimage among rose growers in the east. He finds a heavily increased call for hybrid teas for outdoor culture.

W. B. Goodenow is bringing in fine Campbell violets for so early in the season. He is growing a few thousands of Princess of Wales in addition to doubles.

The park system and arboretum are especially attractive at present. The berried shrubs and beautifully colored foliage were never more pleasing.

Farquhar & Co. report the demand for bulbs as exceptionally heavy, especially for outdoor planting. W. N. CRAIG.

HOUSTON, TEX.—W. W. Westgate, of the Westgate Drug Co., whose greenhouses were destroyed by the big storm in 1900 and who withdrew from the florists' trade at that time, is making preparations to enter into the business again. He has five lots, situated close to town, which he will use as the site for his city stand, and he expects to buy a tract of land, about six miles out, for a nursery and a summer home.

AUSTIN, TEX.—A. J. Seiders, lately with the Austin Floral Co., has been appointed director of rural arts at the College of Industrial Arts, Denton, Tex. In his department of the college, instruction is given in gardening, floriculture, cut flower work and designing, poultry and bee keeping. Though not a college graduate, Mr. Seiders has had fifteen years' practical experience in these lines. The salary is $1,800 per annum, with residence on the grounds.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The aster and the dahlia have made their bow; the former has left the stage entirely, so far as the quality goes, while the dahlia is hovering in the wings uncertain whether it will receive an encore or be summarily dismissed by Jack Frost. Chrysanthemum is queen, the early varieties being with us in force. The Pacific family is most in evidence, but unlike former seasons, there are more good yellows about now—mid-October. Monrovia has come strongly to the front, some fine flowers of this variety bringing top prices. While Time of Gold can hardly be described as a yellow, its deeper shade has won admirers. Halliday has made its appearance, the whites being reinforced by Early Snow, a beautiful thing, and the pinks by Rosiere. There are other varieties, but these will give an idea of the range of color and shades of color.

Dahlias are still good, the cut being affected at times by cold nights, to be followed by an increase after warmer days. Roses are rapidly improving in quality. Fancy Beauties have been in demand at good prices. Valley is scarce. Carnations are greatly improved, some superb stock being seen, with long stems. The average, however, is not yet up to the mark, owing, no doubt, to the hot weather in September. Orchids are very plentiful, and appear more in demand than ever. Single violets are fine, but as yet do not keep well. Double violets are improving and increasing in quantity. Pansies have made their appearance. Greens are in fair demand, wild smilax and autumn leaves being most popular.

Bouvardia is not selling quite as well as at first. There are a few nice Harrisii lilies in the market. Gardenias are sufficiently numerous to stimulate the demand at advancing prices. The poorer grades of flowers are suffering from the oversupply caused by increasing indoor and unchecked outdoor crops. Hydrangeas are sufficiently bad to suit the most fastidious buyer, who will turn from them when they are pure white, but becomes interested as soon as they assume the rainbow colors.

The Highest Awards.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, has received a letter written last month by S. T. Wright, superintendent of the experiment station of the Royal Horticultural Society, whose trial grounds are at Wisely, Ripley Surrey, England. Mr. Wright states that the judges of the cannas sent to him for trial have highly recommended Wyoming and awarded certificates of merit to Gladiator, William Saunders, Uncle Sam, The Duke of York and Venus. This is a great triumph for the Conard & Jones Co., as it is believed in this country that there were few certificates of merit awarded and that no other American grower has ever received such recognition from the Royal Horticultural Society.

Antoine Wintzer, to whose genius as a hybridizer of cannas this result is due, when seen a few days ago, stated that these cannas were all of the firm's own raising, that they had been sent to England in the spring of 1906, but owing to delays had not been in condition for judging that season. Mr. Wright cared for the stock and got it in fine shape for planting out this year. It was stated in Mr. Wright's letter that the judges were greatly impressed with the variety of coloring shown in these American cannas, a greater range of color and shades of color being seen among the eighteen varieties sent than in any other collection. Three other seedlings of Mr. Wintzer's were awarded certificates of merit; these were shown under number and are not yet named.

Robert Pyle, president of the company, in speaking of the awards, said that the Royal Horticultural Society has a membership so large as to seem almost incredible to Americans familiar with the size of our horticultural societies. When Mr. Pyle was abroad a couple of years ago, he was much interested in one of the exhibitions of this society. Not only were the exhibits varied and of high order, but the interest shown by the average visitor was keen and his or her knowledge far greater than that of the average visitor in this country, as shown by the comments on the exhibits.

An hour spent with Mr. Wintzer in the canna fields was full of the keenest enjoyment. Nearly all the varieties grown are Mr. Wintzer's own raising, though a few choice sorts, such as King Humbert, are admitted to fellowship in this select company. A whole block of Buttercup seedlings in many generations were full of promise. Another yellow, an improved Coronet, exactly implies what its name describes, but the chief work of the past year centers in the improved whites and pinks. Mont Blanc, in course of four generations, has been improved to a wonderful degree, both in size of flower and in purity of coloring. These whites are an especial favorite with Mr. Wintzer, who says that at twilight the long rows of Mont Blanc and its successors can be seen and enjoyed when the other varieties have faded into dusk. These long rows of 400 plants of a single variety are worth going miles to see, first Mont Blanc, then Venus, then Gladiator with its spots on a yellow field, and so on through the last of the varieties. The improved pinks, starting with Maiden's Blush, run through all shades of pink and so-called pink, some having exquisite colored edging, the beauty of others being enhanced by bronze foliage. A new type of canna lily is the gladiolus-flowered, much admired by some canna lovers. Mr. Wintzer has just lifted his plants to be used in hybridizing, which will soon be done indoors.

The Treasury Portfolio.

The retirement of J. William Colflesh, after long and faithful service as treasurer of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, marks an epoch in the history of the club, the treasurership passing from a grower once more into the hands of a retailer. The new incumbent, George Craig, has a long and honorable business record and in his hands a faithful and conservative management of the club's finances is assured. It is doubtful whether any horticultural organization in the country has ever had such a trio of able financial managers as Thomas Cartledge, J. William Colflesh and George Craig.

Various Notes.

Leo Niessen paid a visit to Brandywine Summit a few days ago, calling on Albin Harvey & Sons. Mr. Niessen reports that the carnations at this place were equal, if not superior, to any that he had ever seen. The Lawson, indoor grown, are tall and bushy, producing fine flowers on stems of unusual length for this season. Winsor and Rose-pink Enchantress were also in the Lawson class.

Mr. Jones, representing J. M. Gasser Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, was a visitor recently.

The Market.

Trade last week kept up fairly well. Many funeral designs were made up and used a great deal of the large quantity of cut blooms that was on the market. We have had a little frost, but could not find that any damage had been done yet. On making a trip to Vincent's last Tuesday, I found his dahlia fields one mass of blooms and thousands could be cut. The firm was still making shipments of cut dahlias and is now potting up thousands of geraniums.

Roses and carnations are arriving in fine condition. The early chrysanthemums are abundant, selling well, and the only drawback is the lack of outside blooms, such as dahlias. In cosmos the city market had quite a rush last Saturday and the public seemed eager to buy. Some dealers were sold out early in the evening. Violets are coming in slowly. Greens are enough to meet the demands. Wild fern leaves are plentiful.

Home Coming Week.

Our city is now entertaining thousands of strangers and home comers and the decorations are gorgeous. The public buildings are nearly all brilliantly illuminated and at night are transformed into great blazes of light. The city market florists are well patronized, selling many cut flowers, and from the indications the flower business will get some benefit. At present little decorating with plants is going on, but many bunches will be used in the parades. G. Siddons generally makes up hundreds of bunches and has his men on the streets, and they dispose of them easily. This will be a busy week. Large receptions and entertainments will be held, calling for decorations. The doors are open and you are welcome.

Various Notes.

G. V. Smith, of Waverly, is installing a new boiler.

G. A. Lotze, of Glen Burnie, Md., has some new seedlings of chrysanthemums and carnations and is having a heavy cut in mums.

Isaac H. Moss, of Govanstown, Md., is cutting some very fine roses inside and the plants are in every way encouraging.

J. Bolgiano & Son held a public dahlia exhibition Tuesday, October 8, at their large store on Pratt and Light streets.

Mrs. T. Seidlich and Mrs. Selzie are beginning to market some extra fine white and pink cosmos.

At present early white mums look as though there will be a heavy cut. Already many are cutting them by the hundreds.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons, of White Marsh, Md., are building a concrete tank nine feet deep, with a capacity of 45,000 gallons. The six new greenhouses are nearly completed.

T. W. Gray, of Catonsville, is piping a house that was built last summer.

THE GROWING OF VEGETABLES.

Greenhouse Construction.

Now a word about greenhouses and their construction. The foundation should be of cement, the frame of iron, and the purlins, in cold climates, of wood. The glass should be as large as possible, 20x30 inches having been found to be the most economical. As to the size of the houses, I would recommend one twenty feet wide to be 100 feet long, one thirty feet wide to be 200 feet long, one forty feet wide to be 300 feet long, and one fifty feet wide to be 400 feet long. This proportion has proved to be the most satisfactory, but I should recommend the larger sizes as being much more economical to heat and regulate.

I have only mentioned the way to produce crops as a whole in the market garden. Each one of the crops mentioned above could easily be made the subject of a lecture by itself, but I have not the time to go into the matter now.

This subject of the commercial culture of vegetables has been studied deeply in New England, and the prosperity of the majority of our market gardeners shows with what success.

Intensify and Specialize.

There are many branches of agriculture and horticulture which may be familiar to many men, but the method today is to intensify and specialize, and the truly successful man is the one who cultivates only a few crops, those to which his land and climate are best adapted and those which have the greatest demand in his market.

We have found in New England that while we depend upon the farmer and agriculturist of the west and south for many of the necessities, they look to us for many of the finer vegetables, to be supplied to them at certain seasons of the year. While corn, wheat, oats and potatoes are their agricultural products, lettuce, cucumbers and celery are ours.

Massachusetts is not an agricultural state, but it produces annually at the present time $65,000,000 worth of products, its largest crop being cucumbers under glass. In the little town where I live there are today over 100 acres of glass where thirty years ago there was not one acre, and we produce in Arlington more products for our acreage than any other town in the country and, I may say, the world. There are many hundreds of acres under glass in the state of Massachusetts, all producing crops of lettuce and cucumbers, where forty years ago no glass was used.

The men of those days did well on their outside growing, but by the intelligent use of all the new methods and inventions great changes have been made. The sons of those men followed their fathers and are cultivating successfully today the same land with the improved methods, and ever looking forward to still greater improvements and thereby larger and better crops. The most successful of these market gardeners at present confine themselves to a few crops having a ready sale all the season, thereby having a continuous crop and steady returns.

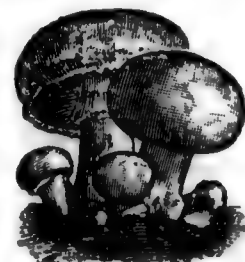

Profits of Market Gardening.

All of these men will testify that the business of market gardening can be made as profitable as any other business and they can live better, feel better and know that what they enjoy really belongs to them and is not obtained by speculation.

The time is coming when the business of agriculture will stand as high as any calling, and in the future those engaged in it will be looked up to as men of intelligence and knowledge and be respected as exponents of the leading industry of mankind.

To the young man of today I would say: Study agriculture. Apply yourself to that part of it to which you are adapted and which you like best, and you may be sure there is no calling in which you will take greater pleasure. The profit is sure to come to those who follow it, and among the first branches of agriculture will be found the commercial growing of vegetables.

Eugene Rust, general manager of the Union Stock Yards Co., is the moving spirit in the flower show held in the stock pavilion this week as an adjunct to the American Royal Live Stock show. When Mr. Rust conceived the idea of adding the floral feature to the American Royal he secured the coöperation of W. L. Rock, who in turn enlisted the aid of the local people and secured a number of exhibits from out-of-town growers, including a splendid vase of the Mrs. Marshall Field rose from Peter Reinberg, Chicago. The show occupies 40,000 square feet of space in the pavilion. Monday was garden flower day, Tuesday was rose day and chrysanthemums and carnations the special attractions for Wednesday and Thursday. Friday and Saturday the program calls for violets, valley and orchids. It was Mr. Rock's idea to designate one day specially for brides-to-be and make a feature of a display of wedding arrangements.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League will meet at New York today to consider the outlook.

THE man who a few weeks ago thought he knew beans would be plentiful now finds things have a different aspect.

CARL CROPP, secretary and treasurer of Vaughan's Seed Store, reached New York October 14 on the Nieu Amsterdam, from Rotterdam.

VISITED CHICAGO: Adolph Corneli, of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis; Mr. Shumway, Jr., of R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.

FROM reports it looks as though this will be another year when cucumber seed, especially the pickling sorts, will go as high as the purchaser will care to stand for.

DUNLAP'S PACKET HOLDER.

enabled him to place his garden seeds with the dealers at sight, his improvement being so evident. For several years Mr. Dunlap reaped a good harvest from his innovation before his competitors paid him the compliment of imitation.

The spring of 1907, the fifty-fifth anniversary of the introduction of the partitioned seed box, was the date of placing on the market this latest improvement, which during the last season proved its practical value.

CORN EXPOSITION AT CHICAGO.

The corn exposition at the Coliseum, Chicago, which opened October 5, has attracted many farmers and done much to stimulate the interest in better seed, for there are some splendid samples on exhibition. As a spectacle the show is lacking in interest, but as an object lesson on what may be accomplished by careful selection it is of utmost value. The show continues to October 19, all exhibits being sold at auction that day.

The seed trade is represented by Funk Bros. Seed Co., Bloomington, Ill.;

others comes word that there is hardly any seed at all. The estimated deliveries from the California growers do not help matters, as the actual needs of the planters and middlemen were not arranged for by half when the California people booked contract orders last spring. A great many of the dealers held off from giving orders at the prices then asked and as a consequence are now looking for, or will be looking for, seed. Onion seed of a quality that set sowers are afraid of is being offered at reasonable prices, but the dependable article does not seem to be in evidence at anything but prohibitive rates. The stock of seed of the standard sorts for making the marketable onion is exceedingly hard to locate and wholesale seedsmen are reluctant to book orders except at an open price. It goes without saying that prices will be about as high as the traffic will bear, but it is likely that after a while prices will settle down to considerably below the rates now talked of; still this possibility affords little encouragement to the man who cannot now put his hand on a good round lot of a single variety at a price that he can use it at.

CORN IN OHIO.

C. S. Clark, well known as a grower of corn for seed purposes in Erie and Sandusky counties in Ohio, writes as follows under date of October 12:

"Regarding the condition of our seed corn crops, I will say that all extra early sorts will make fair to good crops of seed. All late varieties are in great danger of getting frozen up solid before dry, which will make them unfit for seed. The weather is so cold, and we are having so much rain, that corn stands still. The prospects now point to a very great shortage in all kinds of late corn, both field and sweet. Last year our corn was all ripe by September 20; now, October 12, finds hundreds of acres green yet. We are now very busy building another dryer, to use heat for drying if necessary."

NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

William Emerson, manager of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., October 9, completed an inspection trip through the vine seed and seed corn section of central Nebraska. He gives his conclusions as follows:

"I regret to state that the crops in general are somewhat below the average, and I do not look for any large yields or surplus crops. Owing to the cold, backward spring, many of the crops were thin stands, and were further hurt by the cut worms and the striped beetle, and in some cases the crops were nearly de-what smaller than the general average, which also reduced the yields.

"There will be a limited amount of surplus of a few medium early varieties of sweet corn, but I believe all late varieties will be short, and that nearly all growers will be unable to fill their orders for the late varieties in full. The same will apply to the white flint varieties of field corn, and some of the yellow flint varieties.

"The cucumber and muskmelon crops are below the average, as to yield, and I look for shortages of some varieties of cucumber and a great scarcity of some varieties of muskmelon. The watermelon, pumpkin and squash, with a few exceptions, seem to have done better, but there will also be some short deliveries of a few varieties of these kinds.

"I believe, therefore, there will be a good demand for sweet and flint corn, also vine seeds, and that the prices will range somewhat higher."

LAST YEAR'S IMPORTS.

The Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture has just issued the revised figures of the total value of the seeds and nursery stock imported in 1906, with comparisons with previous years. Following are the figures for 1905 and 1906, with the countries from which the imports came:

Country.	1905.	1906.

Nursery stock, including bulbs, plants, vines, etc.:

Country.	1905.	1906.

Total.....	$1,512,066	$1,617,622

WITH December wheat $1.06, December corn 63½c and December oats 55c on the Chicago Board of Trade October 15, the farmers should be able to buy $2 onion seed by the time the catalogues are out.

At Chicago this week timothy seed is dull and steady. Contract was quoted October 15 at $4.30@4.35; March, $4.60, and country lots, $3.50@4.40. Cloverseed was steady at $17 for contract and $11@16.50 for cash lots.

M. S. STARK, Otter Lake, Mich., says that, following an unusually dry season, the bean growers in his vicinity are having bad luck, for up to October 11 it had rained almost daily. Mr. Stark says he does not look for more than one-fourth of a normal crop of good beans in that section, which is considered about the best in the state for growing beans.

THE small onion set dealers in the vicinity of Chicago are occupying the center of the stage at present, reports giving them credit three times for each car shipped. There is nothing wrong in this, only it makes the onion set crop appear much greater than it really is and throws the outsider who is seeking a straight tip off the track, the final result being hurtful to the industry.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THERE are a great many peonies that the owners are willing to part with at reasonable prices.

THE Crown Nursery Co., in Knox county, Tennessee, has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $10,000.

THE American Association of Park Superintendents has issued a booklet containing an account of the proceedings at the last annual meeting, August 15 to 17, 1907.

THERE will be a big call for the Frau Karl Druschki rose next spring. It did well everywhere last season and nurserymen esteem it one of the best new things in years.

It is worth while keeping an eye on the pages of European advertising in the REVIEW. There are many offers there that will mean money to you to know about.

A TABLE showing the Agricultural Department's revised figures as to the total imports of nursery stock in the years 1905 and 1906 appears on page 34 of this issue.

THE Eagle Nurseries Co. has been incorporated at Camden, N. J., with a capital stock of $100,000. The incorporators are L. M. Stiles, of Philadelphia, and R. Peacock and C. Bridge, both of Camden.

GEORGE H. BROWN, formerly of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has been awarded the contract to make the landscape plan, to cost $500, for Evergreen cemetery at Norfolk, Va.

THE Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain this year tried the badge-book idea of the American Association of Nurserymen and the members were so well pleased that the plan will be continued.

MRS. J. C. FESLER, of Rochelle, is urging that Illinois adopt a state tree and asks each public school to take a vote to decide which tree shall be selected, the result of the joint ballot to be communicated to the state legislature.

ORCHARDISTS throughout Missouri and Illinois must choose between the spray pump and the ax in treating their fruit trees, according to experts who addressed a meeting of St. Louis county fruit growers at Clayton, Mo., October 12. G. T. Powell, Geneva, N. Y.; Leonard Hase-man, assistant in entomology in the State University at Columbia, and Prof. H. C. Irish, superintendent of the Missouri Botanical Gardens, were among those who spoke. It was one of several meetings arranged for by Frank A. Weber, secretary of H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co.

TREES PLANTED FOR SCREENS.

It has been on more than one occasion recently noticeable that the object in planting trees for the evident purpose of hiding objectionable features in the vicinity was not attained, or, if it was, but for a brief space of time, because of a misunderstanding of the management of the screens, or, still worse, of neglect. The trees were allowed to grow up unchecked and in several cases they were planted thickly, and in consequence little foliage was on the trees where it was most needed to answer the intended purpose. If on the other hand these trees (maples and willows) had been attended to in the matter of trimming and pruning, especially topping, an operation absolutely necessary in the case of trees of rapid growth intended for permanent screens, the purpose originally intended would not only be attained but the lives of the trees would also be considerably prolonged.

When trees are at first planted for the purpose of screening it is no doubt necessary to plant them thickly in order that something will be accomplished without loss of time, but it should always be remembered that as they grow and begin to crowd each other it will pay either to move some to make room for others before all are practically ruined, or to cut out the number necessary to accomplish the result.

And, again, it should be remembered that it is not a good plan to wait until a tree grows to the same height as the object it is planted to screen before it is topped or pruned back.

After the trees moved or cut down are gone there may be blank spaces that will require some temporary filling until such spaces are taken up by the growth of the remaining trees. These spaces may, for such time, be filled with other quick-growing trees or shrubs, but they in turn should also without fail be removed before they begin to injure the former in any way. M.

BORERS IN WILLOWS.

I notice that on many two-year-old Kilmarnock weeping willows the base of the trunk is rotten. Something like a ring is formed around the trunk. The center of the trunk, extending a foot or so upward, is also rotten. What causes this? Is this worm or bug also destructive to other trees? Please also give a remedy and preventive. J. K.

The damage to the willows may be caused by borers. The parts of the trees affected, as well as like parts of those yet unaffected, should be painted with a somewhat thick solution of coal tar and clay, or coal tar and cow manure. The clay or cow manure is required in order to render the coating adhesive and permanent. Calcium dissolved in water and then applied with a brush will also be found to act as a good preventive. The soil should be carefully removed from the base of the trees and then the trunk down to the roots should be cleaned, thereafter applying a coat of either of the above. R. R.

TREE ROOTS IN CISTERN.

Please tell me how I can keep the roots of a large cottonwood tree out of a cistern. There is a distance of about thirty feet between the two. Would it be advisable to put an inch coat of cement on the inside of the wall and then put in an extra wall, laid in cement? Or is there a less expensive way to save the cistern and the tree too? E. D. B.

All that appears to be necessary to prevent the roots of the cottonwood tree from entering the cistern is a coat of cement, as suggested. There seems to be no need to build another wall. Although a cheaper way out of the difficulty might be found, it would probably only answer the purpose temporarily, whereas an inch coat of concrete, made out of sharp gritty sand and Portland cement, will last and answer the purpose without fail for a long time. R. R.

STRATIFICATION OF SEEDS.

The stratification of seeds is practiced mainly because seeds are protected thereby, and easily in large quantities, until the season most favorable for sowing. Nature provides protection for seeds by covering them with leaves, besides using atmospheric agencies in the treatment necessary to be undergone by them before germination as well as after. It is this work of nature that doubtless first gave man the idea of stratifying seeds in order to aid nature in her work.

Stratification consists of placing a layer of sand or dry earth in a shallow box or flat and then placing a layer of seeds, repeating the operation until the box is filled. The seeds may be mixed with the soil or sand and keep just as well as when placed in layers, but it sometimes happens that some of the seeds germinate before the others and then, if they had been placed in layers, each layer could with ease be uncovered and taken out for sowing or planting; whereas, with the other method there would be considerable difficulty experienced in doing that. And, again, when the seeds and the covering material are mixed it becomes necessary, before planting, either to screen the material away from the seeds or to plant or sow it with the seeds.

The boxes, when filled, should be buried in a trench and covered with boards and then the earth filled in and up to form a ridge, or the boxes may be placed on the level ground and earth in sufficient quantity thrown over them.

Besides attaining the object of preserving the seeds, this form of stratification rots the coverings of many seeds, while the depth at which they are placed renders them incapable of sprouting. Seeds of the hawthorn and many others require to be in the ground a year, the holly two years, before they vegetate.

TACOMA, WASH.—Frank Spaulding is building a greenhouse on South Ferry street.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Otto O. Schrock, formerly of Elkhart, Ind., has removed to 308 South Flower street, in this city.

PORTLAND, ORE.—The name of the Montavilla Floral Co. has been changed to Mountain View Floral Co. The proprietors are P. Thiene, J. Feser and O. Griessel.

KENT, WASH.—C. H. Hopkins, of the Seattle Carnation Co., is building an additional house, 25x170 feet, and installing a sixty-five horse-power Scotch marine boiler.

It is worth while keeping an eye on the pages of European advertising in the REVIEW. There are many offers there that will mean money to you to know about.

ALEX MANN, JR., of the Alex Mann Co., San Francisco, takes exception to the paragraph in a recent San Francisco news letter stating that "tin foil and all kinds of florists' supplies appear to be scarce articles." Mr. Mann says he "can fill any order for any amount for all these articles up to a million dollars," which seems to be as much as any florist is likely to need for a brisk season's business.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Trade.

We feel quite satisfied with the progress October is making. It bids fair to outshine September in many ways, and these bright autumn days are just what is needed to bring forth a better supply of stock. Trade is on the increase, with a demand which leaves nothing a drug on the market. We are now getting a fine supply of indoor-grown stock, chrysanthemums filling a prominent part. Although very much sought after, violets are a little disappointing in quantity. Carnations are improving and bringing a good price. About the only flowers of commercial value that are left outside are the dahlias. We have them in the best colors and varieties and they seem to be growing in popularity, for we are selling lots of them. Choice roses are none too plentiful, but the Kaiserins and Carnots seen at Clarke Bros.' store this week deserve special mention. They surpass anything shown this season in lengths of stem and perfection of bloom.

Various Notes.

During our rambles one bright afternoon we called at the Sibson Rose Nurseries, where the proprietor is always glad to pilot visitors around. In response to numerous questions, we were told that the rose houses were now producing a heavy crop, all of which finds a quick and profitable sale in the wholesale market.

We next devoted a little time to carnation discussion with Peter Johnson. While his is an unpretentious place, it is quality and not quantity that prevails here. Mr. Johnson built his houses for carnations alone and he has them as fine as they are grown.

L. G. Pfunder has quit his store and the business forever and joined the ranks of retired capitalists. The greenhouses have been leased for a term of years to Rahn & Herbert, who will grow for the wholesale trade. Mr. Rahn is a well-known grower of Portland and Mr. Herbert has grown up with the business in Mr. Pfunder's employ.

Martin Reukauf arrived last week in his private car from Philadelphia, rented one of the most spacious rooms at the Portland hotel, in which to display his large line of samples, and promptly announced to his customers that he was ready for business. Mr. Reukauf is one of the few Quakers to come to the coast and we have to look serious during his visits.

The rose carnival and fiesta, already announced to take place next June, is receiving widespread attention. The commercial bodies promoting it propose raising a subscription of $100,000, and assistance from the florists has been earnestly requested. A. J. Clarke, George Otten and Berger Tonseth were appointed a committee to raise a fund among the florists.

Our city park now offers the most brilliant display of the year. The immense beds of salvias, geraniums and cannas, together with the beautiful autumn foliage, are a delight to the eye and a source of great pride, owing to the lateness of the season. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Flowers of all kinds are scarce, but they are no scarcer than are orders with the retailers at present. Business is desperately quiet, and were it not for a few straggling funeral designs and bunches there would be absolutely nothing to write of on this score. Flowers, however, with the possible exception of chrysanthemums, are well bought up and the wholesalers have but little to complain of. I refer to outside grown mums and those of the smaller grades, of which there has been a small surplus for the last week. Carnations and roses have not advanced in price, but we can expect a slight rise in a few days. Valley is not quite as plentiful as it was a week ago, but moves faster. A few Roman hyacinths are being sent into town. They cost the retailers at the rate of three dozen for $1.

Smilax is getting plentiful, much to the delight of the dealers. It has been a scarce article all summer and has been in good demand throughout the season.

Violets are not yet very plentiful, although the street hucksters are commencing to take advantage of their gradual reduction in price and are offering

D. F. Carnes, representing the Roseville Pottery Co., has left on a trip to Los Angeles and San Diego.

Bernard P. Miller, who successfully directed the recent Alameda county carnival at Idora park, Berkeley, has been appointed by the Oakland chamber of commerce to secure the next annual floral exhibition of the State Horticultural Association for that city. This is to form the nucleus for a splendid floral display next spring. The movers in the project will plan for the competitive exhibits from the florists and nurserymen from all sections of the coast.

The dahlia and chrysanthemum exhibition under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held at Polito hall, on Sixteenth and Guerrero streets, on the afternoon and evening of October 5. Both amateurs and professionals made very creditable showings, and the affair was a huge success from all standpoints. Thomas Monroe, F. A. Miller, Charles Mitchell and J. W. Bagge acted as judges. TO TELL YOU WHERE TO GET The SIMPLICITY SPRAYER

IN LAST week's Review a reader asked: "Which is the best Spray Pump?" This is the Editor's advice: "We use the Simplicity style of sprayer and like it very much. We like these better than the force-pump sprayer, because after pumping them up you are free to devote all your attention to the spraying. Before we bought this sprayer we used an ordinary brass syringe with good effect, but we find this sprayer a great SAVER, not only of time, but also OF SPRAYING MATERIAL. With a steady spray you walk right along and do not go over a large part of the space a second time, as one is likely to do when attention is drawn away every few seconds. The sprayer soon pays for itself.

diameter at the stock just above the roots? They are growing on a public street and I intend to transplant them to another location. The land would be very hard to dig now, but after the winter rains it would be an easy matter.

W. E. K.

Speaking in a broad way, the present time is the best season of the year to handle evergreens of the pittosporum type. Or, to be more explicit, I might add that these trees should be moved at any time when they can continue to grow without having a setback on account of very cold, frosty weather or exceptionally hot or drying weather. Unlike deciduous trees, which should be handled when they are dormant and when the climatic conditions favor a cessation of growth, the evergreens should not have a check of any kind when transplanted, for they either go ahead almost immediately or die back in a few days, after which only the most vigorous pruning can save them.

Although I prefer to handle these trees at this season of the year, in preference to cold, frosty weather, there are several factors to be taken into consideration. A tree with a trunk six inches in diameter must be at least ten feet high, and unless the owner wishes to sacrifice a large portion of the top, a very large ball of earth should be taken, in this case at least thirty inches through. Of course, unless the trees have been growing in a situation where there has been considerable moisture during the summer, the ground will be too hard to permit of such a procedure. It is very easy, however, to soak the soil around the trees for several days and get the earth soft enough to ball properly. This, of course, would not be true unless the soil were of such consistency as to allow a proper ball of earth to be made. Should the trees be growing in sandy soil, they should be root-pruned at once and left standing in their respective places until early in the spring, and then transplanted with as much soil as will stick on the roots. If such a course has to be taken, the trees should be root-pruned to a distance of eighteen inches on all sides of the trunk and thirty inches deep. This will cause the trees, if a few good soakings are given at this time, to make a quantity of fibrous roots, in which case they can be very easily handled, even if but little soil sticks to the roots.

Should it be impossible to handle the trees under any consideration at this time, I should not touch them until the end of March, when I should carefully ball them and prune them in, say, to three-fourths of their normal size. The only really important item to keep in

State of Business.

Trade has been brisk for the last ten days. There has been a great deal of funeral work, and that has used up white stock closely. Mums now are coming in fine and are in fair supply. Roses and carnations are more plentiful, but are not nearly enough to meet the demand. The growers all report stock unusually good this season, especially mums, and no doubt there will be some keen competition at our show next month. Everything is fairly well housed for the winter, and the run of business in general indicates a good season ahead of us.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday night, October 8, President Stephens in the chair. There was a good turnout. The mum show committee reported everything moving along nicely for the show and no doubt we will have a good exhibition, as everyone seems much interested. After the meeting the married men rolled against the single men and got beat—the same as usual. The four highest scores were made by Reichert, McKellar, Buehler and Metzmaier, all single except McKellar.

J. R. Hellenthal has some fine carnations and mums and also one table of Perle roses that are a picture. He is adding a new office and workroom, which will be a great help to him in handling trade.

E. Metzmaier is adding a new office and salesroom to his plant.

The Munk Floral Co. is cutting some good mums and reports stock in general doing nicely.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has leased space in the Snyder-Chaffee chocolate shop, which will be used as a cut flower branch, and expects to open about October 17.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. is cutting some fine Monrovia and reports stock looking promising.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Last week opened with a fresh lot of mums much larger in quantity, and an increase in other lines of stock. Roses are much improved in quality and carnations are longer-stemmed. Killarney is making a big hit and is getting to be indispensable. Mum plants are now on sale and go well. We have nothing else to offer in the flowering line, and people become very anxious at this season of the year for a few house plants. Boston ferns have had a heavy call this fall, no doubt larger than ever before.

Various Notes.

Mr. Lee, who has been in the employ of Miss R. M. Rebstock for the summer, has left to take a similar position in Chicago. Mr. Lee accomplished one thing in Buffalo, and that was to get a wife, which is more than some have done in thirty years.

Mr. Hewson, of the William Scott Co., has returned from his trip, starting at the state fair, at which he was judge of the flowers. This was an honor to him, as it was his second year to hold this position. The rules call for any man to be a judge for one year only, but lack of first-class men, combined with Mr. Hewson's ability, necessitated his return.

Mr. Jones, of Tonawanda, has completed two new houses, to be devoted to carnations.

Mr. Gillman, of Rhinebeck, made his usual fall visit to see Mr. Kasting and the people who buy his flowers. According to Mr. Gillman's story, the labor problem is serious with the violet growers. He has solved the problem by buying houses and renting them to his employees, so as to keep them where he can handle them or he knows why.

David J. Scott, of Corfu, was in town looking up the entry list for the fall show to be held in Buffalo this fall.

A number of the Buffalo florists have entered politics this fall, including our ex-president, William F. Kasting, who is running for city treasurer. We shall expect every florist in town to cast his vote this way. R. A. S.

ELWOOD, IND.—Miss Laura Albertine Diebendorfer was married October 16 to Louis Eugene Michelly, of Chicago. The couple will make Chicago their future home.

MACON, GA.—The Idle Hour Nurseries recently completed the erection of three large greenhouses, which have been planted with carnations. Most of the material for the houses was furnished by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago.

NEEDHAM, MASS.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Current Comment.

The Indianapolis Florists' Club met on the evening of October 9, at the South Side Turner hall. The meeting was well attended, forty members being present. After a short business session, all adjourned to the bowling alleys. There are hopes of forming an Indianapolis florists' team that will make it interesting to all comers. A spirited bout of boxing enlivened the proceedings and terminated a very pleasant evening.

The State Florists' Society will hold its fall show November 13 and 14, at the conservatory of A. Wiegand & Sons. Premium lists may be had by applying to the secretary, A. F. J. Baur.

We had several light frosts last week, but no damage was done to outside stock. Roses and carnations are now making nice growth and there will soon be a full supply of good flowers. Another week will see plenty of mums on the market.

S.

NEW ORLEANS.

A few days of fresh weather are bringing the market to a better condition and also giving a check to the chrysanthemums, which at one time looked as if they would be too much open for November 1. The demand for flowers and decorations has also started and will keep on improving.

U. J. Virgin and others had a few good decorations for the opening of stores on Canal street.

Richard Eichling has again full charge of U. J. Virgin's greenhouses. The forcing of bulbs, lilies, callas, etc., to supply his store is his principal business and his stock of decorative plants is in good condition. Mr. Eichling is building a nice little home to receive his bride. The wedding will soon take place.

B. M. Wichers, of Gretna, across the river, is multiplying his stock of nephrolepis. He has quantity, variety and also quality and is disposing of them to retailers around New Orleans. M. M. L.

ERIE, PA.—M. T. Wilkins has a prosperous business. He is using eight houses at present and expects to put up 20,000 feet of glass next season.

JULIUS ROEHRS COMPANY, RUTHERFORD, - NEW JERSEY.

If you wish to be cock of the walk,
 If you'd like to hear the town talk
 Of the plants that you sell,
 Why, you know very well,
 If they're Aschmann's, no buyer will balk.

What do you think; when will you start in?
DO IT NOW. Waiting means suicide. I always act as quickly as I think, and have been successful; learn and do it likewise.

ARAUCARIAS our specialty. Watch us grow.

1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, in October. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 2 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii. Have 3 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5,000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

Primula Obconica—Best improved strain, in bud and bloom, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine—6-inch pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00 each.

WM. C. SMITH

61st and Market Sts., PHILADELPHIA

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business was considerably enlivened last week. There was more funeral work than before. The demand for flowers for parties, receptions, etc., is also increasing with the coming of cooler weather.

The market keeps well cleaned up on all stock. Beauties are selling well. Very few find their way to the local commission houses, as none are grown for the wholesale market in this vicinity. Roses meet with a ready sale. The best stock at present is Kaiserin, Bride, Bridesmaid, Richmond, Meteor and La Detroit. The La Detroit is growing smaller in size, but still sells well.

Chrysanthemums are selling fast. There was a good demand for white and pink for funeral sprays. Yellow was also in big demand, as yellow and black are the colors of the Tigers, who won the American League pennant. Mums are bringing from $1 to $2.50 per dozen.

Carnations are arriving in fairly large quantities, but, the demand being good, all are disposed of at prices ranging from $1 per hundred up. Enchantress, white, red, etc., is of fairly long stem, but Lawson is still short.

Very fine valley arrives daily from Mount Clemens and Canada. Smilax, ferns, asparagus, fancy ferns and southern smilax are plentiful.

Various Notes.

I presume that by this time the whole world knows that the Cubs defeated the Tigers for the world's baseball championship. This is a sad story, but we still have the American League pennant, and in honor of the event the city of Detroit presented the players with a huge tiger made of flowers. W. B. Brown was the artist and he did his work well. The body of the tiger was over six feet long. It required in the neighborhood of 800 mums to cover the frame. The head was of papier-mache and this was also partly covered with flowers. The black stripes were produced with black immortelles. The whole was mounted upon a large platform covered with sod.

Many palms, ferns and other plants are being sold, now that the people are coming back to winter quarters.

Howard W. Metz, of the firm of C. H. Fisk, Chicago, was in this city last week, attending to the burial of his mother, who died in the east at the ripe age of 90 years.

J. Gammage, of London, Ont., paid this city a visit last week. H. S.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEATING IN COLORADO.

I wish to build a house 21x50 feet, three feet and a half high at the sides and ten feet to the ridge. I want to heat it with hot water. How much 2-inch pipe would be required and how would you arrange it? W. D. E.

The house in question, 21x50, will require fourteen 2-inch pipes the length of the house. If the house is to be arranged for bottom heat, with three benches, I would suggest that you arrange to use a flow and four returns under each side bench and a flow and three returns under the middle bench. Connect the expansion tank to the main return near the boiler and give it twelve feet or more of elevation.

PIPING IN WASHINGTON STATE.

Will you please advise me as to the heating of my greenhouse? It runs east and west, is 11x41 feet and eight feet to the ridge. The walls are three feet high, double boarded and filled with sawdust. The house will be used for bedding stuff. The temperature here is seldom very low, 15 degrees above zero being considered cold. I have been planning to put in a Magee round heater. What size of hot water heater would be required, and what size and quantity of pipe? W. W. L.

For a house of this size I would suggest the use of 2-inch pipe. Carry a 2-inch flow under the ridge to the far end of the house, there divide and return by four 2-inch radiating pipes under each side bench, making nine 2-inch pipes the length of the house. The boiler should have a rated capacity of 750 feet.

L. C. C.

PIPING IN MISSOURI.

My greenhouse is 20x50 feet, twelve feet to the ridge, and the sides are five feet four inches high, including sixteen inches of glass. There are also sixteen inches of glass in the north end. The house runs from north to south, and is exposed on all sides, except at the south, where the boiler-shed and work-room are attached. I have a Wilks hot water heater, 30x48 inches. It has two 3-inch openings for flow pipes and three 3-inch

Can the inside temperature be regulated, with such a variable outside temperature, by installing stop valves to shut off or turn on the circulation of the water? I want an inside temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. I would prefer 2-inch pipes for returns and will install stop valves and manifolds at both ends of the house if suggested.

PIPING IN SOUTHERN ONTARIO.

I have built an addition to my greenhouses and have installed a steam heating system, but we are not satisfied with the way it works. We can get steam up to twenty pounds or more, but as soon as it is turned on, the system runs down to nothing and we cannot raise it.

I have a return flue boiler, nine feet six inches long, with thirty-six 3-inch flues. It is fitted with the improved shaking grates, and the grate surface is two feet six inches by three feet six inches. This is intended for the heating of two parallel, connected houses, 21x100 and 18x100. The steam is taken from the dome of the boiler through a 2-inch pipe and carried ten feet to the end of the greenhouses, where there is a cross-head with a 1 1/2-inch flow leading across to the larger house, and connecting, by means of 1 1/4-inch pipe, with four coils of 1 1/4-inch pipe, three pipes in a coil, running the full length of the house. The other flow on the cross-head is 1 1/4-inch pipe, and conveys steam to three coils of 1 1/4-inch pipe, three pipes in a coil, for the smaller house. The boiler is in a pit, walled in on both sides. The return pipe is 2-inch. There is a fall of two feet six inches from the coil to the water line of the boiler, which makes a fall of four feet six inches from where the steam enters the coil to where the water enters the boiler. The coils all have a fall of one inch in twenty feet.

Have I pipe enough to heat in zero weather? What can I do to make a better circulation? Would it be better to change to a water system, and if so, would 2-inch pipe do to convey the flow under the ridge? How many coils of 1 1/4-inch pipe, three in a coil, would be required in each house, to heat to 65 degrees in zero weather? H. E. R.

The system of piping seems to be quite complete. The changes I would suggest are as follows: Place a 2 1/2-inch riser under the ridge of each house; carry each direct from the boiler to the far end of the house; there divide by 2-inch pipes to feed as many coils of 1 1/4-inch pipe as there are benches in the house, using twelve pipes in the 18-foot house and fifteen in the 21-foot house. Keep the coils as close to the bottom of the benches as possible, so as to increase the height from the water level of the boiler to the radiating pipes as

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA.

Charles Kline, an employee of I. N. Kramer & Son, fell into a boiler pit at the greenhouses last winter and sued the firm for damages, asking $2,000. A jury in the county court, after being out for three hours October 10, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant, laying the costs upon the plaintiff.

Kline claimed to have been injured as a result of falling into a pit in the Kramer greenhouses at Marion, December 24, 1906. Dr. Muirhead was the plaintiff's physician and was called to testify in behalf of the plaintiff. He said that on December 25, 1906, the plaintiff called and exhibited abrasions on the knee and the elbow. There was also a contusion on one hip which the plaintiff said had been caused by his falling into the pit. As a result of these injuries plaintiff asserted that he had developed a severe case of stomach trouble. The symptoms were great nausea and a continued ravenous appetite.

The accident happened while the defendant was making some repairs in his boiler room, which necessitated the disconnecting of certain steam pipes in the pit into which plaintiff claimed to have fallen. Plaintiff testified that he fell clear to the bottom of the pit by reason of its not being properly covered. He emphatically stated that he did not get his feet wet while in the pit, although it was thoroughly established by the evidence that at the time he claimed to have fallen into the hole there was scalding water in it to the depth of eighteen inches. It appears that the jury could not reconcile a vigorous appetite with nausea nor see the connection between continued stomach trouble and the abrasions on the elbow and the knee. There also was some wonder in the jury room as to why the plaintiff didn't get his feet wet if he fell into that hole which contained eighteen inches of hot water.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE GOLDEN WAY.

The REVIEW is indebted to E. W. Gaehring, 1805 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, for the photograph from which the illustration was prepared. The Golden Way is evidently a sublimation of the more plebeian gates ajar, for the path we all must tread is seen leading up to the pearly gates, which are just closing after the departed in the same old way. It was designed by Mr. Gaehring and was six feet high, thirty inches broad, and twenty-six inches deep. The flowers used were lavender sweet peas on the inside of the arch, blending harmoniously with the dark pansies on the border of the Way. The star was of Enchantress carnations. The remaining flowers were Bride roses, Baby gladioli, giant candytuft, valley, and Harrisii lilies in the base. It was an excellent conception and a pleasing variation of this old-time favorite floral design.

THE USE OF ACCESSORIES.

Some florists still think that because the leading florist in the town uses many more supplies, in proportion, than the others do, it is because he has the money to put into them. It is not that way at all. The man who makes most free use of the things which add to the attractiveness of his stock is the one who gets the business, and any florist easily can demonstrate for himself how the use of suitable embellishments adds to his trade. For instance, take the item of violet boxes. Some retailers still send out violets in any sort of small box, but the one who knows his business has a stock of special violet boxes, and usually he has more than one grade. It never fails that where one florist sends out violets nicely put up in a box made for the purpose, and his neighbors use any ordinary box, or none at all, the trade soon gets all into the hands of the one who has the enterprise to do things right. What applies to the small matter of a few pennies for a violet box applies to the larger items. No retailer can afford to send out anything but attractive packages.

DAILY ORDERS.

In almost any city it is possible to work up a considerable number of daily orders, which will average a good profit if the whole season is considered. Wherever a dining-car is started out on its run, some florist in that town has, or can get, an order to place a bouquet on each table in the car each day, or to keep the car's ferns in shape. In supplying cut flower work of this kind any grower can afford to make an attractive price, because he can stipulate that he is to use whatever kind of flowers are most abundant with him.

Many of the first-class hotels now make it a rule to have a few flowers on the table for dinner each evening, and the leading restaurants are adopting the same idea. The florist can arrange to supply a daily change, at least during seasons of abundant supplies, the same as is done with the dining-cars.

Another source of daily, or at least frequent, orders is the high-class stores which make a specialty of elaborate window decorations. A vase of flowers is the finishing touch in the surroundings the ordinary. One dealer in table-ware has a display room where each day a different set of dinner-ware is shown on a table fully set. Of course, he must have flowers to go with his napery. A leading photographer always has a vase of flowers on the center-table in the reception room of his studio. There are many chances for such orders if one keeps an eye open for them, and makes the right suggestion.

LUNCHEON TABLES.

Please give us some ideas as to how to decorate small card-tables with flowers for luncheon.

D. B.

Because of the fact that the tables are small, the luncheon decorations must of necessity be not large. Probably the most frequent style of decoration for intended to show off a fine costume in many a department store window. There is nothing unprofessional in soliciting this kind of business.

In the large cities there are hundreds of exclusive stores, studios, etc., where an effort is made to do things out of the purpose is a small, low bowl filled with small flowers like violets or valley at this season, or sweet peas or pansies in spring, loosely arranged. This might be elaborated by scattering flowers on the cloth, or by streamers of smilax leading out to points between the plates; or in-

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE GOLDEN WAY.

The REVIEW is indebted to E. W. Gaehring, 1805 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, for the photograph from which the illustration was prepared. The Golden Way is evidently a sublimation of the more plebeian gates ajar, for the path we all must tread is seen leading up to the pearly gates, which are just closing after the departed in the same old way. It was designed by Mr. Gaehring and was six feet high, thirty inches broad, and twenty-six inches deep. The flowers used were lavender sweet peas on the inside of the arch, blending harmoniously with the dark pansies on the border of the Way. The star was of Enchantress carnations. The remaining flowers were Bride roses, Baby gladioli, giant candytuft, valley, and Harrisii lilies in the base. It was an excellent conception and a pleasing variation of this old-time favorite floral design.

THE USE OF ACCESSORIES.

Some florists still think that because the leading florist in the town uses many more supplies, in proportion, than the others do, it is because he has the money to put into them. It is not that way at all. The man who makes most free use of the things which add to the attractiveness of his stock is the one who gets the business, and any florist easily can demonstrate for himself how the use of suitable embellishments adds to his trade. For instance, take the item of violet boxes. Some retailers still send out violets in any sort of small box, but the one who knows his business has a stock of special violet boxes, and usually he has more than one grade. It never fails that where one florist sends out violets nicely put up in a box made for the purpose, and his neighbors use any ordinary box, or none at all, the trade soon gets all into the hands of the one who has the enterprise to do things right. What applies to the small matter of a few pennies for a violet box applies to the larger items. No retailer can afford to send out anything but attractive packages.

DAILY ORDERS.

In almost any city it is possible to pick up a considerable number of daily orders, which will average a good profit the whole season is considered. Wherever a dining-car is started out on its run, some florist in that town has, I can get, an order to place a bouquet on each table in the car each day, or to keep the car's ferns in shape. In supplying cut flower work of this kind any grower can afford to make an attractive price, because he can stipulate that he is to use whatever kind of flowers are most abundant with him.

Many of the first-class hotels now make it a rule to have a few flowers on the table for dinner each evening, and the leading restaurants are adopting the same idea. The florist can arrange to supply a daily change, at least during seasons of abundant supplies, the same as is done with the dining-cars.

Another source of daily, or at least frequent, orders is the high-class stores which make a specialty of elaborate window decorations. A vase of flowers is the finishing touch in the surroundings the ordinary. One dealer in table-ware has a display room where each day a different set of dinner-ware is shown on a table fully set. Of course, he must have flowers to go with his napery. A leading photographer always has a vase of flowers on the center-table in the reception room of his studio. There are many chances for such orders if one keeps an eye open for them, and makes the right suggestion.

LUNCHEON TABLES.

Please give us some ideas as to how to decorate small card-tables with flowers for luncheon. D. B.

Because of the fact that the tables are small, the luncheon decorations must of necessity be not large. Probably the most frequent style of decoration for intended to show off a fine costume in many a department store window. There is nothing unprofessional in soliciting this kind of business.

In the large cities there are hundreds of exclusive stores, studios, etc., where an effort is made to do things out of the purpose is a small, low bowl filled with small flowers like violets or valley at this season, or sweet peas or pansies in spring, loosely arranged. This might be elaborated by scattering flowers on the cloth, or by streamers of smilax leading out to points between the plates; or instead of bowls, fancy baskets, etc., might be used, as an automobile filled with daisies. We have used on small tables thin-necked vases, each containing one perfect rose, with not too long a stem, sometimes a different variety in each vase. A little thought will suggest a great variety of ways to decorate small tables.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The conservatory at the Sign of the Rose, the artistic flower shop of Charles Henry Fox, Philadelphia, is on the second floor, above the store. It is reached by a winding stair, is very light and always beautifully arranged. The two views shown in this issue show the conservatory as it appeared at Easter. Under it is the demonstrating room, where Mr. Fox shows just how an arrangement will look, and in the rear, his workshop. This conservatory is strong and well-built, with cement floors, made, like many other things about the place, by the employees. Beyond the conservatory is Mr. Fox's private office, where he plans his floral arrangements, sometimes aided by a masterpiece of art in the shape of a watercolor, as an inspiration. Beyond this office is the book-keeping department.

EUROPEAN REVIEW.

Owing to the cold, sunless summer, dahlias were in poor form at the early shows and there was a dearth of novelties. The glorious weather of September changed the aspect completely and at the later shows flowers were good and novelties plentiful. J. Stredwick & Son, St. Leonards-on-Sea, our leading specialists for several years, are again on the top with new varieties in the cactus section.

In England and Germany, and to some extent in France also, the peony-flowered dahlias have been quite a feature at the leading shows and their success is assured, owing to the favor bestowed upon them by the public. These were raised by Mr. Hornsveld, a florist at Baarn, in Holland, who spent seven or eight years in hybridizing and sent out a dozen varieties two years ago, followed by another dozen a year ago. How popular they have become for decorative purposes in the gardens may be judged from the large orders placed with growers for spring delivery. They are also beautiful for cut flower work. A few of the best are: Nicholas II, pure white; King Leopold, pale yellow; Paul Kruger, white ground flushed rosy red; Queen Emma, apricot; Duke Henry, rich crimson, and Dr. von Korken, soft peach. Hornsveld, the raiser, devotes his time mainly to the raising of new varieties and leaves their distribution to others.

Some little idea of the gigantic proportions which the trade in Covent Garden, London, in chrysanthemums has assumed may be gleaned from the fact that one grower alone is sending 3,000 dozen specimen blooms daily, varying in price from 6 cents to 12 cents each.

Novelties in sweet peas offered by the British growers are not quite so numerous as during the last few years, mainly owing to the rigorous selections of the National Sweet Pea Society. St. George, from Hurst & Son, is one of the best, standard orange red, wings bright rose; Elsie Herbert, white petals, tipped rose; The Marquis, bold lavender flowers; Evelyn Hemus, distinct, creamy white, picotee edge rose-color; Etta Dyke, large pure white, exquisitely formed; Mrs. Wm. King, an improved form of John Ingman, warranted ninety per cent fixity; Nancy Perkins, orange scarlet; Rosie Adams, heliotrope; Silas Cole, deep maroon; these are the most promising ones.

CYCLAMEN MITE.

I am in trouble and, like many others, come to you for advice. I inclose some leaves and buds of cyclamen, which, when I place them under a glass, I find to be infested with some kind of insect, which is new to me. It causes the leaves and buds to curl. Can you tell me what it is and if there is any remedy? The plants are clean of any ordinary insect. My treatment for them has been fumigation, part of the time with red pepper added. I have also given frequent sprays of To-bak-ine, but none of these seems to do any good. The plants are in 5-inch and 6-inch pots and until about two weeks ago seemed to be in prime condition.

F. T. R.

Your leaves, as nearly as I can see, are badly affected with what is commonly known among cyclamen growers as cyclamen mite. Although it has now been troublesome for some years, I am unaware of any scientific investigation having been made in regard to it and so far I have not heard of any grower who has been able to successfully combat it when it has once secured a foothold.

I know many growers who have had fine batches of plants ruined yearly by this pest. It usually shows itself the most just before the blooming season arrives. Malformed flowers and deformed leaves are certain indications of its presence. About every imaginable remedy has been tried, but never, so far as we know, with anything approaching success. The only thing I can recommend, and it is certainly a radical remedy, is to destroy your entire batch of plants and start anew. Probably you would not be troubled again, although I know of instances where even this method has failed. I think that possibly, if you make a clean start with seed, you may be spared any further affliction of this kind. C. W.

particular preferences of each one of his customers. To satisfy the varied demands coming from a large number of persons widely different in their inclinations, there must needs be grown some varieties now but seldom seen; for instance, the old Buttercup, than which there has never been a better yellow in point of beauty. This variety's shyness and late blooming qualities have long since put it into the class of "also rans." Besides, yellow carnations cannot be termed staple, like white, pink and red. But, with all that may be urged against this old gem, I am not prepared to admit that it could not be grown at a profit under present modes of culture and at a time when high prices obtain—solely, however, by a grower-retailer.

The Question of Green.

The question of green to be included with an order for carnations is at times a perplexing one, inasmuch as many buyers assume, either through ignorance or arrogance, that, as the green has no value, it is only necessary to ask for it.

That something in the line of green is needed in arranging a vase of carnations for the best effect, no one will deny; at the same time, its use entails expense, prejudiced opinions to the contrary notwithstanding. But to make a practice of omitting green in case of its not being specially requested and

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

The Grower-Retailer.

Although not wishing to trespass, in the least, on the Retail Florist Department of the REVIEW, I venture a few remarks on the selling end of the carnation business as likely to interest those growers of the divine flower who retail a portion or all of their product.

The Old Buttercup.

Growers who confine themselves strictly to the wholesale trade are not obliged to study the tastes of the actual consumer as closely as the retailer, who must not only keep informed on the prevailing customs and ever-changing fashions of the general public, but must carefully note and carry in mind the supplying it when specified in an order, charging the same price in both instances, would seem to be an inclination toward the false principle that two wrongs make a right. Either charge extra for green when furnished or make the price per dozen high enough to include it; the latter plan is the better. And, most important of all, when once the course is decided upon, keep in the straight and narrow path; don't deviate, or you are lost again.

Stevia is a most pleasing accompaniment to carnations and can be grown in various ways. Our plan is to lift clumps from the open in early September, benching where young carnation stock will stand later.

More on this subject soon.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Azaleas.

The importations of Belgian grown azaleas are coming to hand once more and, in spite of earlier pessimistic prognostications, are extremely well budded. These plants, it must be remembered, have a tolerably long journey before we receive them and are in not a few cases stored too near boilers. As a consequence the balls become dry and there is a lamentable loss of foliage. As you unpack your plants, note carefully whether the balls are dry and soak any dry ones in tubs of water. If other work is pressing, these azaleas can be stored quite close together in a cool, light shed or greenhouse until you have time to pot them. In potting, be sure that you press the soil firmly around the sides of the pots and leave a good space for water. It is impossible to properly water any hard-wooded plant where the soil comes nearly to the top of the pot. Yet how often do we see plants potted in this way!

Nicely bloomed azaleas are always in demand at Christmas and it is not too early to start a good batch of them. Bright colors are in special demand at the holidays and there is no finer variety than the orange-scarlet, Apollo. A good, very early white is Deutsche Perle. Simon Mardner, silvery rose in color, is always popular. Other desirable sorts are Vervaneana and Hexe or Firefly. The last named, which is rosy red in color, makes an ideal Christmas plant. It can be flowered as early as Deutsche Perle and no grower will go wrong in forcing a good number of it. Give the early azaleas a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and syringe freely. Better do a little forcing now than nearer Christmas.

Rhododendrons.

Rhododendrons are becoming quite popular as pot plants. They cannot be had in flower at Christmas, but usually take well at Easter. You will probably receive a supply of these with your azaleas. There need be no hurry about potting them, for, unless wanted as early as March, they may as well be heeled in a deep coldpit until a few weeks before being required in flower. We cannot advise hard forcing of these in an effort to get them in for Christmas. They will sell much better in the spring and are good subjects to use even as late as Memorial day. A few good sorts to grow are: Lady Clermont, rosy red; Michael Waterer, bright red; Cunningham's White, fine for early forcing;

John Walter, crimson; Mme. Masson, white; fastuosum flore pleno, lavender, and Sir H. Havelock, crimson. The large-flowered and beautiful Pink Pearl is still high in price. It is a great seller with the bon-ton florists.

Rambler Roses.

The long spell of clear, sunny weather has been splendid for ripening the canes on rambler roses. We presume many florists will lift and pot their plants early in November. We hope any plants intended for forcing have had their shoots tied up in order to secure proper hardening of the wood. Pot-grown plants are always preferable to fall-lifted ones, but nevertheless good results may be had from fall-potted stock, especially if the canes have not been allowed to ramble over the ground all summer. The Crimson Rambler has a more erect habit than the pink varieties and generally ripens its wood earlier.

The canes of plants which have been forms, such as Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins, have. It is a great pity that Crimson Rambler has such unattractive foliage. This drawback has caused many to plant the pink forms in their piazzas and arbors in preference to the crimson variety.

Prepare for Winter.

It may be somewhat premature to talk of winter while we enjoy such ideal climatic conditions, but we often see some snow in October and sometimes heavy snowstorms occur early in November. We must therefore be up and doing if we would be fully prepared for winter's arrival. We suppose there are few of us who have not had some work we had hoped to do before freezing-up weather, which we have had to postpone. The same occurs every year. We hope that all cracked and broken panes of glass have been replaced in greenhouses and frames, and any necessary painting and puttying should be completed without delay. This work can be done comfortably now, but it is a different proposition if you wait for snow and ice and then try, with benumbed fingers, to do necessary repairs. An abundant coal supply should be in your cellars, and if heaters and piping are O. K. you can then heave a sigh of contentment.

Lilies.

There is still abundant time in which to pot a good batch of Japanese long-florum lilies for Easter. Bear in mind that this great festival comes late next year and that there are still six months to grow your plants in. Your earliest Harrisii will probably now be showing buds in some instances. You can probably get a number of these in for Thanksgiving by forcing hard. Give them 70 to 75 degrees at night to hurry them along. Those intended for Christmas may be kept 10 degrees cooler, but be sure that you can count the buds kept on the dry side lately should now be pretty well ripened, but the pink sorts grow much later and need more time to plump up their wood. Give the plants all possible sunshine and allow pot-grown stock to become quite dry before watering. You will probably notice what beautiful, shiny leaves all the pink forty days before you want them in bloom. Remember that forcing for Christmas and forcing for Easter are two very different propositions. You have a diminishing supply of sunlight prior to the first event, with steadily falling temperature, whereas the reverse is the case with the latter.

Sweet Peas.

The early sown sweet peas will now be growing fast and need constant attention in tying. Continue to grow them cool and airy. A night temperature of 45 degrees is better than one 5 to 10 degrees higher, although we have seen fairly good sweet peas grown in carnation temperatures. If you have not yet sown any seed for a crop to follow chrysanthemums, lose no time in doing so. Fumigate once a week and spray to keep down red spider, this being especially necessary where the plants are near the heating pipes.

Geraniums.

Cuttings put in late in August or early in September will now be rooted. Afford water sparingly, so as not to excite too rapid growth. Where the plants are in small pots and you are anxious to propagate from them later, more water may be applied. If the cuttings perchance are in flats and are rooted, keep the soil or sand quite dry and give merely sufficient water to prevent the stems from shriveling. You can still root cuttings easily. Give them the full sun at all times for best results.

Brief Reminders.

Keep watch on the mums as they flower and be sure your plants are correctly named before you reserve them for stock. Have courage to throw away sorts which are becoming obsolete.

Finish lifting cannas, dahlias, glad-ioli and similar roots.

Keep Cypripedium insigne in a cool house while in flower. You need not be in a hurry to cut the flowers, as they last three months on the plant.

Sow shamrock seed now if you want good plants for the anniversary of St. Patrick's day.

Give Moschosma riparium 45 to 50 degrees at night. It promises to become a useful midwinter decorative plant.

Finish up potting Dutch bulbs in flats and pans and be sure they are well soaked with water.

Give Euphorbia jacquiniæflora 60 degrees at night. It makes a nice Christmas plant.

Let the berried solanums have plenty of sun and water. A little feeding will also prove helpful now.

BEATRICE MAY.

The accompanying illustration shows a bench of Beatrice May growing in a house at Florham Farms, Madison, N. J., where Arthur Herrington presides. I have been watching chrysanthemums for many years, but never before have I seen such a magnificent sight as this bench presented. The reproduction of the photograph gives an idea of the flowers, but cannot show the exquisite coloring or the absolute uniformity of the whole lot of plants. The foliage of Beatrice May generally is spotted and poor, but these plants were shaded somewhat all summer by the position of the house and the foliage is very good.

The bench is 100 feet long and has four rows planted in it, the individual plants being ten inches apart in the rows. The plants were grown to single stem and the loss of flowers is only one-half of one per cent.

Some growers have intimated that Beatrice May is not a commercial variety, but if I were at liberty to give the price these flowers brought in open market, many of my readers would not believe me. Beatrice May is a slow grower and should be propagated not later than March, and then, given a fair show in the bench, it will turn in more money than any other mid-October kind grown.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

SOME OF THE NOVELTIES.This Year's Novelties.

Already the mail is getting heavy with inquiries from the enthusiasts as to what is to be expected in novelties this year, how they are shaping and so on. By present indications there will be at least a dozen good things, some of which I will mention below.

The best thing to date that is fully open is Mary Donnellan. It is a beauty, without a doubt. The color is a rich, deep yellow, which is a yellow in any light, artificial or otherwise. The incurving petals, many of them, are an inch wide, giving the flower a massive appearance, a good deal like a well finished Duckham. It is a tall grower and April propagation should be early enough for it, but Mary Donnellan will be on hand next year; that is certain.

W. W. Moir is building up a monster flower and, if I mistake not, will be the king-pin of the season's novelties. The stem and foliage are of the usual Wells-Pockett dwarf grand type, while the flower is on the Beatrice May style, but has a stiffer, heavier petal. W. Moir certainly has all the earmarks of a winner. It is pure white in color.

Chrysanthemum Beatrice May.

Mrs. Norman Davis is an English seedling and it is a beauty. Stock was hard to get last spring and will be for another year. It is a rather tall grower, but the stem and foliage are beautiful. The flower will be finished in a few days and reminds one of the old Mayflower in its best days, twelve years or more ago, only that Mrs. Norman Davis is twice as large as Mayflower used to be. The color is much the same as the latter variety was.

Mrs. H. Rider Haggard is another of the season's whites that is very promising. A flower that I had on exhibition at the New York Florists' Club last week was very favorably noted by several experts present. It is a true Jap, every petal hanging right down, which takes away the appearance of size, though the flower is really well up in size. It is a very refined flower, without a trace of coarseness in its make-up.

O. H. Broomhead, previously noted in these columns, is finishing splendidly. The color is a rich, deep rose, and early and late buds alike are full to the center. The habit is very dwarf. Every bud is coming perfect and we must set Broomhead down as the best novelty in its color for the year so far showing.

Mrs. W. Wells is one of the most striking colors ever seen in mums. The flower is not very heavy, at present, though there is considerable center yet to come. It is a Jap, and the color, boldly presented by the reflexing petal, is an orange shading to vermillion—just the color of a lovely sunset, such as we often see in the early fall. I am no color poet myself, but I found an artist friend composing a poem to Mrs. W. Wells yesterday. "Soul sister" and "affinity" and other strictly up-to-date words were being rhymed with "divinity," etc., just about the time I turned the hose on him. And who knows? Possibly I may have destroyed the aspirations of an embryo genius by so doing. Mrs. W. Wells, in a collection of forty or fifty kinds, is easily noticed and admired.

Margaret Codrington is also a peculiar shade of color and a handsome flower. It is somewhat on the color of Mrs. Geo. Heaume, though shading slightly more to the fawn color. Personally I like this variety very much.

E. Newman, a Jones seedling, if I recall correctly, is a good early yellow. It was fully open by October 7 and should find a place in the early division. The stem and foliage are very good. It is a Jap instead of a Japanese incurved, and some people profess to believe that this type is not good commercially, but it has never seemed that way to me.

W. Luxford, a Wells-Pocket seedling, has merit in the flower, but the foliage is very spotty with me, for some reason. Another year, with careful selection, we may overcome that. Oftentimes we can not tell with only one trial what a variety will be.

Last Year's Novelties.

The novelties of last year are now also presenting an interesting sight. The largest one so far is M. Loiseau-Rousseau. The color is a light lavender and has been described as "charming," "fierce" and "rank" by different parties, but however much we may differ in opinions of its color, there can be but one opinion of its size and that is, immense.

Dakoma, as a bronze, looks good and I like it very much. One good thing about a bronze is that it is almost always fine in foliage and stem.

Souv. Scalarandis, from buds August 25, is making very beautiful flowers. This variety is a good yellow. The petals are hard and not affected by dampness in any degree. Scalarandis should rank high with the commercial grower who is looking for the kind that will grow itself. It will not go over three feet high and will give a flower that can be kicked all over the place without damage.

Mrs. A. T. Miller and Mary Godfrey are both gone. They will be grown considerably in the east next year commercially, but they are too early to hold in very good shape for the shows.

Miriam Hankey, which I am claiming as the best of last year's varieties, is only now showing color. It is a splendid grower and, I believe, has a great future as a late pink. I had it in excellent shape last year at Thanksgiving; in fact, the flower illustrated in my list this spring was not photographed till November 30.

Reginald Vallis is finding many admirers. The flower as a whole is entirely distinct, and the long, narrow petals, of deep rose, hanging down to the foliage, are very striking.

Clay Frick, by reports to date, is making good in all sections where Duckham is well done. I look to see fine competition with this variety at some of the eastern shows. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

SECRETARY WILSON'S OPTIMISM.

Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, began an address at Syracuse, N. Y., October 23, as follows:

"The American people are prosperous. Labor is all employed at the highest wages paid in our history.

"Skill is in demand in all lines of industrial activity.

"Capital is increasing and active.

"Every industry in the land is extending.

"Labor from other lands looks to us and comes to us.

"Schools are overflowing.

"Our transportation systems, the best in the world, are unable to meet the requirements of commerce.

"Our manufacturers more nearly supply home demands than at any time in the past and sell heavily abroad.

"The farmer feeds the people as no people ever before were fed and sells in foreign markets a surplus of $1,148,000,000 worth of his products. Prosperity quite up to the average of human success attends intelligent management of farm affairs nowadays. No class of people live better, enjoy life more, or contribute as much to the wealth of the republic."

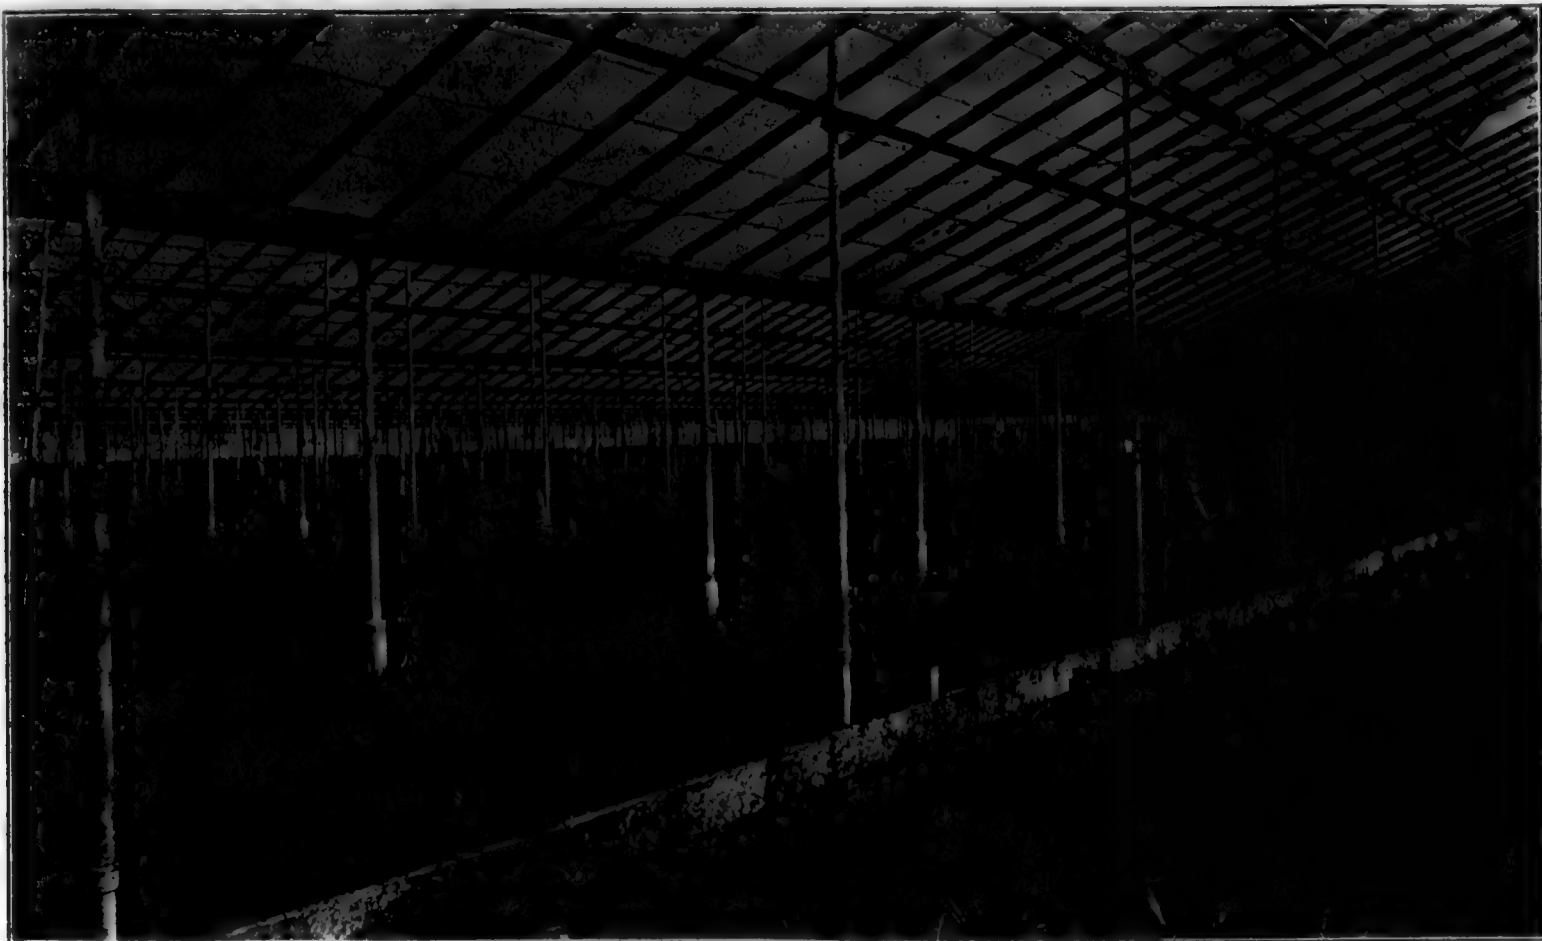

REINBERG'S NEW PLANT.

There are a number of reasons why Peter Reinberg, Chicago, decided to put up his 1907 addition at a location removed some two miles and a half from the old plant at Summerdale. In the first place, land is commanding a premium at the old location. Since having started the 1907 addition he has secured a couple of acres adjoining the old plant on North Robey street, but there is no large contiguous piece of vacant property. Again, the question of soil supply is important, for all soil must be hauled several miles. Also, where the future expansion is to be there must be sidetrack facilities, where coal, manure, etc., can be unloaded from the cars directly into the buildings. All the conditions are met at the new location on a 40-acre tract just off Lincoln avenue, close to the Peterson Nursery. The soil is excellent. The switch is there and the locality is one of the best north of Chicago for growing cut flowers. It is perhaps a mile or more west of the Wietor establishment.

The range which Mr. Reinberg erected at the new location this summer consists of eight houses 21x300 feet. The style of construction is the same as at the old place, except that wooden gutters are used, the Dietsch pattern, supported on iron posts seven feet high. The ridges are thirteen feet, so that it is practically one house 168x300. One of the accompanying illustrations is from a photograph taken with the camera standing in one corner of the range. The houses are as light as modern building methods can make them, with narrow gutters and wide glass, but the strength is shown in the picture by the number of roof supports. In view of the lens there are seven rows of gutter supports, 2-inch pipe, set seven feet apart. This makes a total of 294 gutter posts. In each house there are two lines of purlin supports; 1-inch pipes seven feet apart. This makes a total of 672 purlin supports, giving 966 pipes for the 50,400 square feet of ground covered, or practically one post for each fifty-two square feet of ground, which ought to be enough to hold the roof up or down, according to the weather.

Peter Reinberg's New Plant, the Nucleus for a New Range Outside Chicago.

Interior of Peter Reinberg's New Range Outside of Chicago.

One of the interesting features of the place is the heating apparatus. There are two 60x18 return tube boilers. These are second-hand boilers which formerly did high pressure duty in the boiler-room at the Auditorium Annex. Now they are expected to carry fifty to sixty pounds' pressure, which is choked down to whatever the weather requires by means of the Eclipse pressure regulating valve, the same device the John Davis Co. has installed in many greenhouse plants. By a simple adjustment of weights on this valve the grower can have any pressure he wants, from one pound up. In each house there are two 1½-inch flow pipes carried on the purlin posts. Under each of the outside benches in each house there are two 1¼-inch returns, giving six pipes to a house. The return of condensation is taken care of by two Morehead traps. It is worthy of note that Mr. Reinberg has discontinued the use of hot water since he put in the first Morehead trap. He finds that it is economical to carry the high pressure on the boiler, the check valve makes it easy to thus maintain a steady pressure, and with the return trap the circulation is excellent, permitting the use of the minimum of heating pipes. The Martin grate is installed under these boilers, as it has proved a coal saver. Pocahontas coal is used and the narrow openings between the grate bars prevent a waste such as occurs with the use of this fuel in the old-fashioned, wide, stationary bars. No matter how heavy the load, the grates rock easily and return to the center position of their own accord. It takes but a little shaking, if done frequently and regularly, to keep the grate clean.

In each house there are three benches, each five feet wide. These are put lower than in the older houses. The entire plant is given to carnations, the range housing some 64,000 plants. With six 147-foot benches in each house, the varieties are as follows: Enchantress, twelve benches; Lawson, twelve benches; White Lawson, five benches; Lady Bountiful, five benches; Boston Market, eight benches; Cardinal, two benches; Robert Craig, two benches. This leaves the bench along the west wall for propagating purposes, and the character of the wall shows that it is expected to come down shortly, when an addition is made to the plant.

The houses were built by Mike Matchen, who has charge of all building and repair operations for Mr. Reinberg. The foreman in charge is Jacob Geimer, who had charge of the M. Winandy place while Mr. Reinberg was one of the trustees in bankruptcy. The plants are not as large as those in the seven houses given to carnations at the Summerdale place, because they were planted later, after a season of growth in a heavy soil outdoors. But they are clean and healthy and give promise of a better crop than Mr. Reinberg has had in the last two years.

TREATMENT OF SCHIZANTHUS.

I have quite a few schizanthus in 4-inch pots, three plants to the pot. Will you kindly give me a few cultural directions for carrying the plants up to the flowering season? MORRIS.

Keep the plants well pinched to make them stocky. Grow along in a cool and airy house. If you are crowded for room they will do well in a frame from which frost can be excluded. Shift into 6-inch pots before the roots become too much matted. The variety Wisetonensis, which is of dwarf habit and the best adapted for pot culture, can be flowered in 6-inch pots by feeding well. A few stakes will be needed before the flowers open. If larger plants are required, give a further shift into 8-inch pots. Varieties like grandiflorus, oculatus and retusus albus can be grown into quite big specimens by allowing them 10-inch to 12-inch pots and staking out well, but as a rule smaller plants in 6-inch to 8-inch pots are preferred. Grow cool and in full sunshine all the time and afford abundant ventilation. The plants are speedily ruined in a close, stuffy atmosphere. C. W.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—William Kober is undergoing surgical treatment at the Allentown Hospital.

GALVESTON, TEX.—James A. Hawkins has opened an up-to-date flower store at 2024 Market street, in the Slaughter building.

ALTAMONT, N. C.—Weld & Franklin say that the demand for galax is exceptionally heavy this year and that they have orders for all the galax they will be able to buy in their district this year.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—The Stuppy Floral Co. has leased the room adjoining its store at Sixth and Francis streets. After thorough remodeling, the two rooms being thrown into one, the store will be one of the finest in the west.

ROSES

TEMPERATURE FOR KILLARNEY.

What temperature suits Killarney, and is it a strong feeder? I have some nice looking plants, but cannot get over fourteen inches of stem. We try to keep a temperature of about 60 degrees at night.
J. G. T.

The best temperature for Killarney is 58 to 60 degrees, and at this temperature it will stand high feeding. Killarney is not noted for its long stems and at this season fourteen to sixteen inches is considered a good marketable length. As the season advances the stems will lengthen, but it is a rose requiring at all times plenty of air; otherwise it is inclined to shed its leaves.
RIBES.

MILDEW AND RUST.

Please give me the formulas for the following remedies: Sulphur solution to spray for mildew; kerosene emulsion; blue vitriol solution to spray for mildew and rust.

Would you advise feeding roses that are badly mildewed?

Is the wet soil under the rose beds partially responsible for the mildew on the roses?
E. G. S.

I do not know of any way of preparing sulphur to be used as a spray which would be effective against mildew. The most effective way to use this is to use it either in the powder form by blowing it over the foliage with a powder blower, or to make it into a paint, in the proportions of two parts sulphur and one part air-slaked lime, and apply it to the pipes. By closing the ventilators for a couple of hours during the coldest part of the night and repeating this once a week, mildew cannot exist in a house.

Kerosene emulsion is prepared and administered as follows: Soap, finely sliced and dissolved in warm water, two ounces; kerosene, one pint; water, ten quarts. When the soap is liquefied, remove from near the fire and add the kerosene. Agitate with a force pump for five or ten minutes, until it becomes a homogeneous mass, from which the kerosene will not separate on standing. Dilute with water in proportion of sixteen to one for roses and most other greenhouse stock. Apply with a syringe.

Blue vitriol chemically is designated in the U. S. pharmacopœia as Cupri sulphas and in the British work as sulphate of copper, and may be obtained by heating sulphuric acid and copper together and dissolving the soluble product in water, then evaporating the solution until crystallization takes place on cooling.

Ammoniacal copper carbonate, which is the ordinary remedy for rust, is prepared as follows: Copper carbonate, one ounce; ammonia, enough to dissolve the copper; water, twelve gallons. Dissolve the copper carbonate in the ammonia and dilute before using.

Copper carbonate is rather costly, but can be prepared in the following manner: Copper sulphate, two pounds; soda carbonate, two pounds and a half. Dissolve these separately in about two gallons of water, pour together and stir thoroughly. A precipitate of copper carbonate will form and sulphate of soda will remain in solution.

Roses should never be subjected to heavy feeding when they are suffering from any trouble or are in a weak condition, as this only aggravates the trouble.

Muddy bottoms of benches, caused by defective drainage, are a fruitful source of disease, as they create weakness by root inaction, and where weakness occurs disease is certain to get a hold.

RIBES.

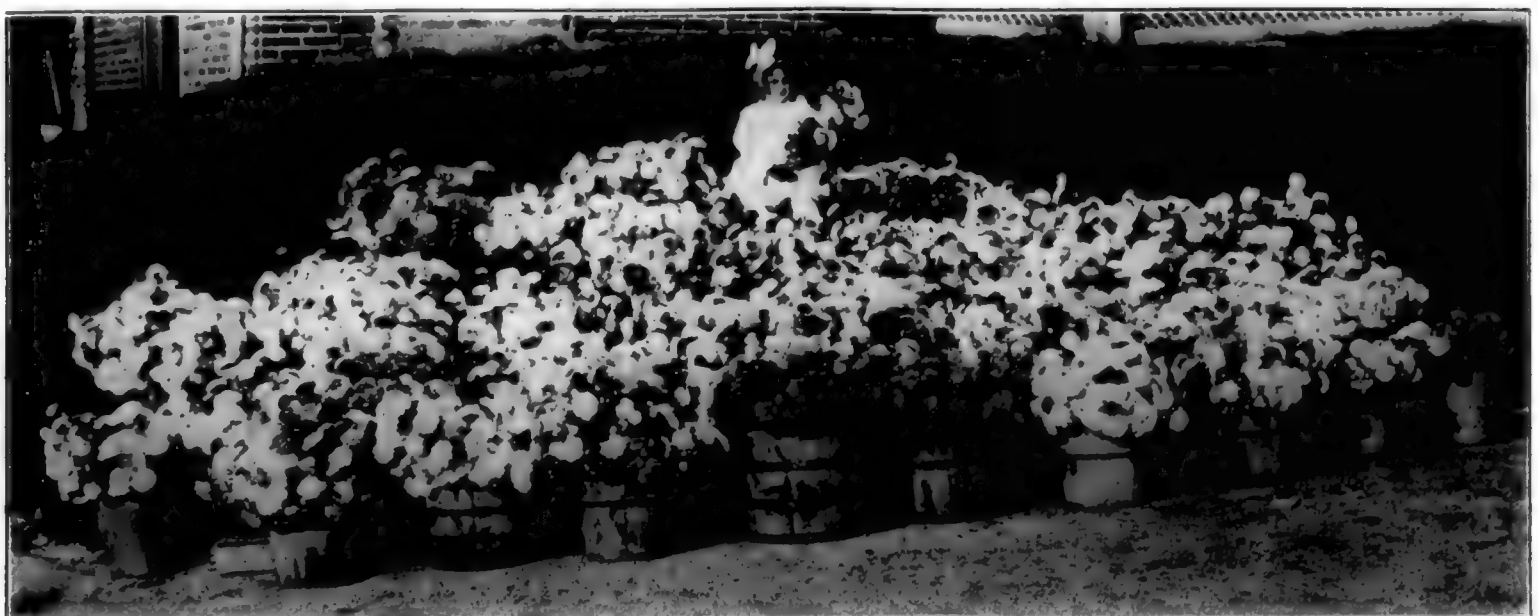

PARKER'S ASTERS.

With some of the aster growers the season of 1907 has been an exceptionally successful one in spite of the fact that weather conditions were not at all favorable. One of the growers who have profited by the result of years of care was A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, Mass., whose field of asters, photographed in September, is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. The picture shows only a part of the field, there having been over 40,000 plants altogether. The smaller view is from a photograph taken of one day's picking and shows 5,500 blooms ready for bunching for the market.

The variety is one of the branching asters, a strain worked up by Mr. Parker through a number of years of painstaking care. He has made it a point to save seeds only from plants of the best health and habit. No seeds have been saved from other than perfect flowers and the result was that in his immense crop this year practically every bloom was salable at a remunerative price.

ACCELERATING PLANT GROWTH.

Experiments are being conducted by B. H. Thwaites in the gardens of the Royal Botanic Society, Regent's Park, London, in respect to the culture of plants by the aid of the electric light. The plants receive the benefit of the ordinary sunlight during the daytime, and at night a powerful electric light enables the plants to carry on the work of carbon assimilation. The light is obtained from a powerful lamp which travels slowly from one end of the house to the other, and returns again by an automatic process. A small engine generates the electricity, and the surplus heat from the engine is utilized for the heating of the house in which the experiments are conducted. The cost of the gas, which serves the double purpose of heating the structure and driving the generating plant, is lower than that of the fuel consumed in an ordinary heating furnace necessary to maintain the same degree of warmth by means of a hot-water system. The rays of light from the lamp pass through a water-screen, and on emerging they form a spectrum approximating to that of ordinary sunlight.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Paris Green for White Fly.

In "The Readers' Corner," on page 5 of the REVIEW of September 26, I recommended as a remedy for white fly a mixture of flour, sugar and Paris green, applied to the sides of the benches. In reply to an inquiry as to the proportions of the ingredients, I would say that I was not guided by any exact formula, but used enough Paris green to make the mixture look green, and put in a liberal quantity of white sugar. It is evident that the flies were attracted by the sweetness, for you cannot catch flies with vinegar. We thought that melted white sugar, with the Paris green in it, would do the work, but when mixed with flour it kills both the sow bugs and the white flies, and is more easily applied than in liquid form. As I mentioned before, we tried bran—not corn, as the printer made me say it—and we also tried brown sugar, instead of white, but the bugs wrinkled their noses at it. Next, I suppose, they will insist on a pure food law. I conclude, from my observations, that the lower creation, like the higher, likes plenty of sweetness. Therefore, don't save the sugar.

Gas Factory Near Greenhouses.

We shall be very much obliged if some reader of the REVIEW will give us any information as to whether a gas plant within a hundred feet of greenhouses would have an injurious effect on the stock. We are threatened with the erection of a large gas plant close to our greenhouses and are much afraid that the manufacturing of the carbureted water gas, which this company is intending to put out, will make the growing of flowers impossible. Any information on this subject through your paper will be

The Peachblow Hibiscus.

In the REVIEW of October 3, page 7, I noticed a paragraph concerning the hardiness of the Peachblow hibiscus which may be misleading. The Peachblow, as we know it in Kentucky, is not a form of H. Moscheutos, but of H. Sinensis. It bears beautiful flowers almost continuously, but it is a tender shrub and needs the protection of the greenhouse through the winter in Kentucky and farther south. S. M.

Could you please tell me where to buy small shells for decorating graves? They are in great demand here, and I cannot find them anywhere in St. Louis.

Another Remedy for Sow Bugs.

In answer to T. A. G.'s inquiry in the REVIEW of October 3, concerning sow bugs, I would offer the following simple recipe, hoping it may be of some help to him. It has helped me.

Take common white granulated sugar, any quantity, and mix Paris green through it until the granules are well coated. Then sprinkle indiscriminately under the benches, or anywhere where their haunts are. Mix dry, and watch results.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

PROCRASTINATION in small matters is the thief of good results in many a grower's greenhouses.

It costs little money to keep a greenhouse establishment clean and in order, but a great many growers seem to think the cost in effort is excessive.

THE progress being made by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, as illustrated by the picture of their new store, on the Pacific Coast page of this issue, shows that the trade is rapidly re-establishing itself in even better shape than before the great fire.

READERS are advised to cut out and preserve the article on exterminating the white fly with hydrocyanic acid gas, which appears on page 48. In spite of the fact that the formula has been published scores of times, almost daily requests are received for it.

THE Wisconsin shippers of lycopodium are asking 6 cents to 7 cents per pound, and one asks 8 cents. Little green is coming out of the woods, but with open weather there is likely to be enough stock to go far at present asking prices. However, jobbers are not anxious to book further orders until they have fully covered their advance orders.

DAMAGES FOR MRS. BAARTMAN.

Mrs. Baartman, widow of H. C. Baartman, who was drowned by the foundering of the steamer Berlin while crossing from England to Holland last spring, brought an action for compensation against the Great Eastern Railway Co. In the London courts she was awarded $7,500. Mr. Baartman was a partner in the firm of Baartman & Koning, bulb growers, Sassenheim, and was returning from a business trip. According to the Horticultural Trade Journal, the surviving partner, J. W. Koning, in giving evidence stated that in 1905 the net profits amounted to $5,000, in 1906 to $7,500, and deceased's share this year would probably have exceeded $5,000. Mr. Baartman was a life member of the Society of American Florists, and was widely known in the United States, as he had made many annual trips to this country in search of orders for bulbs.

BREITMEYER IN INSURANCE.

A number of well known men at Detroit are organizing the American National Life Assurance Company and have chosen Philip Breitmeyer as president. The company is to be a legal reserve company, capitalized at $250,000, and the home office is to be in the Breitmeyer building, at Detroit. The company plans to issue all forms of non-participating policies, believing that the present affords an excellent opportunity for a company in which the policy-holder will know in advance exactly what he is to pay and what he is to receive. Edward G. Brazier, the secretary, is the life-insurance expert of the organization, and it is said Mr. Breitmeyer took an interest in the company and became its president because of his friendship and confidence in that gentleman's knowledge of the business. In turn, several florists have displayed their confidence in Mr. Breitmeyer's leadership by taking stock in the company. At present $100,000 of stock is being marketed, shares of $50 selling at $75 each. The $100,000 is to be deposited with the state treasurer in Michigan, and the company will start out with a large surplus. George H. Luther, who is at the Hamilton Club, Chicago, representing the company, says that enough insurance is pledged to assure the company's success from the start.

THE DEATH ROLL.

John R. Davy.

John R. Davy died October 18, at his home at Stillwater, Fla. About twenty-five years ago Mr. Davy erected a large range of glass on his farm at College Hill, Cincinnati, O. At the same time he opened a retail store on Fourth street, Cincinnati, under the name of the Cincinnati Floral Co. He did a large business and prospered fairly well. He was well known and well liked by the trade.

Mrs. Magdalena Trausch.

Magdalena Trausch, the widow of the late Peter Trausch, died Saturday, October 19, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Peter Risch, at Evanston. The funeral was held October 22, at High Ridge. Mrs. Trausch was 84 years of age. Her family was among the oldest of the market gardeners north of Chicago and her sons are thought to have built the first greenhouses ever erected in that vicinity for the growing of winter vegetables.

Margaret Collins.

Margaret Collins, wife of George Collins, died at the Ravenswood hospital, Chicago, October 17, after a short illness, and was buried October 19 from the family home at 228 Summerdale avenue. She was 47 years of age and leaves one son, almost grown to manhood. Mr. Collins is widely known in the trade, as he has been general foreman of the Peter Reinberg establishment during the whole period of its wonderful expansion.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There are varying reports as to the volume of business in the last week. Certain houses say that trade has kept up first rate, the volume of stock handled compensating fully for a reduction in price, so that aggregate sales have been ahead of last year. Other houses, however, say that business slackened materially in the latter part of last week, and that the beginning of this week shows little improvement, daily sales running below those of the same days last year.

The feature of the market in the last week has been the remarkable increase in the supplies of chrysanthemums. The blooms now being cut were at least two weeks later last year and the supply now is so heavy that prices are less than they were a year ago. In fact, it may be said that the chrysanthemum market is decidedly weak and that growers are not likely to realize as much for this season's cut as they did last year. But then, it must be remembered that last year was an especially good one for the mum growers and was the cause of a material increase in the number planted for this season. There is some exceptionally good stock in the market, but it takes a fine flower to bring $3 per dozen at present, and $1.50 to $2.50 is the price on good stock.

Fine weather has largely increased the receipts of roses and the abundance of chrysanthemums has decreased the demand, with the natural result that prices are down. Beauties continue to be rather less than the demand, but all other roses are abundant. The quality generally is all that the most particular buyer could ask.

The same factors which have affected other departments of the market have reached the carnation, but the effect is not so strongly felt because there has been a scarcity of carnations thus far in October. The weakening which has taken place only brings the market back to normal. The quality of the carnation is improving steadily and stems are now of good length, but plants are small and cuts likely to be late.

The week has seen a considerably better market for violets, but the receipts have increased in proportion, so that the supply continues a little ahead of demand. Valley is abundant but selling well. Several growers are now cutting new crops of Easter lilies from retarded bulbs, fine stuff and in good demand.

There is a good business in greens. Wild smilax is reported selling better than ever. Bronze galax is scarce, most houses asking $2 per hundred and refusing to pick over the bunches. All other greens are plentiful.

The New Orleans news letter, elsewhere in this issue, says: "The Chicago wholesalers may look forward to a big call for chrysanthemums for All Saints' day." Let it come; this market can supply a dozen for every inhabitant of New Orleans.

Poehlmann's Plans.

John Poehlmann, president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., says it is too early to say anything definite as to the company's plans for next year's building operations, but admits that things may so shape themselves that a pretty good sized range will go up. From other sources it is learned that the company is negotiating for ten acres of land adjoining its Plant A and that the plans contemplate the early erection of one of the largest additions the Poehlmann Bros. Co. ever has put up.

Flower Show Plans.

The executive committee of the Horticultural Society held a meeting October 22 at the office of Manager George Asmus in the First National Bank building, to settle details as to the approaching flower show. The decorative scheme of Jens Jensen has been accepted and Mr. Jensen appointed to carry it out. The committee has accepted many ideas which the press agent thinks will go far toward insuring the interest of the daily papers and of the public. One of these is a voting contest for a display of house plants, which is to be given to the public school receiving the most votes.

Manager Asmus says he is assured of more exhibits than ever before, and a greater variety. A large attendance of those in the trade at outside points is expected, and the Florists' Club will give a banquet to trade visitors, as usual, during the show.

Various Notes.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., was in town October 18 to attend a meeting for the discussion of details of the research to be conducted at the State Agricultural College, with the appropriation secured by the greenhouse interests from the last legislature. It will be remembered that the bill provided for a committee from the State Florists' Association to advise the college officials as to the direction of the research. There has been some delay in getting action because some of the powers-that-be at the college want to rent greenhouses and make the matter experimental in every sense of the word.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, has been on the sick list for a couple of days during this week.

D. C. Knoble, of Columbia City, Ind., was a visitor October 19.

Reed & Keller, of New York, have asked local florists to ascertain the whereabouts of A. L. Barnett, for many years on the road for them. Mr. Barnett has been working in this vicinity for some weeks. He had a large line of samples at the Great Northern hotel, but it is said has not been there since October 12. It is feared he either was taken suddenly ill or met with an accident. O. J. Friedman took charge of the samples.

Joseph Guranka, for many years a wire worker with the Kennicott Bros. Co., died October 22.

H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., has begun his annual shipments of chrysanthemums to E. H. Hunt.

John Sinner says that the prospects with Sinner Bros. are better than ever before. The carnations are a little late, but all the stock looks well.

Wietor Bros. have considerably increased their planting of the Joe Hill rose. It is liked so well that one or two leading retailers take the entire product.

L. Coatsworth sold two lots in his new addition to New Castle while there last week. He says stock in the Benthley-Coatsworth greenhouses never looked better.

C. W. McKellar says telegraph orders for orchids are coming in from all over the west and that he looks for a much increased demand this winter.

E. C. Amling says the mum season is treating him especially well, for his books for the first three weeks of October show an increase of over thirty per cent compared to last year.

John Kruchten says carnations in the neighborhood from which he draws his supplies will soon be giving splendid crops.

H. F. Halle, whose headquarters now are on Sheridan road, says that in his experience the season is opening later and later each year, because the society people stay away longer each year as their wealth increases.

Peter Reinberg, Leonard Kill and A. C. Spencer represented the trade at the big banquet given the world's champions at the Auditorium Annex October 17. P. J. Hauswirth had the decorations, which were of Sunrise roses, of course furnished by Reinberg's.

in their second year. The production thus far has proven heavy and the Maids in particular have been giving a good account of themselves. A. H. Budlong is reported a firm convert of grafted stock.

Martin Peterson says business is excellent on the northwest side.

The Drexel Floral Co. has been incorporated with $1,000 capital stock. The incorporators are William T. Underwood, Delavan B. Cole and Alvin L. McElroy. The articles of incorporation state that the purpose is to conduct a flower and confectionery business.

It is reported that August Poehlmann is one of the stockholders in the new life insurance company of which Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, is president.

President H. N. Bruns has appointed the following committee to represent the Florists' Club at the flower show at the Coliseum beginning November 6: John P. Degnan, chairman; A. L. Vaughan, Alex Henderson.

Logan Kring, of Fairbury, Ill., was in Chicago Sunday and with E. C. Ameling went out to Hinsdale to see Edward Kring, who is resting up in a sanitarium there. They found him much improved. Kring Bros. are among Mr. Ameling's consignors. They have been exceptionally successful with carnations the last two seasons.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett returned October 20 from a month's stay at Mount Clemens. Mrs. Bassett was greatly improved in health.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heyme have returned from a trip to Europe. Before sailing they sold out their store at 5422 South Halsted street to a man in another line of business. They now have secured another store only a few doors away and are fitting it up as a first-class retail establishment.

C. A. Samuelson says business has not opened this fall as early as it usually does. One thing that hurts him, and it will soon affect W. J. Smyth's transient trade, is the repaving of Michigan avenue, which is now in progress south of Twenty-second street. Good progress is being made, but in the meantime travel is diverted to Prairie avenue.

Last week some of the wholesalers were in receipt of a telegram which read: "Our bookkeeper is coming. Treat her well. Smith & Feters." Miss Lucile Esther Schmitt arrived in due course and it is hoped was pleased with her reception. Certainly she pleased the wholesalers, not only personally but by her knowledge of flowers and buying. She ordered a lot of stock and since her return to Cleveland has been wiring for much more. Evidently business is good in Cleveland.

The wholesalers' employees are more than pleased with the prospects for their second annual reception on the evening of October 30. Columbia hall and Fitzgerald's orchestra have been secured, the same as last year. The sale of tickets has been ahead of anticipation.

Carl N. Thomas arrived October 21, after having spent the summer on his farm at West Springfield, Pa., and began selling with the A. L. Randall Co. in the middle of the morning rush, it is said, right where he left off in the Easter rush last year. At any rate, he bottled up an abundant supply of energy for the winter.

Stollery Bros. report trade on the north shore about as usual this season.

Jensen & Dekema are sending the E. F. Winterson Co. blooms of the Winsor carnation with stems fully twice as long as most growers are cutting. They gave their stock indoor summer culture.

Geo. Reinberg and his bride have returned from a fortnight's wedding trip to Colorado.

Hugh Wood is one reader of the REVIEW who does not read it, paradoxical as that may sound. His sight has become so bad that he has the paper read to him each week by a nurse. He has been in the hospital five times for operations on his eyes and will have another operation soon.

F. W. Timme, Jr., formerly with the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., at Joliet, is now with Vaughan & Sperry.

Percy Jones states that he has a lease under negotiation which will probably on November 1 take the last vacant stand in Flower Growers' market. He says it will be the first time since the market was opened that there has been no space for rent.

In the obituary column this week the death of Mrs. Peter Trausch is recorded. She was the grandmother of John P. Risch, of Weiland & Risch, and well known to the oldest of the gardening fraternity.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says the demand for wild smilax has this season been practically double what it was a year ago.

Zech & Mann have been receiving this week some especially fine Clementine Tousey chrysanthemums. The variety has become a standard, and every grower has it, but there is a great difference in the quality of the stock.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had the best success on record this year with Mrs. Robinson chrysanthemums. As they have it this year none of the new whites can beat it.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. now has another big decoration on hand at the Chicago Athletic Club.

The growers are now spending their leisure moments experimenting, against the time of need, in the application of the Baur calyx clip, the plyers and clips ordered months ago having just been delivered.

D. T. Murphy, of Manistee, Mich., was a visitor October 19.

Mrs. George Collins died October 17, as reported in the obituary column this week. She was a woman of splendid character and Mr. Collins has the sympathy of everyone in the craft.

C. Keller, of Granton, Wis., is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Henry Bornhoeft, 372 Monroe street. A dinner party in honor of the old gentleman was given October 20 by John Bornhoeft and on Monday evening he was entertained by Fred Meyer.

EXETER, N. H.

The thirteenth annual flower show of the New Hampshire Horticultural Society was held in the town hall, Exeter, October 15 to 17. The Exeter Rose Conservatories, Thomas Carter grower, took first prize on roses and a special prize on Richmonds. W. S. Perkins, of Exeter, took first prize on carnations, violets, mums and decorative plants. Fred Churchill, of Exeter, and Charles Davis, of Dover, took second and third prizes.

Thomas Carter is cutting some excellent Richmonds at the Exeter Rose Conservatories.

Fred Millbury is spending ten days in Brooklyn.

Samuel Neil, the veteran florist of Dorchester, is spending this week with W. S. Perkins, of Exeter. They leave next week for Deerfield for a week's hunting. Mr. Neil's sons, Thomas and Charles, are in charge while he is away.

LAKE CHARLES, LA.—C. D. Otis attended the state fair at Shreveport, La., and made an exhibit of greenhouse plants. He was awarded four blue ribbons and one red ribbon. He says there were several local exhibitors there, but he does not think the floral exhibit was what it should have been for a state fair.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market was quite strong all last week. The wholesalers say all lines of stock were in good demand at fair prices. The retailers, too, were busy almost every day. Funeral work kept them occupied more than weddings and other social work, which has not been any too plentiful since the season opened.

This week there are a great many strangers, who represent society elsewhere, in town attending the international balloon race and this should cut quite a figure in dinner decorations, for our society folks are much interested in these races.

Stock was not heavy October 21, but as the weather is fine, warm Indian summer having arrived, a crowded market is looked for in almost everything by the end of the week. Roses are not selling so well and it is only at cheap prices that the wholesaler has any chance to clean up on them. All stock is of fairly good quality, but the demand for first-class grades has fallen off, owing to the call for chrysanthemums, which, of course, are the most seasonable flowers. Of these the market is not as yet overstocked with extra fancy quality. The best of those that come in do not bring over $3 per dozen.

Carnations are much better and bring top price, which is $3 per hundred. The bulk of them, though, are sold for $2. Kirkwood consignments are coming in fine. Violets are of improved color and longer stems. They are selling much better. Colder weather will bring them up to the standard. Valley is extra fine, with a fair demand. All outdoor stock got a backset, as we had several frosts last week. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Mullanphy Floral Co., on Grand avenue, is sporting a fine new delivery wagon all in white. The company was busy last week with wedding decorations.

Henry Felter's Lexington avenue place is a fine sight. His chrysanthemum plants are of the best this year.

Charles Kuehn is handling a lot of fine longiflorums, which sell well. Ammann's consignments of roses are among the best that come to this market. Canfield and Belle Miller's consignments are also large and fine.

The F. J. Foster Floral Co. is making daily fine window displays of cut chrysanthemums in the New Century building.

The Metz Floral Co., on Page avenue, has changed hands. It is now known as the Gallagher Flower Shop. It is a neat store and in a district where business should be good.

Kalisch & Sons, at Taylor and Delmar avenues, are this week making a fine display of chrysanthemum plants; also cut blooms. Ed Kalisch reports trade in blooming plants as being excellent.

J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, is consigning to this market a lot of extra good Brides and Maids, also American Beauties. These are handled by W. C. Smith & Co.

Frank J. Fillmore is now all through piping his houses, the work being done by young Frank, who is there "with the goods." The place is now ready for a large season's business. Everything in season can be found there.

At H. G. Berning's shipping trade is reported good.

President William C. Young, of the Florists' Club, was out hustling for the club last week and says he will have the banner attendance at the November meeting.

A visit to the new quarters of the St. Louis Seed Co., at Fourth and Lucas avenues, shows a fine store with plate glass front, with four large floors above, in which a fine display of bulbs, seeds and birds is made. Walter Retzer says that the firm is doing a large business in fall bulbs and that business has shown a large increase since the opening of the new store.

The Schisler-Corneli Seed Co. also is making a great show of fall bulbs. Mr. Schisler says the sale of fall bulbs has been surprisingly large this fall.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held a meeting October 14 in the Central High School building. C. H. Thompson, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, presided. Mr. Kellogg, of East St. Louis, gave an interesting talk on botany. C. Fulgraf, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, lectured on the emigration of plants, which was of some im-

The Market.

Business in cut flowers has been quite good of late and chrysanthemums have not yet overwhelmed the market, although they are now exceedingly abundant. Quite a variety of the queen of autumn is now offered. In addition to such earlies as Polly Rose, Pacific, Adele, Monrovia, Halliday, Ivory, Tousey and others, some of the midseason and even late ones are seen, Bonnaillon being noted on several occasions. Few fancy prices are being made, $2.50 to $3 per dozen being the top-notch figures. Roses continue to improve in quality and have been plentiful, due to the continuance of clear skies. Prices are, if anything, inclined to sag a little.

Carnations also have been coming forward in increasing numbers, but have sold quite well for the season. Numerous society weddings have helped to relieve the market of late.

Violets are plentiful, but are not yet in special favor. A large proportion are being picked outdoors, many growers having only started to house their plants of the single sorts. Lilliums are rather scarce. Some cosmos, tuberose, gladioli, mignonette and snapdragon are arriving, but only sell moderately well. Asparagus and ferns remain about the same. Supplies of boxwood and other greenery are now coming to hand.

Fletcher, D. F. Roy and Wilfrid Wheeler.

The committee on prizes and exhibitions met October 19 and perfected arrangements for the coming chrysanthemum show, which opens November 8. A ladies' orchestra will give concerts during the exhibition, which promises to be superior to any held of late years. The special premiums promise to be keenly contested for. These are mostly offered for commercial growers.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, unless all signs fail, will be the banner one of the year in point of attendance. The election of officers for the ensuing year will be the prime attraction, but there will be other interesting features.

The emporium of Welch Bros., at 226 Devonshire street, is a busy place these days. An enormous quantity of flowers is received and dispatched each day. They are getting some Beauty, Richmond and Killarney roses especially fine for the season.

Daniel Iliffe has recently had contracts for new iron benches, heating, ventilating, etc., at Cedar Grove cemetery and Woodlawn cemetery, Everett. He has also been making heating changes for the Spaulding estate, Prides Crossing; Weld estate, Brookline, and Plant estate, Groton, Conn.

J. F. Flood & Co. are, as usual, making a specialty of mushrooms at their Dedham establishment. Their carnations are doing especially well this season, five houses being devoted to them.

The numerous private gardeners along the north shore are planning to have landscape gardening classes and lectures the coming winter at Manchester.

William Spillsbury and A. T. Kidder are among those who are marketing excellent Princess of Wales violets.

We have experienced one of the most magnificent autumns on record from October 8 to 20. Skies were continuously clear and warmth on some days was summer-like. The tints on maples, oaks and other trees and on many shrubs have been superb. W. N. CRAIG.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The Florists' Club.

At the annual meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club, held October 14, the charter president, John M. Good, called the meeting to order and after thanking the members for hearty co-operation during the first year of the club's existence, introduced the president-elect, George H. Mellen, who distributed fragrant cigars.

Mr. Mellen spoke in appreciation of the honor conferred upon himself, congratulated the club upon the good work accomplished and outlined plans for the ensuing year.

Vice-President-Elect Charles W. Schmidt beamed approval in his genial "Sunny Jim" smile, while George D. Leedle and Leman Bradford, respectively, assumed the duties of secretary and treasurer, the latter taking in charge a balance of $82.43 turned over by his predecessor, Roy McGregor, who reported all bills paid.

Standing committees were then announced by the president, as follows: Program, John M. Good, Leman Bradford and Christian Binning; entertainment, Chas. W. Schmidt, Opha Jackson and Ed Kriegbaum; membership, Chas. M. Niuffer, Wm. H. Reeser and Bert C. Blake; grievance, Frank E. Good, Chas. W. Unglaub and John A. Doyle; publicity, Geo. D. Leedle, Roger H. Murphy and Harry C. Reeser.

The names of Albert K. Hahn and Jessie M. Good were proposed for membership.

The subject of "Civic Improvement" was quite generally discussed, it being freely conceded that for the greatest plant shipping city on earth, Springfield was yet considerably lacking in the matter of central beauty spots and well kept yards, both front and rear. The utilization of vacant lots for the growing of something other than weeds, if nothing better than potatoes, was advocated, and the planting of a bed or two of cannas or similar ornamentals on the esplanade in place of a few slabs of cement was suggested, for which some of the floral concerns would be willing to supply stock gratis, if need be, in order to make a start in arousing public spirit on the idea. Mention was made of the effect which might be produced by photographing a few back yards of prominent citizens, well kept and otherwise, and printing half-tone cuts, as has been done by some of our leading journals; the sharp contrasts would prove quite surprising, and it behooves the "prominent citizen" to clean up and plant something before the club turns loose its civic improvement committee, which will be announced at the meeting in November. G. DALE.

MONTREAL.

Current Comment.

The mum reigns supreme and Montrealers will have a chance to see it at its best Wednesday and Thursday, November 13 and 14, at the show to be held in the Victoria armory by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

All other flowers are much better in quality and quantity, especially roses and carnations, though they are by no means at their best yet.

J. Bennett has a splendid lot of ferns on hand, which find ready sale among the different florists.

TOMMY.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with a chill in the air, betokening the coming of the frost king. Already the snow has fallen on the mountains near us, and we feel the breath of winter. Everybody welcomes the frost and business will soon feel the thrill of better times and conditions.

History repeated itself last week, in producing about as dull and discouraging a condition as the market has known in a generation. The depressing state of affairs in the financial district reflects itself in the flower market more quickly than in any other line of business. It is the men who make fortunes rapidly in Wall street who are the backbone of the leading retail florists' trade of New York. Society comes back this week to the big city, the opera season is to open, and November is booked for weddings innumerable. The coming weeks ought to be full of prosperity for all.

The wholesalers complain of slowness of collections and are inclined to get together and form a protective association for their mutual benefit.

All stock arriving in the cut flower market now is of splendid quality. Beauties are abundant and, while the mums remain, 25 cents will doubtless be the top, with few commanding the highest quotation. Maids and Brides may go to lower figures before the week is over. The street is ablaze with the chrysanthemum display. Every day is adding to the quantity received. Prices are gradually waning; some are cut in two. The grade that last week brought 25 cents now commands only 15 cents, and so on down to as low as $2 per hundred. The street merchants are taking advantage of their opportunity for display and the outdoor exhibit is worthy of the admiration of the passing throng.

Gardenias are advancing. The promise for their popularity this season is assured. Orchids are abundant and of great variety. The demand is steady. Shipments to other cities increase and retail windows are incomplete without a vase of them.

Violets begin to fill their old place in the daily shuffle. Prices are better and the wisdom of the middle of October for the first shipments, is fully demonstrated. For a month their existence has been a menace to their popularity. If growers would only learn their lesson and remember it, next year the first violets sent to the wholesale markets would not come before October 15.

The oak is proving itself the popular autumn tree. Its foliage, beautiful with varied coloring, serves many decorative purposes and brightens the windows of every retailer. J. P. Scherer finds an enormous demand for oakleaf roping and has sold many thousands of yards of it for the large house and casino decorations. There is a glut of smilax and asparagus, and prices have fallen.

Dahlias, tuberoses, gladioli and, this coming week, cosmos, have all played their parts and rung down the curtain.

Fellouris a Bankrupt.

Anthony J. Fellouris, wholesale dealer in evergreens, 52 West Twenty-eighth street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $11,892, and nominal assets, $2,218, consisting of cash, $50; accounts, $543; fixtures, $125 and contingent half interest in damages for termination of a lease. Of his liabilities, $8,750 are contingent for rent of No. 52 West Twenty-eighth street. He owes $402 for wages to two employees and $2,325 to twelve men in various parts of North Carolina for evergreens.

Various Notes.

J. K. Allen has an idea of a home for the New York Florists' Club which meets with general approval, the basement to be used by a wholesaler, the first and second floors for club rooms, library, meetings and recreations and the upper floor for offices. A location is available that presents an opportunity that may not come again so favorably, and the club's committee and its president are giving the project serious consideration. It is the best scheme that has ever been suggested for the purpose, and its accomplishment would double the club's membership in a year.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are selling large quantities of fine celosia plants, in values ranging from 50 cents to $2. There is a great demand for them.

effects of the ordeal through which he has passed. It will be December before he can take his usual active interest in business again.

John Young is receiving splendid carnations from the Cottage Gardens, as usual, and the finest of gardenias, valley, mums and roses, his Bedford range contributing Beauties that are well worthy of the name.

Frank Millang has recovered from the exhilarating influence of his sea voyage and European travel, and is now at his old stand in the Coogan building, conducting a larger trade than any season in his experience.

Bonnot Bros. are receiving and shipping many fine roses and, with Will Siebrecht and Smith, doing their share towards making the Cut Flower Exchange a busy spot from six to six every day.

Reed & Keller show something new and interesting every week. The latest novelty is the armadillo basket, made from the shell of the animal itself, and a most attractive seller. Another new thing is the new stationary, angled pot-holder in many sizes. They report general business good and slow collections; the only discouraging sign of the times; in the order line, things are booming.

John Seligman & Co. say "no kick coming." They make a specialty of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, and they have some expert rose growers on their staff.

October 24 Supt. Micklejohn will have an elaborate decoration at the Hotel Knickerbocker, where he has charge of the floral department.

October 19 A. J. Guttman had a window display of sixty seedling and novelty mums of immense size and beauty which he claimed, in his enthusiasm, to be the finest in the world. Fred Lautenschlager, of Chicago, was official measurer and found many of them eight to nine inches in diameter. The asking price was $1 each.

J. C. Hatcher, of Amsterdam, N. Y., was in the city October 15 and while here took in Wm. Elliott's auction and John Scott's fern factory at Flatbush. He was accompanied by Mrs. Hatcher.

J. B. Nugent had the Dwight wedding October 17—house and church, carte blanche, with white mums and wild smilax as the basis of an elaborate display. John B. can fill both the outside and inner demands of humanity satisfactorily.

Mr. Trumpore, of J. H. Small & Son's, celebrated his fiftieth birthday October 17. On the outings of the New York club he runs with the agility of a two-year-old.

Samuel Parsons, park commissioner, has asked for $2,500,000 to reconstruct Central park. The New York papers are making strenuous objections to the expenditure and ventilating, with great minuteness, Mr. Parson's connection with the rare tree company and the Parsons & Sons nursery, of Flushing.

Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, recently returned from his annual European trip and now is confined to his home with a severe cold.

Julius Roehrs, Jr., and Miss Koch, of Flatbush, were married October 23 and are now on their honeymoon.

The Market.

Our Home Coming week was a success, though business at times was almost at a standstill. Thousands of visitors took advantage of the good time and little attention was paid to business. However, judging from the large quantity of flowers used in the many parades, someone was doing business, but there was little demand for carnations and roses. Chrysanthemums were seen made up in fine bunches. Our market has a glut of flowers, which is due to the large quantity of dahlias and cosmos. We are having light frosts, but little damage is done and some of the growers are cutting the outdoor blooms and storing them away. Very few outdoor blooms will go to waste this year.

Chrysanthemums are abundant; they move slowly, white in particular. The pink varieties move a little better. Some of the mum growers are wishing for a heavy frost to do away with the outside flowers. Carnations are coming in a little more regularly. Roses are plentiful. Violets are slow in coming in. A few callas are making their appearance. Hydrangeas are still on the market. Ferns and palms are beginning to move nicely. Greens of all kinds seem to be enough to meet the demands.

Various Notes.

Among those who were seen in the Fraternal parade during Home Coming week were Charles Cook, W. Terry, W. Christie and C. Hess.

third division of the big carnival parade October 18.

Otto Guerth had his store tastefully decorated for the Home Coming week.

Many of the retail stores were handsomely decorated with beautiful blooms of the season. Much credit is due to the Lexington market florists, who made a beautiful show of choice cut flowers.

W. H. Reinhardt, of Orangeville, Md., is repairing his houses and has removed his boiler to the opposite end of one of his houses.

August Eberhardt, of North Baltimore street, extended, is still handling a large quantity of cut dahlias in the city markets.

Harry Quick has made his appearance again in market. His business is looked after by his wife.

Edward Fauth, of Pennsylvania avenue, reports that business is good and he had a nice lot of funeral work.

While G. Cook was attending to some business October 18 he left his team standing on Paca street. The horses, becoming frightened, ran away, made for the market and became entangled between two teams. Little damage was done. J. L. T.

DETROIT.

The Market.

From all indications, business was good with the store men last week. There seemed to be a large amount of funeral work. Plants were in good demand, the Boston fern seemingly still the most popular of them all. Stock in general is scarce and everything on the market cleaned up nicely at a good price. There was a good sale for orchids last week, owing to there being several large funerals. Beauties are in big demand.

Of course chrysanthemums are about the most popular of all flowers at the present time, and why shouldn't they be? Stock brought good prices, running all the way from 75 cents for stock for work to the fine large Halliday or the beautiful Clementine Touse at $3 per dozen. Besides these, there are on the market such varieties as Polly Rose, Rosiere, Pacific and Monrovia.

Roses are at somewhat of a premium at present and naturally are bringing a good price. La Detroit and Kaiserin are becoming quite scarce. Short stock sells readily at from 3 cents to 4 cents, while the best flowers bring 8 cents without any trouble.

Mount Clemens is sending in some fine cosmos in different colors. This meets with ready sale.

Carnations are improving daily and some fine stock can be had. The best stock brings from 2½ cents to 3 cents. Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress are in big demand. Green of all kinds is plentiful.

Club Meeting.

There was a rather slim attendance at the Detroit Florists' Club's last meeting, as compared with the previous meetings. There was no special subject assigned for the evening and this was, no doubt, the cause of the smaller attendance.

A new entertainment committee was appointed by the president, as follows: Walter Taepke, chairman; Wm. Hiescher and Albert Pochelon.

The date for the annual trip to Mount Clemens has been set for November 1. All arrangements for this outing are in the hands of the foregoing committee.

Some of the florists' wives or sweethearts have been complaining that there are not enough ladies' nights, so the entertainment committee was instructed to arrange for several for the winter. The first will take place on the evening of November 19, at Harmonie hall. In connection with it there will be held an exhibition of flowers and plants by local growers. A liberal sum has been allowed by the club as prize money. The exhibition committee, consisting of T. Browne, Robert Unger and Albert Pochelon, has the arrangements for this show in charge. Outside exhibits are also welcomed.

A resolution was passed to keep on record at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange a list of all the dead beats who have stung any of the store men about town. This list will be open to the inspection of all the club members, and any florist will confer a favor on his brother florists by sending in the names of no-pay customers.

Among the Growers.

The writer took a run out to Grosse Pointe last week. Theodore Damerow was busy cutting chrysanthemums for the market. He will have a nice lot of mums for some time to come. The growing of violets has been given up for the present by Mr. Damerow. The carnations on this place looked promising.

Fred Pantke's place showed that a considerable variety of stock can be grown with profit even on a small scale. An exceptionally fine lot of pompons attracted attention. A bench of violets and sweet peas is coming along nicely. Mr. Pantke is having some trouble with the rules against smoke and therefore is adding another fifteen feet to his stack. A nice retail business is also being done here.

George Rackham's greenhouses, on the east side of the city, were next paid a visit. As stated some time ago, Mr. Rackham has been laid up with a bad knee for several months. He has been using crutches as a means of getting around for nearly eleven weeks and thinks it will be another month before he will be able to get along without them. All the stock on this place looked very well. At present they are cutting some fine Halliday and Rosiere. The carnations look fine. This firm is also building up a nice local retail trade.

Out on Gratiot avenue Charles Plumb has a nice span of glass devoted to a variety of stock. Mr. Plumb was just potting up a nice lot of palms, which came through in good shape. A large stock of small ferns is ready for the market. Besides roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, the usual large quantity of bulbous stock is being grown. The many friends of Mr. Plumb will be glad to learn that Mrs. Plumb is again on the road to recovery, after a long illness.

Various Notes.

The Twentieth Century Club, which is composed of Detroit's 400, held a meeting at its building last Thursday, October 17, and had as the subject of the day "Town Gardens." J. F. Sullivan and E. A. Scribner were the only florists in attendance. Both these gentlemen gave the ladies a talk on gardening, which was much appreciated. Mr. Scribner says this was no easy task, as the ladies are all well informed and can ask many unheard-of questions.

Painters have been busy at Breitmeyer's store the last week. This store always makes a fine appearance, but now that mums are in season it looks like a fairy-land.

J. F. Sullivan has been displaying some exceptionally fine yellow chrysanthemums in his window. They are being shipped from Fort Wayne, Ind.

B. Schroeter had a large wedding job this week, using several hundreds of the best mums on the market, a number of cases of smilax, palms, etc. The color scheme was white and yellow. This is something unusual for a wedding, but the effect was very fine. H. S.

PRICES AND VALUES.

Prices cannot be determined as excessive or as cheap, merely from an examination of catalogues. Bulbs or seeds, or plants of a particular variety appear much the same as one reads the descriptions in a catalogue, but the samples offered for sale may vary in quality to a greater extent even than the prices asked for them. We are not concerned with the particular circumstances in any case, and have no desire to determine which firm gives the better value for the money it receives. It is conceivable that the firm which asks the lower prices also supplies the better articles. If this be so, however, matters may be left to right themselves, for eventually the public will discover which is the best market, and, having obtained that knowledge, will be certain to act upon it. For ourselves, we cannot pretend to give an opinion on the matter, but must leave the dealers to adjust their prices according to the value they place upon the goods they have to distribute. Their customers, however, should not hastily conclude that prices are dear because they are high in comparison with others, or cheap because they are lower. If they are to be judged satisfactorily they must be compared after a careful in-

MICHELL ADOPTS NEW SYSTEM.

The best informed members of the trade recognize in Henry F. Michell, of Philadelphia, a far-seeing, progressive business man. His capacity for organization, combined with close application, has yielded remarkable results. From the simple beginning in the home of an exploded concern he has in seventeen years created a seed business requiring the services of over eighty employees. The office on the second-story front, from whence the policy of the house emanates, overlooks Market street. Mr. Michell was hard at work at his desk when Phil was ushered in by appointment. "You want my age first?" Mr. Michell asked with a pleasant smile. But Phil was not that kind of an interviewer; he does not believe in reporters who ask visitors to this country about their impressions of America as they step off the gangplank, and he does not believe that the gardeners, nursery, seed or supply men are interested in personal affairs. So his face assumed a far-away expression as he answered, "You said something about a new system." Mr. Michell's face brightened at once. "The Baker-Vawter System," he replied, and then came one of the most interesting discourses Phil has ever enjoyed.

The Henry F. Michell Co. introduced the Baker-Vawter system of bookkeeping in its seed store in the middle of September. The objects of the system are to expedite the transaction of business and to avoid errors. It cost the company nearly $3,000 to make the change, but it saves three bill clerks, the annoyance and loss occasioned by small errors and greatly expedites the work of the order-filling and shipping departments.

The principal points in the system consist in typewriting in duplicate and in keeping all items of each account together at all stages of the account. When an order is received it is turned over to the person operating the billing machine. That machine makes three copies of the order simultaneously, and these, to distinguish them, are on papers of three different colors. Yellow is the color sent to the customer, pink to the order clerk, while white goes to the office.

Another point in the system is the arrangement for payments by which the check to be paid for stock purchased is attached to a statement of amount in the same way that it is ordinarily attached to the stub of a check-book. The numbers of these checks correspond with the numbers in the stub-book, which is much larger than that of the ordinary check-book, in order to give room for memoranda. The system corresponds to all branches of the ledger and of the order and shipping departments, and through its aid every department has already benefited.

This description is not intended as a lesson on the Baker-Vawter system, but simply to give an idea of the problems arising in handling a large seed business and how these problems are being met.

DISCOLORED PANDANUS LEAVES.

We write for information relative to the color of foliage on Pandanus utilis. Among a lot of seedlings which are now in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, and all of which were originally bright green with red or maroon edges, are a lot of plants on which all of the foliage has turned a dull shade of brown. These plants are otherwise in a desirable condition; they are apparently healthy and robust and are growing rapidly.

easy to say just what the trouble is. If the discoloration of the leaves is general, it would seem to be due to either thrips or red spider, and a dipping in a tobacco or tobacco-soap solution would be likely to do good. Pandanus utilis is also subject to a leaf spot disease, but this shows itself in spots or patches rather than in a general change of color. The spot is said to be due to a minute insect that burrows in the tissue of the leaf, and applications of sulphur have been recommended as a cure.

order simultaneously, and these, to distinguish them, are on papers of three different colors. Yellow is the color sent to the customer, pink to the order clerk, while white goes to the office.

Another point in the system is the arrangement for payments by which the check to be paid for stock purchased is attached to a statement of amount in the same way that it is ordinarily attached to the stub of a check book. The numbers of these checks correspond with the numbers in the stub-book, which is much larger than that of the ordinary check-book, in order to give room for memoranda. The system corresponds to all branches of the ledger and of the order and shipping departments, and through its aid every department has already benefited.

This description is not intended as a lesson on the Baker Vawter system, but simply to give an idea of the problems arising in handling a large seed business and how these problems are being met. Phil.

DISCOLORED PANDANUS LEAVES.

We write for information relative to the color of foliage on Pandanus utilis. Among a lot of seedlings which are now in 3-inch and 4-inch pots, and all of which were originally bright green with red or maroon edges, are a lot of plants on which all of the foliage has turned a dull shade of brown. These plants are otherwise in a desirable condition; they are apparently healthy and robust and are growing rapidly. C. P. N.

easy to say just what the trouble is. If the discoloration of the leaves is general, it would seem to be due to either thrips or red spider, and a dipping in a tobacco or tobacco-soap solution would be likely to do good. Pandanus utilis is also subject to a leaf spot disease, but this shows itself in spots or patches rather than in a general change of color. The spot is said to be due to a minute insect that burrows in the tissue of the leaf, and applications of sulphur have been recommended as a cure.

PHILADELPHIA.The Rising Eastern Market.

The improved varieties of chrysanthemums are much more in demand than the early sorts, the season of which is now nearly over. Robert Halliday, yellow, is at its best. Mlle. Clementine Touselet leads among the pinks, while Early Snow is far and away the best white today.

The outdoor stock, excepting only cosmos, is over, and the other flowers on the list are improved in tone thereby. Violets are now arriving in much improved form, fragrance, stem and keeping qualities being all there. The demand for them has improved correspondingly. Valley is more plentiful than at any time during the present month, with brisk demand. Cattleyas are coming in well and prices rule a shade lower, although the change from weddings to suburban debutante teas is in their favor.

While a few fancy and numerous select carnations bring the listed quotations, there is no especial demand for this flower, and anything not of quality is apt to drag. Whites sell better than colored varieties. American Beauty roses are particularly fine, there being more fancy stock in the market today than at any time since June. Small roses are improving in quality. The first grade is now rounding into form.

The prices realized on early chrysanthemums, especially of the Pacific family, have this year been far below those of last season. This is attributed chiefly to the delayed killing frost, dahlias and other outdoor flowers lasting fully twelve days longer this season than a year ago. It is also thought that there are too many of the medium and poor grades of early pinks and whites grown. Yellow has averaged better.

A Flying Trip.

J. D. Eisele and J. Otto Thilow returned October 19 from a four weeks' trip abroad. Two weeks were spent on the water and two weeks on land. They visited London, rising early one morning to see the Covent Garden market at its busiest time, about 4 a. m., and also calling at Ware's to see the dahlias, Paul's to see the roses and Rochford's to see his immense range of glass. Then crossing the Channel, they visited the principal cities in Holland, Belgium and Germany, not forgetting Erfurt, the home of Mr. Thilow's relatives. The trip was in every way most delightful and thoroughly enjoyed by both the tourists.

An Auto Ride.

It was a select little party of four, with Edward Reid as chauffeur, who went out to North Wales to see the largest greenhouse. Mr. Reid's guests were A. B. Cartledge, J. Liddon Pennock and Alfred M. Campbell. The chauffeur received so much advice as to the proper turns to make on the way up that he landed the party at John Burton's in Wyndmoor. Here a kindly disposed countryman gave further directions and they reached North Wales in safety. The house was all there, one of those things, as Mr. Reid sententiously described it, which must be seen to be appreciated. After a thorough tour of inspection the party turned its faces homeward. Mr. Pennock assured the chauffeur that he used to call on a girl at Chestnut Hill and so knew the turns perfectly. The turns were made just so, and the auto landed in a private lane, leading to a country mansion. Some men appearing in the distance, they speedily retraced their steps, and finally reached Lincoln drive. Here Mr. Pennock and Mr. Campbell agreed that by keeping the river on your right and going straight ahead you were bound to reach the city safely. This was finally accomplished (I did not say easily accomplished), and when the party reached Green street entrance the chauffeur announced that he could now pilot them safely home again.

Morton.

The Highland Rose Co. operates 32,000 feet of glass at Morton, in Delaware county. The houses, nine in number, lie a little east of south, in the center of a nearly level meadow. Five of them were built a year and a half ago, the remainder added this summer. All are even span, ridge and furrow, open between, length 150 feet, width varying from sixteen to twenty-five feet. The entire range is planted with roses: Bride, Bridesmaid, Richmond and Perle. Bride and Maid are being tried both grafted and on own roots. The former are looked upon with favor by the manager, W. E. Fowler. Lily of the valley is being forced at the end of the range next the boiler-shed. Gardenias are also being tried here. A narrow covered way at the opposite end is devoted to chrysanthemums, Major Bonaffon, to be followed by Manetti for grafting. The plant is heated by one eighty horse-power return tubular boiler. A manure tank, with paddle and screen for liquid fertilizer, is operated by the gasoline three horse-power engine that pumps water from the creek nearby. A vault conveniently located is used as a cooling room, proving most satisfactory even during the summer. The impression created by this plant is of a thoroughly business-like enterprise, with every detail carefully worked out. The Highland Rose Co. is and has been a regular shipper to the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. ever since it started in business. So loyal is the company that it is doubtful whether the combined efforts of every commission man east of the Blue Mountains could shake its loyalty.

Dahlias at Dreer's.

I think it was late in the summer of 1905 that a meeting of the Dreer company was called to decide an important question, whether they should continue having their dahlias grown by specialists or should add a dahlia department of their own. After considerable discussion it was decided in favor of the dahlia department, for several reasons, chief among which was their inability to secure stock that was absolutely true to name. Sending out roots under a name, or color that proved deceptive was an annoyance not to be borne by a first-class house. There were other reasons, some financial, some expedient, that decided the point, but these it is not necessary to dwell upon. Suffice it to say that in November of that year, J. D. Eisele, vice-president of the company, looked about to secure a representative to gather the nucleus for their dahlia department. After due consideration James T. Clark was selected for this important mission and was dispatched forthwith to the scene of his activities. Mr. Clark brought with him strong qualifications for the work, determination to go through fire and water to secure his object, untiring energy, sharp eyes and an excellent memory. His task was a difficult one, but it was finally accomplished and in January, 1906, the dahlia house was filled with the first batch of cuttings. The purchase of the Locust farm followed, and here the dahlias were planted out the next summer. The stock was found to have been mixed and the work of truing commenced in the fall. So well was this work done that this year the immense stock of over 200,000 dahlias, in over 1,000 varieties, is practically true to name. Mr. Clark, who has been in charge of this department since its inception, spent over a week this fall tramping up and down the dahlia rows truing the stock. Practically the only serious mistake occurred through the carelessness of a workman, who, last fall, threw a single basket of one variety into the bin belonging to another variety. The method of truing the stock consists in pulling out any plant that is not true to label, thus preventing the possibility of future mixing. Mr. Clark has become so expert in this work that he prefers truing the dahlia by leaf rather than by flower, claiming that there is less danger of error by this method, because where one is looking at the flowers a single plant that may not be in bloom is much more easily overlooked.

The Largest Greenhouse.

Every florist has an uncle, some poor, some rich, some real, live relations, others only uncles pro tem., who do business under three gilded balls. Phil's uncle is a real, live relation, whose path lies in pleasant places and who takes an amateurish interest in horticulture. This uncle read an article in a paper—it was not in the REVIEW—the figures of which ran something like this: "The largest greenhouse in the world is planted in American Beauty roses. The owners will cut 228,000 flowers during the coming season. These flowers sell at the average price of 50 cents each and will bring $114,000. The running expenses of the plant for a year will be about $14,000, leaving $100,000 for profit." Phil's uncle had always talked of starting a greenhouse and getting Phil to run it; the only difficulty was that the uncle wanted a fabulous percentage assured; but the greenhouse was never built. A trip to North Wales was arranged through the courtesy of D. Feurstenberg, president of the Florex Gardens. REVIEW readers are familiar with the dimensions of the mammoth greenhouse at North Wales; it looked larger than ever when compared with the smaller greenhouses now standing beside it. In front, the brick office with packing and cooling rooms, dimensions about 40x60, is nearing completion. In the rear, the large boiler-shed, containing one marine and two sciple boilers, aggregating 500 horse-power, is also nearing completion.

The boilers are connected and work nicely. The rise in the mammoth house from the boiler-shed to the extreme end is ten feet in 575 feet. The boilers are only four feet below the surface of the ground. A pump, with ball arrangement, takes the condensed moisture from the pipes into the boiler when enough is collected through a tank. A dressing room for the men is being built in connection with the boiler-shed.

The Beauties in the mammoth house are in excellent condition; the first flowers are now being shipped to New York, as well as to Philadelphia. Mr. Feurstenberg believes that the atmosphere in this style of house is conducive to better growth than in the smaller houses, where the air cools more rapidly. One-half of the plants are staked in what might be termed Philadelphia style, while the other half are grown in ground beds, the canes supported by two or three sets of wires run lengthwise, as is the custom in New York. The overhead heating has been tested at Edgely, where it is considered superior to any other arrangement.

The vastness of such a house as this enormous concern, which accommodates 45,000 Beauties, is apparent at a glance. The weaknesses, which brains and skill will undoubtedly overcome in houses of the future, are not so apparent; one of them is the spliced sashbar and the long stretch for glazing, drip being almost a certainty with the present method of splicing. Mr. Feurstenberg plans a still longer house for the near future, which will, however, be two feet narrower; that is, 154 feet; this will enable him to use only one splice for the sashbars as against two in the present house, as bars thirty-five feet in length can now be secured. The bars used in the present house are nearly twenty-eight feet long; the total length of the bar when in position is eighty feet.

Robert Craig, in complimenting Mr. Feurstenberg on his courage in erecting this mammoth house, said, "We are greatly indebted to you; if this house succeeds, you will have shown us how to do it, and if it fails, we are also indebted to you because you will have to foot the bill."

Various Notes.

Samuel S. Pennock and family reached home October 21, after a two months' absence abroad. Most of the time was spent at Craig-y-Dou, in Wales, where the scenery, both mountains and water, is very beautiful. A week was spent in Ireland.

Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, have sent their first shipment of the new rose, Mrs. Jardine, to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. They were quickly snapped up by the bon-ton buyers.

Samuel Lilley is handling the product of Eugene Weiss and of Henry Weiss & Son, both of Hatboro.

George Redles addressed the Germantown Horticultural Society's October meeting on "Native Ferns and Plants."

Wood & Healy, of Hammonton, N. J., have been important factors in the dahlia market during the last two months.

Baltimore shippers have been sending some excellent dahlias to the local market during the last few weeks. They are received and sold by the curbstone merchants.

Edward Reid is handling some fine American Beauties.

The Robert Craig Co. has a fine white chrysanthemum in Early Snow.

The Joseph Heacock Co. reports palm business as double that of last season for the three months just past.

Zebulon de Forest Ely, formerly a well-known seedsman in Philadelphia, doing business as Z. de Forest Ely & Co., died recently. A son of Mr. Ely is now in charge of the mailing seed department for the H. F. Michell Co. Edward Reid was Mr. Ely's right-hand man and when he retired from business Mr. Reid started for himself as a wholesale florist.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

PEAS of the canners' varieties are not made to seem any the more plentiful by later reports.

THE board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League was in session at New York October 22.

VISITED CHICAGO: William T. Emerson, of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb.; A. Mangelsdorf, of Mangelsdorf Bros. & Co., Atmison, Kan.

It is reported that certain seed growers and wholesale seedsmen have indicated a willingness to chip in to help some reputable seedsmen test the constitutionality of the new Wisconsin seed law.

J. OTTO THILOW, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer corporation, Philadelphia, and J. D. Eisele, vice-president and manager of the greenhouses and nursery at Riverton, N. J., returned October 19, from a month's trip to Europe.

ROBERT LIVINGSTON, of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., has a new coreless tomato of which he thinks highly. He was in Chicago last week with a photograph of a specimen and expects to offer seed to the trade this fall, for their 1908 novelty lists.

THE Corn Exposition at Chicago closed October 19, with the promoters so well satisfied with the results that already it is announced the show will be given next year on an even larger scale. The paid admissions numbered 60,000, but there was a deficit of some $20,000.

NEAR Chicago there are several lots of asters for seed that are occasioning the owners much concern. One grower who figures on realizing $2,000 for his crop of seed says it took the plants a month longer than usual to come into full bloom and that the seed is late in ripening.

THE Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn., reports having just completed cleaning what it believes to be the largest crop of onion seed ever produced on one farm in the New England states—10,500 pounds. F. M. Clark says: "This is, however, after several years of disappointing crops."

W. ATLEE BURPEE will give a dinner at the Union League Club, Philadelphia, Saturday evening, October 26, in honor of Postmaster-General George von L. Meyer and for discussion of parcels post, postal savings banks and other subjects in the line of postal advance. A number of seedsmen are among the guests Mr. Burpee has bidden to be present.

SAMPLES of this year's crop of Refugee and other late maturing beans will show a large per cent of undeveloped color and for this reason will be thought inferior by the majority of the smaller dealers, who go by the appearance of the sample. These light-colored beans, although they spoil the appearance of the sample, will make about as good a crop as the well-colored article, as experience has frequently shown.

THE Kirkeby & Gundestrup Seed Co., Chicago, has been incorporated with $50,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are Marius Kirkeby, Knud Gundestrup and Olaf E. Ray.

OUT of town onion set dealers are still canvassing the vicinity of Chicago, making efforts to secure in person car lots or less of a good merchantable article at a shade or two lower price than quotation sent to them by mail.

IN WISCONSIN.

The potato crop in the vicinity of Clinton is light and the grain crop generally is rather poor. Corn has been cut short by the frost and there will not be much good, hard corn in this section.

The new seed law passed at the last session of the Wisconsin legislature, requiring all seeds offered for sale in the state to be stamped with percentage of purity and year of growth, is causing some consternation among seedsmen, as the law is impracticable in the shape passed and can hardly be lived up to, at any rate so far as garden seeds are concerned.

LIVE SEEDSMEN ARE CATALOGING

The NEW GIGANTIC Orchid-Flowering Cosmos LADY LENOX

Awarded a First-Class Certificate of Merit by the New York Florists' Club, October 14, 1907, also at Lenox, Madison and Morristown.....

THIS GIGANTIC COSMOS is the forerunner of an entirely new race of Cosmos. It is of extraordinary size and beauty. Visitors to the floral exhibitions last autumn were enraptured with its size and magnificent color.

SIZE OF FLOWER—5 to 6 inches in Diameter. COLOR—A delightful shell-pink, lighting up beautifully at night. FORM OF FLOWER—Oval petals of splendid substance, forming a perfectly circular flower which, when cut, lasts an unusual length of time in water. HABIT OF PLANT—Strong and vigorous, growing 6 to 7 feet high. A grand cut flower variety.

Under date of October 16, 1906, Messrs. C. C. Morse & Co., Seed Growers of San Francisco, Cal., write us as follows: "Your new Cosmos Lady Lenox, is now in full bloom. We are pleased to say it is one of the handsomest varieties of Cosmos that we have ever seen. The flowers are very large and full and the color is a very beautiful light pink. We would be glad to know what price you would be willing to make us for a 1/4 lb."

Flowers of this Cosmos will be Exhibited at all the Leading Flower Shows in the United States, Autumn, 1907

THE WISCONSIN SEED LAW.

At its last session the legislature of the state of Wisconsin added to its statutes the following sections to regulate the sale of seeds in the state:

"Section 1494—11n. No person, firm or corporation shall, by himself, his agent, or as agent or representative of any other person, firm or corporation, sell, offer or expose for sale or for distribution upon the general market, any flowering, garden, vegetable or agricultural seeds for the purpose of seeding, sowing or planting, unless the same shall, when put up and offered in closed packages, have plainly written or printed thereon in English the name, kind and year when grown, and its percentage of purity and freedom from foreign matter. If the same or any of them be put in open packages, sacks or other receptacles, there shall be securely attached to the side thereof a plainly written or printed label giving in English the name, kind and year when grown, and also its percentage of purity and freedom from foreign matter.

PROGRESS AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The accompanying illustration is from the architect's drawing of the front for the new building being erected by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., at 211 and 213 Kearny street, San Francisco. The firm was located at 225 Kearny street prior to the big fire of April 18, 1906, so that the occupancy of the new premises will bring them back to within half a block of their previous location. It shows that they at least have confidence that San Francisco when rebuilt will have its better class of business located much as before the fire. It is expected that the new building will be completed by December 1. It will be occupied at once and will be run in conjunction with the store now located at 1343 Sutter street. In sending the drawings Pelicano, Rossi & Co.

enough and some to spare at a reasonable figure, and this is the first chance they have had since the height of the aster crop several months ago.

Indoor mums, especially of Bonnaillon, are in splendid shape and are netting the growers very fair returns. The white sorts have been eagerly bought up until the present time, but now they are not being cleared up quite as fast.

Indoor roses are becoming more plentiful in the stores, but not so much so with the growers. The quantities of chrysanthemums and their popularity at the present time have given the roses a chance to linger longer than usual in the store windows and one gets a chance to make comparisons which up to this time have been impossible. Carnations are much more plentiful than they were and partly for the same reason. The weather continues warm, with no signs of rain. A shower would freshen things somewhat, but if it were too severe the late mums would probably suffer seriously.

Various Notes.

J. J. O'Connor has opened a store on Fillmore street, near the corner of Hayes street.

Thomas Thompson, the nurseryman of Santa Cruz, is in town.

H. Gresens, who recently sold out his floral establishment, is contemplating a European trip in a few weeks.

Considerable interest is being taken by the local growers in the forthcoming Marin County Horticultural Society exhibition, to be held in San Rafael on Saturday, October 26. A good show is promised by the committee in charge.

G.

THE STAPLE ROSES.

A trip through some of our large rose-growing establishments shows that there has been little planted in the way of new varieties for the coming season's well, with the exception of outdoor mums. These are in such plentiful supply at this time that a great many of them do not find purchasers. It is a great item of satisfaction with the growers, however, to be able to get stock crop. Everyone hopes from year to year that there will be something new added to our limited stock of varieties that will be an agreeable change, but save for two or three sorts that are quite freely planted this season, there is nothing new to describe.

From the point of quantity, I find Bridesmaid to be in excess, with Beauty probably a close second. After these come Bride, Kaiserin, Caroline Testout, Liberty, Cecil Brunner, Perle, Ulrich Brunner, La France, Ivory, Mme. Chatenay, Richmond, President Carnot and Killarney. I think no mistake has been made in this list and in putting them in the order named.

Some of the varieties that were planted extensively several years ago are now entirely discarded or grown exclusively in the open or under lattice frames. In this class I might mention Sunset, General Jacqueminot, Niphetos, Rainbow, Papa Gontier, Meteor, Wootton, Catherine Mermet, White La France, Duchess of Albany and Belle Siebrecht. The latter variety, however, I have found is still grown in a few places, but only in limited quantities. The other sorts, although good in their classes, have been entirely superseded by roses that are of better color and have more desirable blooming qualities, or can be depended on to give larger blooms.

American Beauty is still the best in its class. I might have mentioned in this regard that the Queen of Edgely was planted here quite freely some years ago, as a possible rival to the older rose, but it has practically been abandoned. Richmond is forging well to the front and is quite a favorite with some growers. I am inclined to think it will be well planted next season. The great drawback to any rival for the claims that are given the American Beauty is that growers who are successful in handling this variety are perfectly satisfied to let well enough alone and let some other grower experiment with a possibility. So many people have not found this a money-maker that much bench room is given over to Brides and Maids formerly occupied by Beauty.

Of the newer pink varieties Mme. Chatenay has hardly had a fair trial here. I saw several beds that looked well and gave abundant promises for later on. Killarney does not come up to expectations in the line of length and stability of stem. It resembles Belle Siebrecht in this regard. We are still short of good yellow kinds. Perle is not grown in quantity and it is the only yellow I have seen at all. Of the scarlet sorts, Liberty holds its place well, having entirely succeeded Meteor. Some growers claim to be unable to make a paying proposition out of it, and others think it fills all requirements. La France is one of the old standbys and is still grown in some places with good results,

TO KILL WORMS IN POTS.

In what proportion should we mix ordinary aqua ammonia with water so that the quantity of water used in watering the plants once, with the aqua ammonia added, will kill angle worms without hurting the plants, or will even benefit the plants? W. R. W.

We have not tried the aqua ammonia solution for worms. While it may work satisfactorily, we think that by using lime water you can attain the same results just as easily and economically without running any risk of injuring your plants. All that you have to do is to slake a few pieces of stone lime and use the clean liquid to water your plants with. You will find the worms come out of the earth at a lively gait after this is applied. There are several special, odorless liquid solutions which can be added to water to clean out worms and which are harmless to the roots of plants. C. W.

TO KILL WATER CRESS.

Is there any remedy which will kill out entirely the water cress in a lake? The lake is three feet deep, in a private estate. H. L. L.

There are many preparations that could be concocted that would kill the water cress, but as most of those I can think of would contain substances of a more or less poisonous nature, the use of which might cause injury where injury was not intended, I purposely omit mentioning such.

Lime, if applied in large enough quantity, will answer the purpose, and a strong solution of lime, sulphur and salt will do the work still more effectively. In order to kill the vegetation absolutely with any of these, some contrivance will be necessary to get the agency of destruction at work down at the roots before much of its destructive properties is neutralized by the action of the water. Bags might be used for the purpose. The bags containing the substance might be sunk to the bottom and then ripped open, at the same time getting busy agitating the water in order that whatever is contained in the bags might work its way in among the vital portions of the obnoxious vegetation. CINERARIAS.

We have had trouble with our cineraria plants. Here are our data: The seed was sown in April and came up finely; potted to 2¼-inch pots May 21; grew finely until June 15, then began to die down and all foliage dropped off; were still in 2¼-inch pots, but big enough to repot to 3-inch. Repotted some to 3-inch and they died down also; I do not mean that they all died entirely, for in July and August about one-third of them started up again and by October 1 were just big enough for 3-inch pots, but they do not seem to grow. Of course, after flowering they died down, but these plants were intended for Christmas and New Year's and February sales. Did we sow the seed too early and the hot weather cause them to lose foliage? We had the same trouble last year. Please help us out. We have advertised in the REVIEW this year and have had grand success, but wish we could have cinerarias to advertise. H. & C.

Your trouble has been caused by too early sowing. Neither calceolarias nor cinerarias can be successfully carried over the hot summer months and for this reason seed sowing should be deferred until the end of July or the beginning of August. Seedlings raised at these dates will grow along steadily without any check and make fine winter-flowering stock. Use a light, leaf-moldy compost to sow the seed in, and in potting later it will be found that a light, rich soil will suit them. Loam, well decayed manure and leaf-mold, with some sand added, makes a compost such as cinerarias will revel in. The plants should always be grown in a cold house; until November they are better in frames. Use tobacco stems to keep aphids in check. Shade from direct sun is necessary. C. W.

WORMS IN SOIL.

Is it practical to kill worms in the soil of raised beds by using water with a temperature of 150 degrees by thermometer test, or some other degree of heat? E. G. S.

If it is absolutely necessary to destroy the worms in the soil—and it rarely is—use the following, which will effect the purpose without risk: Unslaked lime, one bushel; water enough to slake. Then dilute with fifty gallons of water. Allow it to stand until the water becomes clear and apply to the bench. RIBES.

SCHOOLCRAFT, MICH.—A company has been formed, under the name of Cropson & Simonds, for the forcing of flowers and vegetables here on a large scale. Two greenhouses have already been built, each 23x100 feet, and, according to present plans, several acres will eventually be covered with greenhouses. Leo Cropson and Chauncy Simonds, of Grand Rapids, are at the head of the company.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

PERRY'S HARDY PLANT FARMS, from which many American nurserymen have drawn supplies, have been removed from Winchmore Hill, England, to Enfield, Middlesex.

ONE of the best plants, if not the best, for a hedge in extremely exposed places on the seashore, is Rosa rugosa. In early summer the foliage of this rose is luxuriant and beautiful. Later, when in flower, it is simply gorgeous, and later still, when the flowers have given place to berries, the effect is almost as pleasing and fully as bright and cheerful. This last stage continues until winter has almost arrived.

SOMETIMES when it became necessary to fill in and around the trunks of large trees in changing a grade, iron bands have been used to keep the soil away from the trees, leaving a space between such bands and the bark. It has been conclusively demonstrated that such a method for the supposed protection of the trees is more fatal to them than if the soil had been put right up to the bark. This, no doubt, results from the action of the water which collects in the space between the bark and the band, acting in a manner injurious to the roots just where they emerge from the trunk of the tree.

WISCONSIN NURSERY LAW.

At the last session of the Wisconsin legislature four new sections were added to the act relating to the sale of nursery stock and seeds. That part of the new laws regulating the sale of nursery stock is as follows:

"Section 1494—11m. Any person, firm or corporation who shall, by himself, his agent, or as agent or representative of any other person, firm or corporation, sell or deliver, in this state, fruit trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, buds or ornamental plants which are sold, offered or exposed for sale for planting, shall, at the time of the delivery of the same, give to the purchaser a certified statement of such sale, giving the correct name, kind and number of each variety sold and the name and location of the nursery or place where such trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, buds or ornamental plants were fully grown.

"Section 1494—11o. Any person, firm, corporation, agent or representative who shall violate any provision of section 1494—11m shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100 for each and every offense."

MAGNOLIA SEEDS.

Magnolia seeds should be freed of pulp just as soon as the parting of the pods is noticeable. This can be done by mixing the seeds with finely screened clean sand and allowing them to remain in that condition about a week, when all the pulp matter will become decayed to such a degree that in the process of subsequent washing it will separate readily from the seeds. When the seeds are well cleaned they should be put in slightly moist sand and then kept in a cool place until they are required to be sown.

Although successful sowing of magnolia seed outdoors in the fall is possible, still the spring is perhaps the best time to sow the seed in the open. The seed bed should be covered lightly with leaves. Where greenhouse space is available, magnolia seedlings may be raised indoors by sowing the seeds in shallow boxes during the latter part of January, taking care to shade the seeds. Squares of glass placed over the boxes, with a sheet of paper over the glass during the day, will answer the purpose. When the seedlings are well above the soil they should be put into small pots, not transplanted into other boxes, and should be kept growing and shifted as growth progresses. M.

which will probably be the case, we may find that the people who have from necessity been sparing in their use of fruit this season will continue to use it sparingly, to the great loss alike to producer and consumer.

"In working for our own selfish interests in this case we are also doing a great good to the public at large.

"It seems to me that your national organization should take up this matter and bring it before the state societies at their annual meetings this winter."

PROPAGATION BY SUCKERS.

In general, propagation by means of suckers is not desirable because plants raised in that way have a marked tendency to produce suckers. But this disposition can, in a measure, be kept in check by being vigilant in observing when undesired suckers make their appearance and removing them immediately. This precaution, together with careful cultivation of the plant in order to induce a full flow of sap in the proper channels, will do much toward the attainment of the desired end.

Some things, such as the raspberry, are propagated mainly by means of suckers, and with all of them the mode of procedure is simple and consists of removing the suckers with all the roots emanating from them and planting them. This, of course, should be done at the time of year the trees the suckers spring from should properly be transplanted. It is desirable that suckers for propagation should be taken up with ample roots, yet the injury to the parent should be guarded against. If the suckers emanate from a thick root, the soil should be removed and, instead of severing the root, the sucker may safely be detached by taking a slice off the root with the roots of the sucker. exposed places on the seashore, either in hedges and groups or as single specimens. As a hedge plant the Japan quince is valuable in many ways. When in flower it makes a display which in point of brilliancy is unequaled by that produced by any other shrub. As a serviceable hedge, in the matter of resistance, it is one of the best things in cultivation. It has also another strong point in its favor, which is that of always adapting itself to existing conditions and thriving surprisingly well under seemingly adverse conditions, especially as regards the character or quantity of soil available for its sustenance. With most other plants used for hedges, weeds are objectionable, especially when the plants are young, but the Japan

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

Inclosed in separate cover I send you a lettuce leaf, infested with a white insect, which causes me no end of trouble and loss. The most frequent fumigations with tobacco do not seem to affect it. Last season I tried hydrocyanic acid gas according to your specifications. It helped only temporarily and it injured the lettuce to quite an extent. I fumigated in summer with sulphur, but, alas, the insect is again at work! It does not seem to hurt the lettuce until nearly ready for sale, when it commences to spread rapidly upward, causing the edges of leaves to decay. Spraying at this stage is almost out of the question. Would arsenic be of any use, and in what form? Or could I use hydrocyanic acid gas in a mild dose and let it stand all night?

O. E. P.

The little white insect is the white fly, which has now become a great nuisance all over the country. There is but one sure remedy when once these pests appear in an establishment. Prepare to battle with them at once and keep prepared for their return. Cyanide is the only kind of fumigating material which will affect them in the least. We have tried every known insecticide, but nothing else will harm them.

Cyanide is not as expensive to use as most other insecticides, and when properly used it will not injure plants in the least and yet will be strong enough to exterminate all insect pests and keep your houses clean of them. Any greenhouse proprietor not experienced in the use of this valuable exterminator should learn at once and educate his employees in its use. There are some facts about the use of hydrocyanic acid gas which have not been published, and through lack of knowledge or experience many growers give up using it after the first unsuccessful attempt. In fact, most men are only too glad to stop using it, on account of the danger, the gas being as deadly to human beings and animals as it is to insects. There is, however, nothing to fear if the fumigating is done by careful men who know what they are doing, and all doors are securely locked for the night, so that no one gets inside until morning. Heating pipes should be set for the night.

Cyanide of potassium is worth about 50 cents per pound and sulphuric acid about 50 cents per gallon; that is, in quantity and at wholesale prices. But the best way to get it in smaller quanties is to have your druggist put up the cyanide in 2½-ounce packages, securely wrapped in two thicknesses of paper. The acid you can buy by the jug, and the half-gallon stone jars in which to mix it cost only a few cents and can be used for years. When you have these materials you are ready for business. A still night should be chosen, when there is little or no wind. Place the little jars in the aisles, as closely as needed. Then take a pail of water and a dipper holding exactly a pint and put a pint of the water in each jar. Do not put in the acid until you are about ready to drop the packages, as it seems to weaken very rapidly after it is diluted with water.

Now see that all ventilators are shut and all doors locked except those at one end of the houses, which you are to use in getting out. Also see that no pet animals are left inside, and if you have vegetable houses with bees in them, carry the swarms out also. Now take the sulphuric acid into the houses in a pail, just as you did with the water, and put just a pint in each jar, also taking care that your cyanide is not near until you are ready for it; keep it locked up until the last moment. You now have a pint of water and a pint of acid in each jar. The acid will sputter a little when it mixes, but is not dangerous unless you spill or spatter it upon yourself.

You are now ready for the last act. Take your packages in small tins or baskets, as many baskets as you have rows of jars. Let one man take a basket to the far end of each row of jars; all drop in the first packages at the same time, then go to the next jars and so on until you get to the end of the house and out at the end door, locking it without delay.

It is best to have a door-tender, so as to have no trouble in getting out. Do not unwrap the packages, but drop them in with the paper securely wrapped around them. Do not let the acid spatter on your hands when you place the package in the jar. Above all things, do not go back past the jars after you have placed the packages in them.

It is safe to go into the houses in the morning and open the ventilators a little, although you can usually smell the gas very faintly. Do not stay in long until the houses air out a trifle; then go back and spray the plants. Plants should not be too dry when fumigated, but spraying before fumigating is unnecessary.

For houses thirty feet wide, six such jars per 100 feet of house will kill all the white flies. This might be too strong for some plants and five jars might be enough.

THE NEW CARNATION AFTERGLOW

WE beg to announce that we will offer to the trade, the coming season of 1907 and 1908, the new carnation AFTERGLOW, a variety of sterling merit, which is destined to be grown as universally as the Lawson in its time, as it has done exceedingly well wherever it has been tried—in six different sections of the country—the Far East, West and Middle States—and all report it as an "Ideal" commercial variety, grand in every way. It won the S. A. F. Silver Medal, for the best flower or plant, at the Monthly Exhibition of the Cincinnati Floral Exhibition in 1906, and scored 91 points at quite a number of exhibitions held in different cities in the United States. It has never failed to score wherever shown. It scored the highest of any seedlings at the exhibition of the American Carnation Society, held at Toronto in 1907, after reaching there twenty-four hours late from Framingham, Mass. In color it is everything that the name implies—a bright rosy cerise. In stem it excels any commercial variety now extant, not excepting Enchantress, being somewhat longer and always rigid. Never weak, in habit it is very vigorous, "a Grower's Delight," as it recuperates very readily after planting from the field; also from the sand. It loses no time in getting to work. AFTERGLOW has been grown for the past season by the undersigned and offered by them.

Orders now booked, to be filled in rotation for well grown, well rooted cuttings, at $2.00 per dozen; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Chicago florists may look for a large number of orders from New Orleans for carnations, roses and ferns, as a good supply will be necessary for our All Saints' day, but I doubt whether the demand for chrysanthemums will be as large as before, as we are coming every year closer to perfection in flowers of our own growing.

The meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held Thursday, October 17, at the residence of the president, Charles Eble. The eighteen members present had a splendid time, being well entertained by Mr. Eble and the ladies of the house. Perfectly developed flowers of mums were brought by Abele Bros. and H. Papworth and can be taken as a sample of the stock that many other growers also have on hand.

An exhibit of flowers, not exactly a regular flower show, will be arranged to take place during the first part of next month. M. M. L.

LITCHFIELD, MINN.

Trade here is excellent. At times it is impossible to procure enough cut flowers from Minneapolis.

The Litchfield Nursery Co. has added 1,600 feet of glass this summer, besides a new boiler-room, complete. The firm now has a good establishment, but cannot yet grow enough to supply its trade. Extensive improvements will be made in the nursery the coming year and a rose house will also be added to the range. This firm is now in the market for perennials and ornamental shrubbery in quantities. A. K. W.

BUFFALO.The Market.

Weddings, parties and funerals have kept the florists busy for the last week in fine style. All stock moved freely, and in spite of the number of mums on the market nearly everything sold. Heretofore it has been generally conceded that when mums start other stock moves comparatively slowly, but this has not proved the case this fall, for everything finds a ready sale, and lilies have been scarce for some time. Cosmos has taken the place of other outdoor stock and sells well, but after the night of Sunday last we expect all outdoor stock to be frozen up. It was the hardest frost this season and will start the bulb planting and outdoor stock.

Various Notes.

John Milley, formerly of the Erie Floral Co., has bought out the business of his brother William, who took possession a short time ago on account of the death of his father. William has done a good business, but his health does not permit him to do the work required.

Henry Wise, foreman for the Erie Floral Co., was in town last week, visiting his old friends. This man is very well named, for there are few things that get by his notice.

G. W. McClure & Son, the landscape gardeners of this town, have spread their business over a wide territory. They are now submitting plans for the work to be done at the New York state fair grounds. This will be one of the largest jobs of the year. The association is to spend about a million dollars in rearranging the grounds. R. A. S.

LEETONIA, O.—R. K. Stokesberry has replaced his brick flue with a steam boiler of sixteen horse-power, doing all the steamfitting himself. Owing to the late spring and dry summer, carnations are not as far advanced as is usual at this date.

If you wish to be cock of the walk,
 If you'd like to hear the town talk
 Of the plants that you sell,
 Why, you know very well,
 If they're Aschmann's, no buyer will balk.

What do you think; when will you start in?
DO IT NOW. Waiting means suicide. I always act as quickly as I think, and have been successful; learn and do it likewise.

ARAUCARIAS our specialty. Watch us grow
 1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well-admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, in October. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 2 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii. Have 3 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5,000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

Primula Obconica—Best improved strain. In bud and bloom, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine—6-inch pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00 each.

61st and Market Sts PHILADELPHIA

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cut flower business has not been all one could have desired the last two weeks. Dahlias have been here in abundance, and good stock at that, and lasted just long enough to create a demand for them when on top of them came the early mums. As there have been no large decorations there was not much demand for them and the bottom dropped out of the price the first few days after they came in. It is to be hoped they will not get any cheaper this season. The market is full of them, on sale from $3 per hundred upward, but it must be fancy stock to bring $2.50 per dozen.

Beauties also felt the effect and sold cheaper than at any time this year. We had a killing frost the night of October 17 and it is to be hoped that prices will go up from this time on. Roses are in pretty good shape, but carnations are still far short of the demand.

Various Notes.

The retail stores have been complaining that business does not seem to take on the usual October life. They all have more decorations booked than at this time last season, but the regular store business is out of whack.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. have removed to their new store, 714 Penn avenue, and are ready for business.

John Harris, who runs one of the Fifth avenue street stands, is a victim of typhoid fever.

H. C. Frick opened his conservatories to the public October 20 with a display of chrysanthemums, orchids and begonias.

The great advance in the price of boxes is causing the wholesalers some concern and the only way they can see out is to charge for packing small orders, which will no doubt be generally done.

One of our retail men was compelled to sue an undertaker last week, for plants amounting to about $60, which the undertaker appropriated from a funeral job.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is carrying orchids in stock, a new departure for the Pittsburgh wholesalers.

R. Volkwein, who for some years has been one of the principal wire design makers of this city, is now in charge of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. wire shop. Hoo-Hoo.

CANTON, PA.—Terry Bros. have had an extra good season and intend to build a large greenhouse next spring.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

The American Carnation.

By C. W. WARD. Invaluable to the carnation grower. All departments of the business are treated in a thoroughly practical manner. This book is the work of a careful, studious grower of ripe experience. Fully illustrated. $3.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embrace the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Greenhouse Heating.

FROM A PRACTICAL FIREMAN.

By means of an advertisement in the REVIEW I have obtained a position as fireman in a first-class heating plant, with 2-inch flow pipes under all the benches. There are two boilers and 25,000 square feet of glass, and I have no reason to complain.

I was very sorry to hear of George M. Kellogg's loss, at Pleasant Hill, Mo. This explosion goes to show that the fireman did not know his business. Who shut off the steam gauge? Was there a safety valve on the boilers? All boilers ought to be tested during August and September, to make sure of safe pressure. All water glass and pipe should also be taken apart and cleaned. And, most important of all, there must be no cheap fireman, but a licensed fireman, who knows his business, and no florist who owns boilers can get them insured unless he has a licensed man to look after them.

As I have fired and run engines for more than twenty years, perhaps I have a right to say that I know what I am talking about. I have asked florists and other men if they depended on the glass and gauge, and they answered, "Yes; that's what they are made for." "Well," I told him, "your undertaker is depending on getting you." Then I asked them, "Why do the boiler makers make the man-hole oblong?" "So a man can get in and out easily," they answered. "Wrong again," I said, "it is in order to get the man-hole and hand-hole plates in or out. If the holes were round or square, you couldn't get the plates out, could you? A man-hole or a hand-hole plate must be an inch larger than the opening, to allow a gasket to be put on, and that is why the holes and plates are made oblong."

In my experience as an engineer I have often had occasion to make hurried repairs of leaky pipes, and I have found that a good appliance for this purpose is what is called the Emergency Pipe Clamp, manufactured by James McCrea & Co., Chicago. This is the best thing a florist can have for stopping a leak.

My experience has also taught me that the best pump for florists' use is the Marsh pump. It is powerful and gives good service. In cold weather, watering the plants with cold water will chill them, but the Marsh pump will take the chill off, as it is built so as to turn the exhaust steam into the water end of the pump; hence it warms the water. The address of the makers is: Marsh Steam Pump Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

I have also found out that the Morehead steam trap cannot be beaten.

Now about the night fireman again. There is enough to do looking after the steam, the water and the temperature, without his going outside to feed horses, milk cows, or drive the horse to town in a cold morning, after coming out, all covered with perspiration, from a warm house. There is none of that, however, in my plant, as my employer will not allow it. All he wants me to do is to keep a bright lookout for the heating of his houses.

FRANK D. HARRISON.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

I inclose a blue print of my steam heating plant and would like to know what changes to make in it to change it to a hot water system. The boiler is located in a cellar or basement and the bottom of the boiler is five feet below the level of the returns. The boiler is a regular steam locomotive firebox boiler, rated at fifteen horse-power.

The system I now have works well for steam, but, of course, it requires constant attention and I thought that for that reason a change to a hot water system would be desirable, provided the change could be made without too great expense. I have two houses, connected, each house 21x107 feet, and two more your houses during mild weather. A good plan for you to adopt would be to run the plant as a hot water plant during mild weather in the winter and during spring and fall, and as a steam plant during severe weather. This can be done by a slight modification, and without the changing of any of the piping in the houses. Connect the present system with the city water pressure, if this is twenty pounds or more but less than fifty pounds. If the city pressure is more than fifty pounds, install a reducing valve, so as to give twenty-five or thirty pounds' pressure on the system; connect this pipe to the main return close to the boiler, replace all automatic air valves with simple pet cocks and use the plant as a hot water plant as above suggested. I do not think it would be wise to modify this plant so as to place it on a regular hot water basis, in view of the fact that you are to erect two more houses of the same size next year, which will give you a plant large enough to justify the attention demanded by steam. As soon as possible, discard the locomotive type of boiler you now have for a regular brick-set or Scotch marine type of return tube boiler. You will find them more economical and they will require less attention.

L. C. C.

RELATIVE SIZE OF PIPES.

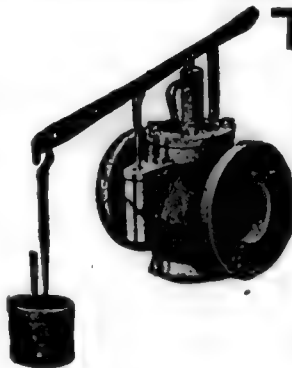

Will three 3-inch returns, each seventy feet long, be too much for a 2-inch flow? Will a 3-inch main supply three 2-inch flows?

S. H. B.

One 2-inch flow is rated as sufficient to care for 400 square feet of radiation; the three 3-inch returns, seventy feet long, contain only about 200 square feet, so there is ample capacity in the 2-inch flow. If the 2-inch flows are each less than 480 feet long, a 3-inch main will supply them on a steam basis. If hot water is used, everything should, if possible, be kept within 100 feet in length.

The Market.

Last week was marked by a continuation of good business and the prospect is that there will be no let-up. While some days are better than others, the general average is well up to other years, if not a trifle better. Funeral work constitutes the main demand and it is the general report from all retail men that society is unusually quiet this fall.

The mum is holding the lead, as is usual at this season of the year, but I hardly believe that it is averaging as high a price this year as last. They are selling well, though, and we have no kick coming. This market is well supplied with them in all sizes and colors. Pink is a little scarce and consequently sells out best and averages the highest price. Small white blooms, being good for funeral work, are in good supply and sell out well. The mid-season varieties are beginning to make their appearance now and some fine stock is being handled. Three dollars a dozen is about the best price now.

Carnations are scarce, as they have been all the season. While there is a gradual increase in the supply, the demand more than keeps pace with it and the price is consequently high. The quality of the stock is good. Roses, with the exception of Beauties and some other red varieties, are plentiful and selling as well as can be expected during the mum season. The quality is good. Violets are coming in larger quantities and the quality is good. There is not a very heavy demand for them, though, and they do not bring a very high price. Other stock remains the same as reported last week.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

A Special Easter Basket.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a special Easter basket designed by Charles Henry Fox at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. This basket is one of Mr. Fox's choicest productions. It is filled with "Alice blue" hydrangeas, blue silk fiber being woven through the straw of the basket to harmonize. Both the basket and its arrangement were the personal work of Mr. Fox and his designation of the hydrangeas as Alice blue is a touch in keeping with the skill shown in the design.

COLOR COMBINATIONS.

Too few retailers give sufficient thought to their color combinations. The proper use of colors marks the floral artist. It is not at all skill in the mechanical part of the work that marks the adept. It takes an artist, for instance, to know that only one color should be used in a show window. Too many are inclined to show how great a variety of stock they have, rather than how well they can display one item. One of the handsomest retail windows seen in a long time consisted of a single vase of big yellow mums. This was some fine Monrovia, but any good yellow sort would answer as well, and there is nothing to beat old Bonnaffon, which soon will be in. The flowers stood at the rear of the center of the window and were in a tall, dark-green, rattan-covered vase. The floor of the window was carpeted with green sheet moss, which was built up to cover the pots of several fine specimen plants of Adiantum Farleyense. From the tall vase of mums there were streamers of yellow ribbon leading to the adiantum. The only two colors were shades of yellow and green. Words fail to tell how much more effective this window was than that of a neighbor who probably had $50 worth of cut flowers in no greater space.

FALL PLANTING.

The retail florist who does a general business can often turn to good account things outside his own sphere of advertising. For instance, a widely circulated weekly magazine recently began a series of articles on "Home," with a chapter devoted to the gardening environment of the ideal habitation. The Budd Park Greenhouses, of Kansas City, took quick advantage of the opportunity by sending out to the owners of homes in the vicinity, a neatly printed circular which read as follows:

"The article in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, entitled 'Home,' is suggested for your careful consideration.

"We are more than anxious to have you give us a trial order of planting any of the bulbs or shrubbery that should now be planted. We can, we believe, do it just a little bit better than any one else and at prices within reasonable scope; quality considered.

"We are also prepared to fertilize your lawn without the usual litter and produce more satisfactory results than where manure is used, obviating spring cleaning of same.

"Tulip beds made from $3 up.

"We will be pleased to advise with you concerning any work of this character."

The same opportunity lay at the door of every florist who does planting and scene, a horsey window during the week of the equine exhibition, all help to keep alive the public interest. The newspaper and mail advertising should be in accord with the window whenever possible.

HAUSWIRTH'S NEW STORE.

P. J. Hauswirth has a fine store in the new annex to the Auditorium Annex, Chicago. The room is amply large, with a basement even larger, equipped for the storage of stock and the making up of work, so that the store itself need be used for nothing except display and sales. The walls are white, marble below and enameled terra cotta above, and the decoration is simple, so that the stock shows off to better advantage than where the ornamentation of the walls is too elaborate. No fixtures will be required except some marble-topped tables, perhaps a ribbon and basket case and the refrigerator shown in the illustration on the following page.

The exterior of the refrigerator is made of a combination of verd-antique and English vein Italian marble. The the return is sure to be in the long run much more than would be necessary to justify such a piece of enterprise.

Every retail florist should seek to take advantage of the things that excite public interest, as many now do by special window displays. The show window, next to a well pleased customer, always will be the florists' best advertisement, and it is worth careful handling to get out of it all it is worth. This week a Halloween basket, in June a wedding panels inlaid in the marble are of art glass of various soft tone colors. The floor of the flower chamber is laid in white tile. The rear of the flower chamber is fitted with mirrors, which assist greatly in the display of the cut stock. The ice chamber of this refrigerator is so arranged that it can be used either with artificial refrigeration or natural ice, Mr. Hauswirth having the advantage of connection with the refrigerating plant in the hotel. But should any accident happen to the artificial apparatus, the coils can be taken out and ice used. The ice chamber is so arranged that it maintains a temperature of from 48 to 52 degrees and a circulation of air is provided for to carry the cut stock in good shape as long as the most favorable conditions will permit.

The refrigerator was built by Orr & Lockett Hardware Co., Chicago, whose coolrooms are in use in most of the wholesale houses in the Chicago market, as well as in many leading retail stores, not only in Chicago, but in other cities.

THE KALISCH STORE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in the store of William Kalisch & Sons, at St. Louis, and is typical of the well ordered establishments where a general trade is done. Kalisch & Sons are located at 4506 Delmar boulevard and have an excellent general trade. The store is of good size and well fitted up. The fixtures are all in white enamel and there is a place for everything and everything, as in the old adage, is in its place. They carry a large line of staple supplies; everything that the trade requires. To prevent the soiling of baskets and other easily damaged articles, they are all protected by display cases. At one side of the room there is a case for the display of metal and wax wreaths and designs, which in certain localities are an important item of stock, however their handling may be regarded by the retailers who cater to the swell society element.

foliage under any circumstances until February and then from a variety to be discontinued the year following, or from plants of unusual vigor, young stock of which has been propagated.

Later in the season, when perhaps it is decided to throw out a bench for room, that material can be used to advantage, but in all cases hold to its value.

WINTERING HYDRANGEAS.

Will Hydrangea Otaksa and H. variegata stand storing in a dark underground cellar, where the temperature is near the freezing point for four months? In storing them last year in the same place, they were entirely covered with dry sand, but a good many buds were lost in taking them out and I should like to prevent such damage as much as possible, leaving them packed together on the ground.

P. B. R.

While I would prefer a cellar with some light, I see no good reason why your plants should not keep all right in a dark cellar if the temperature is not allowed to go much below freezing. Let the plants be denuded of foliage and have the wood well ripened before storing them. Covering with sand is not

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

The Question of Green.

As stevia is in season only from Thanksgiving to about January 15, the greens then to be made use of are ferns, asparagus and carnation foliage.

The largely used fancy ferns are too well known to need more than passing reference here, although it may be well to advise against their too frequent use, as customers soon tire of them. Asparagus in its several varieties is always acceptable. The growing of Sprengeri as described some time ago by Mr. Scott, i. e., in the empty boxes used for shipping glass, materially lessens the cost of its production.

Carnation Foliage as Greens.

Last but not least of the greens I shall mention is the divine flower's own foliage, the most appropriate of all, but it is questionable whether most of us realize how expensive it is. Every shoot cut is one less would-be bloom and is removed at a time when practically all labor and expense necessary to its development into a flower have been laid out; a short wait and the shoot would become an unquestionable asset. Consequently a dozen sprays gathered here and there from a bench, while seemingly of little value and apparently detracting nothing from the plants, is in reality a drain on the grower and plants alike.

So great is some flower lovers' appreciation of this green that they prefer eight blooms and four sprays of foliage to twelve blooms with other green at the same figure. All patrons of the florist are not of this mind, at least concerning the question of price.

Real Value of the Foliage.

If an order came for a bunch to contain, say two dozen fully developed blooms and one dozen buds in all stages of development, you would feel justified in charging for three dozen blooms at full price and a customer could have no cause to feel overcharged. A few sprays of foliage are needed to complete the natural effect, and any one appreciative of this green can readily be shown that these sprays are nothing short of blooms.

By the way, if bunches of this sort were occasionally displayed in retail places, much explanation could be avoided that perhaps would take place at a more critical time.

It has been our practice not to cut necessary. If a little protection is needed, use some hay or straw scattered lightly over the plants. Give ventilation on all favorable days and, if you can, move your plants to other quarters before it is warm enough to start the buds. A dry cellar, of course, is preferable to a moist one for storing any such stock.

USE FOR UNHEATED HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse that I am not heating this winter. There are benches in the house. Is it too late to plant pansy plants on them, and if I cover well will they be all right? Would it be satisfactory to place hyacinths under the benches, in pots? Do you think the pots would break? I have no good place outside for them. What would you advise?

H. E. R.

The pansies, if good plants outdoors, can still be planted. They should be covered with meadow hay after the bench is frozen quite hard, and left covered until March. I see no reason why they will not give you a good and profitable spring crop.

As you have no suitable outdoor place for storing hyacinths, they can be placed under the benches. Cover with ashes and later with a good thickness of meadow hay or straw. If you have a suitable cellar it would be preferable to the unheated greenhouse, but the hyacinths should do well under the benches. Tulips, narcissi and other Dutch bulbs may be similarly stored.

TODAY.

Upon John Ruskin's writing-desk
A slab of chalcedony lay,
And on it, cut in careful script,
The word "Today."

Honored of all, a wondrous man,
And held a prophet in his way,
He let "Tomorrow" bide its time,
And used "Today."

Upon the tablet of the will,
How good to write, the selfsame way,
Putting tomorrow's uses by,
The word "Today."

—Harriet Prescott Spofford.

I quote the foregoing especially for the violet grower, and yet, as I write it down, I cannot help thinking how much better much of our work every day, in all lines, would be if we only would make "Today" our motto. Many things will stand the neglect of waiting for tomorrow better than will violets, as a little delay in some needed care of them is very often much more far-reaching than it is with other plants. By this statement I am by no means advocating the neglect of other plants, but, for instance, if you see the least sign of spot, there is no time to be lost if you hope to check it, and you may not be able to do so even then, no matter how hard you try.

Outside Temperature.

From now on the temperature should be much more suitable for violets, as the last week has seen it go down to 23 degrees with us, although today—two days later—as I sit on the steamship deck, and on the shady side at that, writing, it hardly seems possible. We are having a delightful trip south and I suppose that this is the coldest weather that I shall see this fall. I often wonder how the violets do live and grow in Florida; it seems as if the summer would kill them entirely. Yet we have all three colors of the wild ones and they are beauties. I also have double ones in our yard that survive without any summer care. But this is a digression and does not help the northern grower any, although it may interest the writer. However, I think that I prefer to grow violets in the north.

Plenty of Ventilation.

If you have not heretofore tried growing violets, do not get so careful of them that you are afraid of giving them plenty of fresh, pure air, even if it is pretty cold. Remember that they will stand a good deal, and do not make the mistake of closing your ventilators and beginning to fire early. Do not be afraid to leave quite a crack on the vents at night and follow it up for some time, even after you start some fires. A stagnant, damp, moisture-laden atmosphere is very, very bad for them, and a dry air in circulation, even if almost at the freezing point, is much to be preferred. As I have before said, watch out on the watering also and do not get things all wet down before a rainy, cloudy, damp spell of weather, in which you cannot get them properly dried out as to foliage, or get the soil in a healthy, airy, breathing condition.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

ONCIDIUM FOR NAME.

I send a piece of an oncidium and shall be pleased to have you tell the name of the variety. The growth of the plant is similar to that of Oncidium ornithorynchum. P. S.

As near as I can tell from the specimen received, this is Oncidium tigrinum. W. N. CRAIG.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Importance of Ventilation.

Now that we are at the beginning of the season, when steady firing will have to be resumed, a few reminders as to the care of the houses under these conditions may not be out of place.

With a good, serviceable heating system, tight houses and good ventilation, the conditions are favorable to the growth of good stock.

During the short, cloudy days it is good economy to keep the fires going, even though the temperature could be kept at the normal by closing the ventilation, as a little heat, by encouraging circulation, keeps the atmosphere sweet and prevents a surcharge of moisture.

There are days and nights, too, when the temperature can be maintained by simply closing the ventilators, and no doubt many are tempted to this course to save a few dollars in the coal bill, but the plants will certainly suffer in health and the quality of the cut will soon deteriorate, resulting in a loss which the few dollars gained by economizing will be far from covering.

This method of treating roses is one of the most fruitful sources of trouble. The air becomes stagnant, causing the foliage to become soft. The young growth will lose that vigor and robustness so necessary to carry a well finished bud and the plant will acquire that condition of impaired vitality which will make it susceptible to the ravages of any disease by which it may be attacked, so that the only safety lies in keeping the plants in a hardy, vigorous condition by the judicious administration of air.

In order to give the plants the full benefit of free ventilation they ought to be kept well tied up, so that the air can circulate freely among the leaves. Any neglect in this matter will later result in weak and crooked stems, which will seriously detract from the value of even the best developed buds. This condition will also cause the eyes to break weak, by reason of the want of light and air, and a growth of blind wood will be encouraged, which is especially undesirable at this season.

Cleanliness Essential.

Keep the benches clear of all ripe and decaying leaves, especially in Beauty benches, as this decaying matter is just the kind of breeding spot favored by most fungous growths.

Precautions against mildew should still be kept up by keeping the pipes painted with the sulphur mixture and by an occasional powdering with the blower. Fumigating lightly once a week will keep greenfly from making headway.

Disbudding and removing lateral shoots should also be attended to at least once a week.

From now on and during the winter great care is necessary in the application of water and the use of the syringe. By economizing on water it is easier to economize on coal.

RIBES.

LACK OF VENTILATION.

We have mailed you a few roses, hoping you may help us in finding a cause and a remedy for their condition. The plants were in the best of health till about ten days ago. Before we put on a night man the temperature got as low as 48 degrees and several mornings was 50 degrees, with air on. We have done no feeding. There is only one house affected.

C. M. J.

The low temperature to which these roses have been subjected would not account for their present condition, if they had been healthy and vigorous at the time. The specimens sent show indications of having been grown in a close and moist atmosphere, and stock so grown is almost certain to suffer when root action gets sluggish and evaporation begins to decrease.

To remedy this condition, be very careful in watering; keep them rather on the dry side. Examine the soil carefully, especially where it is close to the radiating pipes. Keep on plenty of ventilation and maintain a circulation by keeping on heat. Do not feed until the plants recover. Sick plants should never be fed, no more than sick people should be.

RIBES.

MRS. POTTER PALMER ROSE.

At the Chicago flower show in 1906 the silver medal for the best new rose was awarded to a pink sport of Chatenay exhibited by the Poehlmann Bros. Co. It was the Chatenay in every respect except that it had much deeper color, and the trade liked it so well the Poehlmann Bros. Co. decided to send out stock of the variety in the spring of 1908. The name Morton Grove was given to it, but it has now been thought best to give it the name of Mrs. Potter Palmer, who is Chicago's leading society lady and who has indicated her acceptance of the honor. Under this name the rose will be one of the conspicuous features of the show next week.

ROSE MRS. JARDINE.

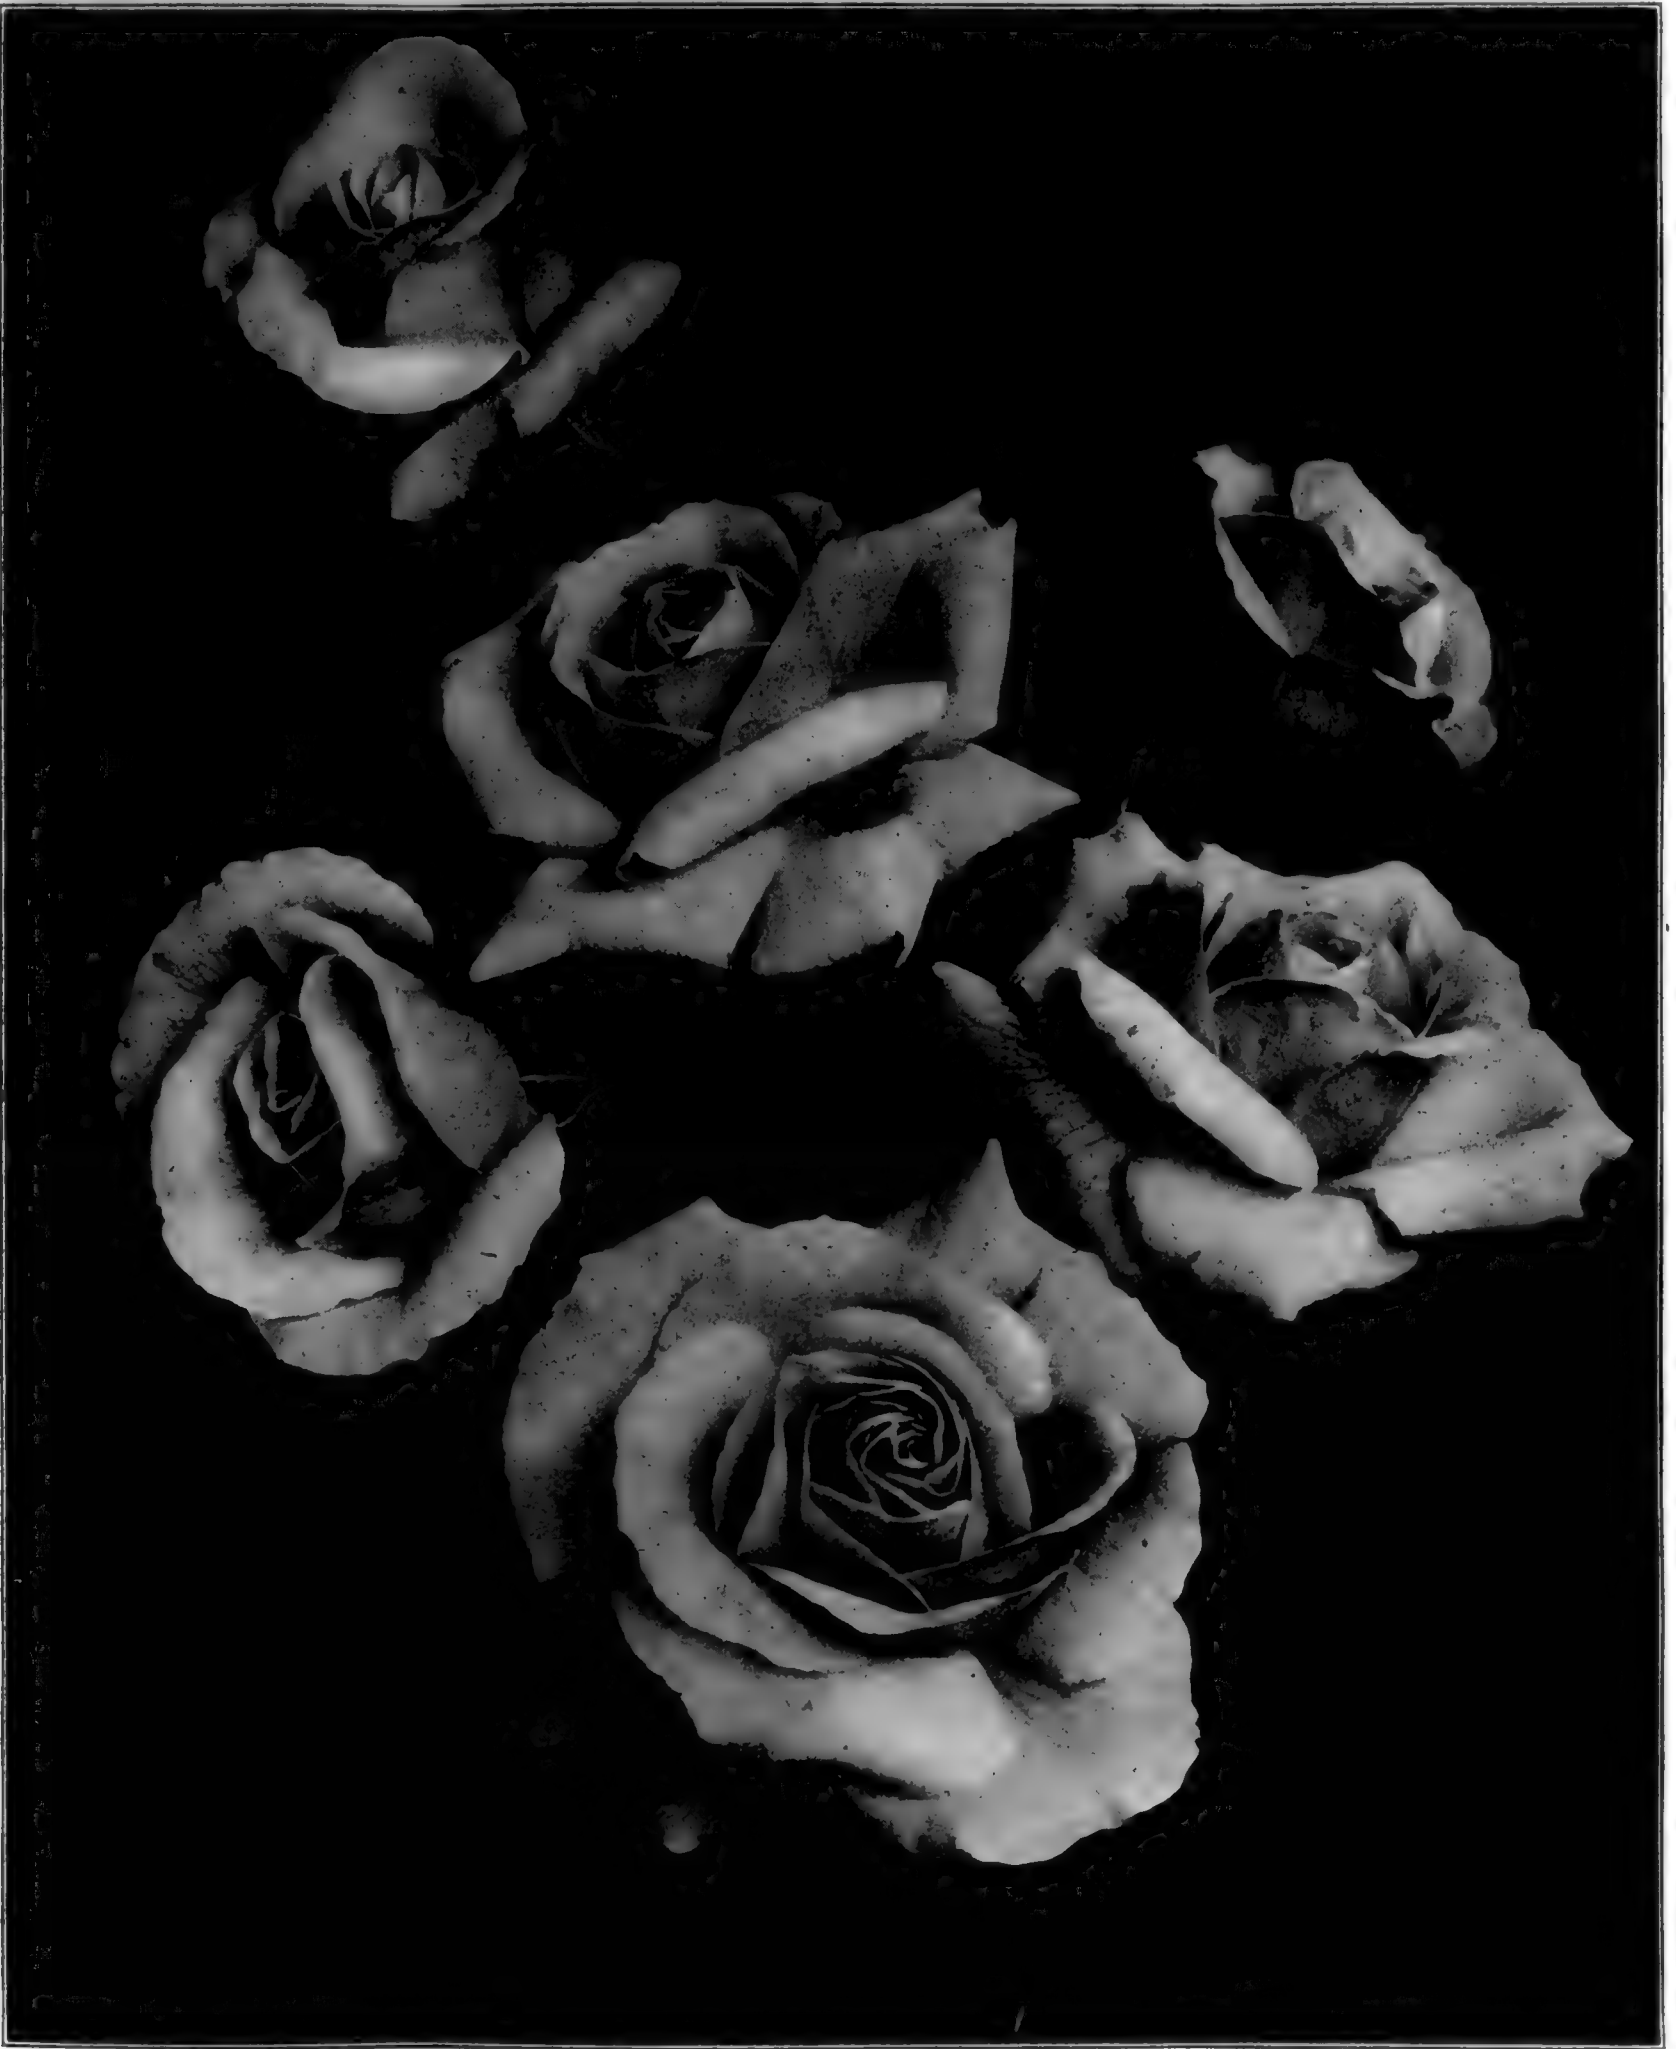

The rapidly expanding list of pink roses for forcing will be augmented next season by another of the productions of Alexander Dickson & Sons, which promises to be a fitting companion to Liberty and Killarney. Newtownards, in Ireland, has turned out in recent years as many new roses as any one spot in the world, and Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., have had the pleasure of testing many of them under American garden and greenhouse conditions. Mrs. Jardine, the present candidate, gives finer promise than anything which has thus far come to light among the many good Dickson varieties. When E. G. Hill first saw Mrs. Jardine he turned to Alexander B. Scott with the remark, "Aleck, you have a winner there." It has proved amenable to winter forcing, being a strong grower and easily handled, without special culture. The color is bright, rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink. It is fragrant and in January, when Bridesmaid and Killarney are inclined to lose their color, Mrs. Jardine gives flowers as bright as in October or March. The flowers have full petalage, so they can be used in any stage of development. It is said to flower more profusely than Bride or Maid and the blooms are produced on good stems.

It is understood that William P. Craig will distribute stock of Mrs. Jardine for Scott & Son in the spring of 1908.

SOME NEW EUROPEAN ROSES.

The autumn exhibition held by the National Rose Society of England was of special interest to searchers after novelties, by reason of the comparatively large number of new roses that were represented. The most noteworthy of the varieties shown that are not yet in commerce was the fine hybrid tea Avoca, for which A. Dickson & Son were awarded a gold medal. The blooms are of medium size and good form; the petal is large and remarkably stout and the color is rich and effective. Conway Jones, from the same exhibitor, is a hybrid perpetual of merit; the blooms are of large size and superb form and finish, and the color is bright, rich red; the variety has the additional quality of being delightfully fragrant. Mrs. Franklin Dennison is considered to be a hybrid tea, but the soft, yet effective, shade of yellow and exquisite finish suggest a close relationship to the teas.

Of a very different character to the foregoing is the tea-scented variety Lady Meriel Bathurst, which was shown by J. Jeffries & Son, Cirencester. This is essentially a rose for the garden, and the Rose Mrs. Jardine.

Gardeners' Magazine advises its readers that "those who appreciate roses that grow freely and bloom profusely from early in the summer to the close of the autumn should buy and plant Lady Meriel Bathurst." It has a vigorous habit, is profuse in blooming and the flowers are of medium size and elegant in form, and the color is a delightful combination of soft yellow, flesh color and rose.

In one of the collections exhibited by Frank Cant & Co., Braiswick, Colchester, occurred a beautiful vase of Mme. Melaine Soupert. This belongs to the hybrid tea section and was raised by Perret-Ducher and distributed in 1905. In one of the continental catalogues the color is described as sunset yellow on a carmine ground. Probably rich salmon-yellow, tinted with carmine and rose, would be a more correct description. Earlier in the season the flowers attain to a large size, and full, but whether large or small they are of great beauty. Not less remarkable for its distinctness and beauty is Bertha Kleland, a charming tea-scented variety, which was exhibited by B. R. Cant & Sons, Colchester. Introduced last year, it has given excellent promise as a garden rose, being robust in growth, free in bloom and pleasing in color. The flowers are large and semi-double. The color is salmon-pink suffused light yellow. The variety is effective in the garden and blooms from the beginning of the summer until late in the autumn. These were the best of the novelties.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

YELLOW TOUSET.

Of all the early chrysanthemums none was more universally grown this season than Clementine Touset. It is one of the finest of early sorts, of whatever color, an easy doer with all growers, and the news that there is a bright yellow sport of Touset will be welcome to all who have made money on the original variety this year. The yellow sport originated with F. D. Cramer, at Hanover, Pa. It is the Touset in every particular, size, form, foliage and stem, as well as habit of growth, differing only in color, which is about the shade of Halliday. Mr. Cramer has supplied stock of this variety to the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., for test next season. If it comes up to expectations it will be put on the market in 1909.

PACIFIC SUPREME.

Pacific Supreme is one of the season's novelties of Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich. It was exhibited at Philadelphia, October 26, when the seedling committee of the C. S. A. scored it 87 points on the commercial scale. The color is intermediate between Glory of Pacific and William Duckham. It is a delicate shade and yet sufficiently illuminated so that it may be allowed to develop without danger of the fading which injures so many pinks. The flower easily attains to six inches in diameter and the one photographed was cut October 20. The height is three and one-half feet. The foliage closely resembles Glory of Pacific, but the variety is freer in growth.

WHITE FLY ON MUMS.

I am somewhat surprised to see such frequent inquiries in regard to the white fly; not that it is a thing to be lightly considered, but from experience in following suggestions and instructions given by the REVIEW, I believe that any florist, of much or little experience, can keep his place clean.

Until recently I have always used tobacco for fumigating and my success was never satisfactory; such frequent applications kept something marked all the time.

I had estimated a number of times for sulphuric acid and cyanide of potassium, but the cost looked out of proportion to the benefit to be derived; so I sent for tobacco stems or powder, and still had a good supply of pests. This fall the white flies were so numerous that tobacco seemed a worthless waste of time and money.

I have a house 53x55 feet, four feet and a half to the plate and valley, with three ridges, all connected, and I raise a general line of plants and flowers, such as are handled in a rural district. In the first part of the winter I grow lettuce in all my spare room.

Four weeks ago my mums were black with aphides for a space of six or eight inches down the stem, and a covey of white flies met me at almost every step.

The condition warranted drastic measures. I purchased one gallon of commercial sulphuric acid for 75 cents and twenty ounces of cyanide of potassium and prepared eight jars as per formula. This quantity, I believe, is quite a little below what has been recommended.

It is now thirty days since this treatment and still I fail to find green, black or white fly, or spider, or house fly, or even a band of toads that I was harboring. Sow bugs alone infest the house and these in their turn will receive their treatment of Paris green, as per the REVIEW. W. L. L.

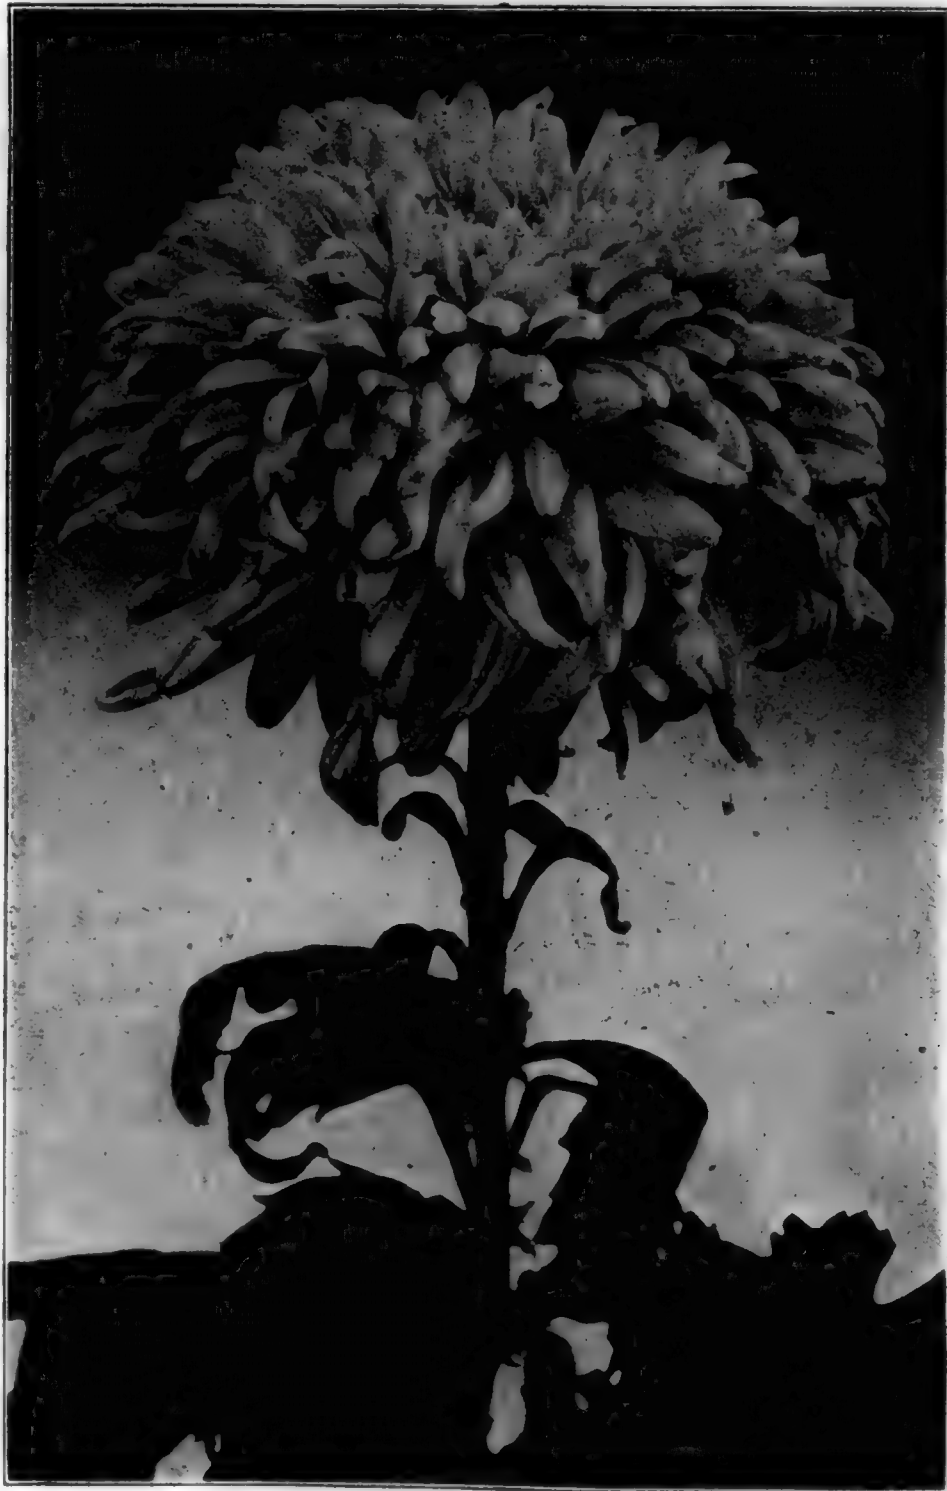

LEAF-SPOT ON MUMS.

The leaf-spot on chrysanthemums, long known to American growers, has only recently become common in England. The disease can be recognized by the presence of more or less rounded spots of varying size on the upper surface of the leaf. These spots soon turn to a dark reddish-brown, and these dark patches, which consist of diseased tissue, besides disfiguring the plant, render the leaves unable to carry on their proper functions; and the plant in consequence becomes weakened in vitality. When the fungus produces its fructification, little black dots become visible scattered over the discolored areas of the leaf.

The disease was at first observed about 1890 in Italy, in the Botanic Gardens at Pavia and elsewhere. Briosi and Cavara state: "We have for several years in succession observed this parasite in the autumn just when the chrysanthemum is about to flower. The leaves which are affected by it, besides bearing brown patches, become crumpled at the margins, and fall prematurely."

In the United States, Dr. Halsted wrote of the disease as follows, in 1891 and 1894: "A blight has been quite prevalent upon the leaves of the chrysanthemum, blotching them with brown until they wither and fall away. Moisture favors the development of these spots. Some varieties seem to be more subject to the blight than others, but probably all will take it when the conditions are most favorable and the spores are present." The same fungus was found by Prof. Beach at the Geneva Experiment Station on the foliage of greenhouse chrysanthemums. Prof. Beach writes of the disease as follows. "It first appears in small brown spots, which increase in size and number until the leaf tissue dies and the foliage drops off. In badly diseased plants nearly all the leaves wither and fall away."

Chrysanthemum Pacific Supreme.

Experiments with fungicides for this pest have been carried out at the Geneva Station, and it is recommended, after the removal and burning of the spotted leaves, to cover the remaining foliage with Bordeaux mixture. It is said that five or six applications will usually be sufficient to keep the foliage covered, especially if the soap is used. The following formula for the Bordeaux mixture is given: Dissolve two pounds of copper sulphate in water, add whitewash made of one and one-half pounds of fresh-slaked lime, and dilute to twenty-two gallons of water, then add enough soap to form a suds.

The scientists give the name Septoria chrysanthemi, or perhaps more properly, Septoria chrysanthemella. On the Continent the disease is becoming prevalent. It was recorded from greenhouses in Copenhagen in 1897, and is now known from a number of places in Italy and Germany. In October, 1904, October, 1905, and in August, 1906, it occurred in the form of an epidemic in nurseries in Berlin. Last year it was recorded from Bohemia, in greenhouses, with the following note: "The fungus is a dangerous parasite, especially in glasshouses, where it soon attacks the majority of the leaves and causes them to fall."

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Annual Business Meeting.

The annual business meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held on the first day of the exhibition, November 6, at 4 p. m., in the rooms of the American Institute, New York, and it is hoped that the members and the craft in general will avail themselves of the opportunity to be present at this meeting. A very interesting program has been prepared. William Duckham has kindly consented to read a paper on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum for exhibition purposes and C. H. Totty a paper on single varieties, which should prove interesting. The exhibition promises to be the best in the history of the society, and no doubt the great show to be held in Chicago will form the subject for an interesting talk at this meeting.

Work of the Committees.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Virginia Poehlmann, white, Bonnaffon type, exhibited by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., scored 89 points commercial scale.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Pacific Supreme, pink, Glory of Pacific type, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., scored 87 points commercial scale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—No. 90, creamy white, Japanese reflexed, exhibited by John N. May, Summit, N. J., scored 74 points commercial scale.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—No. 9, white, Japanese incurved, exhibited by John Marshall, Newport, R. I., scored 85 points commercial scale.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.—No. 66-5-06, white, Japanese, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, scored 81 points commercial scale.

ODONTOGLOSSUM GRANDE.

That magnificent autumn-flowering orchid, Odontoglossum grande, is a native of Guatemala. Its large, showy flowers, five to six inches in diameter, are yellow, with bands of rich reddish brown spots, and are produced on half drooping spikes which usually carry from three to eight flowers each. Occasionally bulbs will produce two or more spikes each. The illustration shows a plant growing in a 6-inch pan, which this season produced four spikes from a single bulb, with a total of twenty-five perfect flowers.

The baby orchid, as O. grande is commonly called, succeeds well in shallow pans in a compost of fern fiber to which is added a little fresh sphagnum. It requires less water than other odontoglossums, likes a fair amount of winter sunlight and succeeds best in a north house in summer, hung well up to the light and near the ventilators. This is one of the showiest members of the orchid family. It is of comparatively easy culture, and blooming as it does, late in September and the early part of October, when other orchids are scarce, it is specially useful. W. N. CRAIG.

THE REVIEW will send Smith's Mum Manual for 40 cents.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y.—A. E. Boyce says that the thermometer stood at 10 degrees above zero on the morning of October 21. Fall business, he says, has been satisfactory, especially in carnations and mums.

THE PRESIDENTS.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from an excellent snapshot in which the kodaker caught Frank H. Traendly, of New York, president-elect of the S. A. F., and Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, president of the S. A. F. in 1887. Mr. Traendly's friends elected him as "a hard worker and a jolly good fellow." That he also is studiously inclined is shown by the illustration, in which both of his coat pockets are full of the literature of the day.

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Early French Bulbs.

October is almost gone, and that reminds us that Thanksgiving day will be here almost before we know it. While not comparable to Christmas, Easter or Memorial day in flower sales, there is always a brisk demand for good flowers for this holiday. If you want to have some of your earliest started Paper White narcissi in season, bring them into a house with a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and they will flower in nice time. We are presuming that these are well started, as they should be if boxed when recommended. While it is quite possible to have Roman hyacinths in bloom, do not commence forcing them unless they are well started, with growths say two inches in length. If you find they have plenty of roots and not sufficient top, place them in a warm, dark case for a few days to draw them up. Be sure to examine these and any other bulbs you may have in flats or pans and, if showing the least signs of dryness, soak them well. Many bulb failures are due to too little moisture at the root in the early stages of growth.

Stevia.

That common but extremely useful plant, stevia, should be kept in a cold house; 40 degrees at night is ample. You will have no use for it until after Thanksgiving. From that time onward a succession of it will prove of great value. The pots or flats will now be getting well matted with active roots. Provide some liquid stimulant and remember that stevia can scarcely be overwatered. The dwarf variety makes a specially nice pot plant and, mixed with such brilliant flowers as poinsettias, makes a very pretty effect.

Moschosma Riparium.

Moschosma riparium is new to American growers, having been introduced this season by C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. It promises to be a useful addition to our list of winter-blooming plants. Of South African origin, the moschomas prefer cool treatment, a chrysanthemum house being better for them than one a few degrees warmer. Of easy propagation from soft cuttings, even if rooted quite late in the summer, it can be grown into fine, bushy plants if kept pinched until early in September. The flowers are eupatorium-like and white when fully expanded. The plants rather resemble some of the eupatoriums in habit. The foliage has quite a pronounced odor, pleasing to the majority. We cannot tell what value the flowers may have for cutting, but the chief merit will undoubtedly be as a Christmas pot plant.

Ferns.

With the advent of colder weather a better demand for ferns in pots will spring up. Probably you have been so busy planting bulbs, potting azaleas and doing the thousand and one other jobs incidental to a florist's life that you may have neglected these a little. Plants lifted from the benches some time ago will be getting nicely rooted in their pots and pans and will begin to require more water at the root. Do not allow them to become too crowded. Elevate some of your best plants on inverted pots or on pedestals. Good specimens will always bring more money. There is no necessity for growing these very warm; 52 to 55 degrees at night is ample for the nephrolepis varieties. Do not spray overhead, especially in the case of the heavy-frond sports, such as Elegantissima, Barrowsii and Whitmani. Cut off all decaying fronds, to make the plant as attractive as possible to prospective purchasers.

Spiraeas.

The roots of spiraea, or astilbe, as botanists prefer to call it, will arrive is still grown a good deal, but there are quite a number of vastly superior varieties, such as compacta, astilboides, Gladstone and the new pink, Queen Alexandra, which altogether outclass the old form. We have remarked before that you can grow better spiraea clumps than you can buy abroad. Try it and prove for yourself how superior they are.

Primulas.

The various primroses, such as Sinensis, obconica and the new yellow, Kewensis, will all be starting to bloom now. There will be no special call for them before Christmas, but nicely flowered plants will be in demand at that time. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, plenty of light but not too much direct sunlight, and careful watering, are now needed. The Chinese section will the more quickly resent overwatering, so, if you use the hose among them, do not water each pot indiscriminately. Better to have them a little on the dry side than the reverse. Afford weak manure water to any which may have the pots full of roots.

Look out for aphids on the lower sides of the leaves on P. obconica. If you fumigate once a week, as you should all winter, you can keep them in control. Curling leaves and a somewhat stunted growth are sure indications of the presence of the pest.

Cyclamens.

If cyclamen seeds were sown rather widely apart in flats, the little seedlings will be all right for some time yet. If, on the other hand, you sowed them thickly and have neglected to transplant them, lose no time in doing it. A good compost is made of flaky leaf-mold, loam and sand. Do not use any manure. Give the little seedlings two inches of space each way. Do not cover the tiny corm, or bulb, and afford the plants a position near the glass in a temperature of 55 degrees at night. A house with plenty of pure air will suit them to a nicety.

Frank H. Traendly. Robert Craig.

early in November. On arrival it is well to soak them in a tub of water and then store in a coldframe, or even outdoors where they can be easily lifted when needed for forcing. Let them have a good freezing before potting and wait until at least Christmas before you start any. The pots seen in bloom at the holidays are from cold storage roots and not the new crop. The old Spiraea Japonica

We note that the flower buds are now appearing thickly on some of the older plants. Those wanted for Christmas, a time when cyclamens always sell well, should be well looked after. A light house kept at not over 50 degrees at night is suitable. As the plants are or should be well rooted, afford gentle stimulants once a week and do not forget a weekly fumigation.

Coldframes.

While winter has not yet arrived, we have some sharp frosts, premonitory warnings of what we may soon expect. At this season an abundant supply of coldframe sash is a great benefit to any commercial grower. In these should now be stored such doubtfully hardy seedlings of biennials and perennials as may be growing in the field. These may be planted quite thickly. After they are frozen quite hard, cover with dry leaves. Cover with sashes, which should be well glazed, and they will need no further attention until the end of March.

Such plants as digitalis, Canterbury bells, hollyhocks, pansies and violas, myosotis, double daisies and many others can be wintered in this way. Of course, in some sections all these may keep outdoors, but in many places they cannot be depended upon. There is no need to place sashes on the frames until quite severe frosts sets in.

Bulb Planting.

The arrival of November warns us to put off bulb planting no longer and, where it has not been attended to already, the bulbs should be put in at once. Some bulbs, such as lilliums, are late in arriving. If intended for outdoor culture they are much better planted in the fall than the spring, even though it may be necessary to use a bar to loosen the earth on the surface. In planting lilies you will have better results by placing the bulbs eight to twelve inches deep, allowing such sorts as auratum and speciosum the greatest depth.

Place no covering over bulb beds on the first sign of the ground freezing. Let the soil be hard enough to drive a team over before you cover. If you put protective material on while the ground is soft, the bulbs will make growth under their warm covering, which is exactly what you do not want them to do. The time a mulching is most needed is, not in November or even December, but in February and March.

Visit the Exhibitions.

The mum season is now in full swing and several of the exhibitions have been held. The queen of autumn shows no signs of waning popularity and the shows this fall promise to be better and more largely patronized than ever. It will pay every florist to visit at least one good exhibition. No matter how good a grower he may be, he will learn many points by attending. He will see varieties shown he has not grown which it will pay him to try another year. He will be brought in contact with many of his confreres, and rubbing shoulders with them at an exhibition is the best kind of education for any man willing to learn; and the man who is unwilling to learn will soon be relegated to the rear. By all means attend the fall shows in your vicinity and take a notebook with you. Do not continue to cultivate obsolete varieties when you might just as well be growing up-to-date ones.

RULES FOR JUDGING.A Model for Club Shows.

The State Florists' Society of Indiana recently adopted a set of rules for judging exhibits at its monthly meetings that are so good that they are presented here for the information of other similar bodies:

Moschosma Riparium.*Committee of Awards.

1. The committee of awards shall consist of three members, who shall be elected by the society. One to serve until and including the annual meeting in January, 1908. One to serve until and including the annual meeting in January, 1909. One to serve until and including the annual meeting in January, 1910.

At each annual meeting the vacancy created by the expiration shall be filled by election by the society, such election to be for a term of three years.

If at any meeting of the society (flowers or plants being on exhibition) less than two members of the committee of awards be present, the presiding officer, with the approval of the meeting, shall appoint others to act temporarily. The power thus granted to expire at the close of the meeting.

Character of Exhibits.

2. All exhibits of plants or flowers striving for certificates shall be made at a regular meeting of the society or one of its authorized exhibitions and the exhibitor shall notify the secretary at least three days prior to the day of exhibition. To secure the society's certificate, it will be necessary that a growing plant accompany the cut flower exhibit in case of carnations or roses, and that carnations and roses be scored at three different meetings, these meetings to be not less than two months apart.

It shall, however, be necessary to show a growing plant at only one of these meetings.

3. Any one showing a novelty with the intention of obtaining the society's indorsement in any way the committee may recommend shall conform to the rules laid down by them for their guidance as herein stated.

4. Any one in this state not being a member of this society and making application to the secretary for the privilege to exhibit at any meeting or exhibition shall accompany such application with $1 for each meeting or exhibition he may desire to exhibit, unless he be a subscriber to the premium fund (if there be such) to at least that amount.

Awards.

5. The highest reward for flowers or plants shall be the society's silver medal, which shall be awarded to any new variety, scoring 95 points or over. First-class certificates of merit shall be awarded to any new variety scoring 85 points or over.

6. In judging any flower or plant for which there exists a national society, its scale shall be used by the judges. If no such society exists for any flower or plant on exhibition the judges may use their own discretion in judging the exhibit. On any flower or plant (except carnations or roses) the judges may make final award at any one exhibition, if they are satisfied as to its merits, but

THE PRESIDENTS.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from an excellent snapshot in which the kodaker caught Frank H. Traendly, of New York, president elect of the S. A. F., and Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, president of the S. A. F. in 1887. Mr. Traendly's friends elected him as "a hard worker and a jolly good fellow." That he also is studiously inclined is shown by the illustration, in which both of his coat pockets are full of the literature of the day.

is still grown a good deal, but there are quite a number of vastly superior varieties, such as compacta, astilboides, Gladstone and the new pink, Queen Alexandra, which altogether outclass the old form. We have remarked before that you can grow better spiraea clumps than you can buy abroad. Try it and prove for yourself how superior they are.

Primulas.

The various primroses, such as Sinensis, obconica and the new yellow, Kewensis, will all be starting to bloom now. There will be no special call for them before Christmas, but nicely flowered plants will be in demand at that time. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, plenty of light but not too much direct sunlight, and careful watering, are now needed. The Chinese section will the more quickly resent overwatering, so, if you use the hose among them, do not water each pot indiscriminately. Better to have them a little on the dry side than the reverse. Afford weak manure water to any which may have the pots full of roots.

Look out for aphids on the lower sides of the leaves on P. obconica. If you fumigate once a week, as you should all winter, you can keep them in control. Curling leaves and a somewhat stunted growth are sure indications of the presence of the pest.

Cyclamens.

If cyclamen seeds were sown rather widely apart in flats, the little seedlings will be all right for some time yet. If, on the other hand, you sowed them thickly and have neglected to transplant them, lose no time in doing it. A good compost is made of flaky leaf-mold, loam and sand. Do not use any manure. Give the little seedlings two inches of space each way. Do not cover the tiny corm, or bulb, and afford the plants a position near the glass in a temperature of 55 degrees at night. A house with plenty of pure air will suit them to a nicety.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Early French Bulbs.

October is almost gone, and that reminds us that Thanksgiving day will be here almost before we know it. While not comparable to Christmas, Easter or Memorial day in flower sales, there is always a brisk demand for good flowers for this holiday. If you want to have some of your earliest started Paper White narcissi in season, bring them into a house with a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and they will flower in nice time. We are presuming that these are well started, as they should be if boxed when recommended. While it is quite possible to have Roman hyacinths in bloom, do not commence forcing them unless they are well started, with growths say two inches in length. If you find they have plenty of roots and not sufficient top, place them in a warm, dark case for a few days to draw them up. Be sure to examine these and any other bulbs you may have in flats or pans and, if showing the least signs of dryness, soak them well. Many bulb failures are due to too little moisture at the root in the early stages of growth.

Stevia.

That common but extremely useful plant, stevia, should be kept in a cold house; 40 degrees at night is ample. You will have no use for it until after Thanksgiving. From that time onward a succession of it will prove of great value. The pots or flats will now be getting well matted with active roots. Provide some liquid stimulant and remember that stevia can scarcely be overwatered. The dwarf variety makes a specially nice pot plant and, mixed with such brilliant flowers as poinsettias, makes a very pretty effect.

Moschosma Riparium.

Moschosma riparium is new to American growers, having been introduced this season by C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. It promises to be a useful addition to our list of winter blooming plants. Of South African origin, the moschosmas prefer cool treatment, a chrysanthemum house being better for them than one a few degrees warmer. Of easy propagation from soft cuttings, even if rooted quite late in the summer, it can be grown into fine, bushy plants if kept pinched until early in September. The flowers are eupatorium-like and white when fully expanded. The plants rather resemble some of the eupatoriums in habit. The foliage has quite a pronounced odor, pleasing to the majority. We cannot tell what value the flowers may have for cutting, but the chief merit will undoubtedly be as a Christmas pot plant.

Ferns.

With the advent of colder weather a better demand for ferns in pots will spring up. Probably you have been so busy planting bulbs, potting azaleas and doing the thousand and one other jobs incidental to a florist's life that you may have neglected these a little. Plants lifted from the benches some time ago will be getting nicely rooted in their pots and pans and will begin to require more water at the root. Do not allow them to become too crowded. Elevate some of your best plants on inverted pots or on pedestals. Good specimens will always bring more money. There is no necessity for growing these very warm; 52 to 55 degrees at night is ample for the nephrolepis varieties. Do not spray overhead, especially in the case of the heavy-frond sports, such as Elegantissima, Barrowsii and Whitmani. Cut off all decaying fronds, to make the plant as attractive as possible to prospective purchasers.

Spiraeas.

The roots of spiraea, or astilbe, as botanists prefer to call it, will arrive

Frank H. Traendly. Robert Craig.

early in November. On arrival it is well to soak them in a tub of water and then store in a coldframe, or even outdoors where they can be easily lifted when needed for forcing. Let them have a good freezing before potting and wait until at least Christmas before you start any. The pots seen in bloom at the holidays are from cold storage roots and not the new crop. The old Spiraea Japonica

We note that the flower buds are now appearing thickly on some of the older plants. Those wanted for Christmas, a time when cyclamens always sell well, should be well looked after. A light house kept at not over 50 degrees at night is suitable. As the plants are or should be well rooted, afford gentle stimulants once a week and do not forget a weekly fumigation.

Coldframes.

While winter has not yet arrived, we have some sharp frosts, premonitory warnings of what we may soon expect. At this season an abundant supply of coldframe sash is a great benefit to any commercial grower. In these should now be stored such doubtfully hardy seedlings of biennials and perennials as may be growing in the field. These may be planted quite thickly. After they are frozen quite hard, cover with dry leaves. Cover with sashes, which should be well glazed, and they will need no further attention until the end of March.

Such plants as digitalis, Canterbury bells, hollyhocks, pansies and violas, myosotis, double daisies and many others can be wintered in this way. Of course, in some sections all these may keep outdoors, but in many places they cannot be depended upon. There is no need to place sashes on the frames until quite severe frost sets in.

Bulb Planting.

The arrival of November warns us to put off bulb planting no longer and, where it has not been attended to already, the bulbs should be put in at once. Some bulbs, such as lilliums, are late in arriving. If intended for outdoor culture they are much better planted in the fall than the spring, even though it may be necessary to use a bar to loosen the earth on the surface. In planting lilies you will have better results by placing the bulbs eight to twelve inches deep, allowing such sorts as auratum and speciosum the greatest depth.

Place no covering over bulb beds on the first sign of the ground freezing. Let the soil be hard enough to drive a team over before you cover. If you put protective material on while the ground is soft, the bulbs will make growth under their warm covering, which is exactly what you do not want them to do. The time a mulching is most needed is, not in November or even December, but in February and March.

Visit the Exhibitions.

The mum season is now in full swing and several of the exhibitions have been held. The queen of autumn shows no signs of waning popularity and the shows this fall promise to be better and more largely patronized than ever. It will pay every florist to visit at least one good exhibition. No matter how good a grower he may be, he will learn many points by attending. He will see varieties shown he has not grown which it will pay him to try another year. He will be brought in contact with many of his confreres, and rubbing shoulders with them at an exhibition is the best kind of education for any man willing to learn; and the man who is unwilling to learn will soon be relegated to the rear. By all means attend the fall shows in your vicinity and take a notebook with you. Do not continue to cultivate obsolete varieties when you might just as well be growing up-to-date ones.

RULES FOR JUDGING.A Model for Club Shows.

The State Florists' Society of Indiana recently adopted a set of rules for judging exhibits at its monthly meetings that are so good that they are presented here for the information of other similar bodies:

Moschosma Riparium.*Committee of Awards.

1. The committee of awards shall consist of three members, who shall be elected by the society. One to serve until and including the annual meeting in January, 1908. One to serve until and including the annual meeting in January, 1909. One to serve until and including the annual meeting in January, 1910.

At each annual meeting the vacancy created by the expiration shall be filled by election by the society, such election to be for a term of three years.

If at any meeting of the society (flowers or plants being on exhibition) less than two members of the committee of awards be present, the presiding officer, with the approval of the meeting, shall appoint others to act temporarily. The power thus granted to expire at the close of the meeting.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business in general seems to have been a little more quiet the last week than before. Still, there is little cause for complaint, as all the stock on the market cleaned up pretty well.

Chrysanthemums are arriving in large quantities. Naturally the white varieties are in the best demand. Short stock for work is plentiful. The price ranges from $4 to $25 per hundred, some exceptionally fancy varieties bringing even a still higher price. Tousey, Halliday and Amorita are the best sellers.

Beauties are in fairly good demand. Roses remain well cleaned up, with the exception of the pink varieties; these were somewhat of a glut last week. The average stock on the market is good. Prices range from 3 cents to 8 cents.

Carnations are arriving in large quantities, and very good ones at that. The fancy kinds bring 3 cents without any trouble. Lawson are still very short stem. Enchantress, Rose-pink and White Enchantress, Beacon, Nelson Fisher, White Perfection, Dorothy, Bountiful, etc., are some of the popular varieties on this market.

Green stock of all kinds is plentiful. Considerable southern smilax was disposed of last week.

Various Notes.

The writer, in company with S. S. Skidelsky, took a run out to A. J. Stahelin's greenhouses at Sandhill. Mr. Stahelin was busy glazing. Most of this place is devoted to carnations and chrysanthemums, some little bench room being given to asparagus for green. In fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas, our friend gave his plants an overdose, burning the tips of the leaves of his carnation plants. Some of the varieties seem softer than others, as they suffered much more. The carnation plants all look thrifty. Beacon showed up well and Mr. Stahelin is well pleased with it. The mums on this place look promising.

Thomas Browne's and George Browne's places were also visited. Thomas Browne has a large span of glass devoted at present to carnations and chrysanthemums. Among the former are included such kinds as Beacon, Enchantress, White and Rose-pink Enchantress, Nelson Fisher, Red Chief and Aristocrat. Mr. Browne will soon be cutting a large number of mums, among them such varieties as Golden Wedding, Balfour, Ivory, etc. Beacon carnation made about the best showing of any variety of carnation on the place; in fact, this kind is giving especially good satisfaction wherever grown. It produces strong, healthy plants and long, wiry stems early in the season. There is no doubt but what Beacon will become one of our standard varieties, like Lawson, Enchantress, etc.

George Browne is interested in some gold and silver mines in Mexico. He has just returned from a trip to Mexico City in the interests of the mining company of which he is a stockholder. Only three days were spent in Mexico, most of the time being spent in traveling, as it requires seven days to make the trip one way from Detroit. Mr. Browne's stock looks very well.

Albert Pochelon is the proud father of another bouncing baby boy. The other boy, of course, is still a baby, but he already has inclinations to follow in his father's footsteps; in fact, he follows Mr. Pochelon all over the store. This means another box of smokes at the next club meeting.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The arrivals of flowers are now too great for the market's needs and as a consequence trade is much poorer than it was. These conditions are not by any means new, and usually prevail during the last part of October and the first half of November, until the major portion of the chrysanthemum crop has been marketed. Roses are abundant and, while of good quality, do not sell at all well. Carnations go a little better, but are lower in price. Chrysanthemums rule the market and are now plentiful and sold at a wide range of prices. There are comparatively few of the big single-stemmed blooms now seen, those of more moderate size being most in demand. A few specials make $2.50 per dozen, but sizes selling at $4 to $8 per hundred are more in request.

Violets increase in supply and the sale is not yet good for these. Prices are inclined to be heavy. A few sweet peas of the new season's crop are seen. Lilies are not yet abundant. There is only a moderate call for valley and merely intermittent calls for other seasonable flowers arriving. Cattleya labiata is in good supply. These are not seen at the markets, but the wholesalers handle an increasing number. Gardenias are also seen of good quality.

In the way of pot plants, chrysanthemums are most abundant. Berried solanums, nephrolepis, Ficus pandurata, ardisias, Pandanus Veitchii and kentias are mostly in evidence. Trade is slow on these as yet, but the colder weather we are getting may stimulate it. The financial crisis just now being experienced hurts flower business seriously.

Park Street Market.

The annual banquet of the Park Street market was held Saturday evening, October 26. Addresses were made by William H. Elliott, Hugh Cameron, W. H. Knapp and others, following a first-class dinner. At the business meeting the officers were reelected and a dividend declared of $5 per share, or twenty per cent.

Various Notes.

The death of O. B. Hadwen, of Worcester, an account of whose career appears on another page, occasioned numerous expressions of regret among his numerous friends in and around Boston. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Entries are coming in satisfactorily for the chrysanthemum exhibition opening November 8 and the special prizes are sure to elicit an excellent competition. The date will suit chrysanthemum plants much better than that of a year ago.

H. M. Robinson & Co. received a large number of customers and friends October 29; at their salesrooms, 15 Province street, it being the first anniversary of their cut flower department, trade in which has grown enormously from a year ago, shipments being now received from and forwarded to all parts of New England. Refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed.

The Lenox show, October 23, attracted several visitors from this vicinity. All were delighted with the splendid exhibition put up.

The report from the various seed houses is that fall trade in bulbs has been exceptionally heavy and promises to surpass that of a year ago.

J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., of Providence, are sending in some extra good Killarney, Bride, Maid and other roses.

The flower markets and commission houses have organized bowling teams and are making an effort to revive the interest in the game here.

Peirce Bros., as usual, are handling big lots of the popular market mums at their Park street market stand.

Robert Montgomery is handling some fine Bride, Bridesmaid and other roses at the Music Hall market.

Mann Bros. are, as usual, growing bulbs heavily, their recent importations of these filling four freight cars.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Obadiah B. Hadwen.

The death of this well known horticulturist occurred at Worcester, Mass., October 24, after a brief illness. As recently as October 10 Mr. Hadwen presided at the annual meeting and banquet of the Worcester County Horticultural Society and led the grand march in the dance which followed, although 83 years of age.

Born in 1824, Obadiah Brown Hadwen early evinced a deep interest in agricultural and horticultural pursuits, being for over fifty years one of the leading farmers in Worcester county and being prominent in the milk producing business, and after his retirement from active business he was much sought after as an authority on agricultural and horticultural matters. He had a beautiful estate on the outskirts of the city of Worcester, planted with great skill and noted for its collection of fine specimen trees and shrubs, magnolias being a special feature. Mr. Hadwen was also a noted pomologist, being a large fruit grower himself and doing much to stimulate interest in this important branch of agriculture.

He had been closely identified with the Worcester County Horticultural Society, which was founded in 1842, almost from its commencement, being president for many years and at the time of his death still holding that office. There were few meetings of the society in the last sixty years which he had not attended, and he frequently lectured and took an active part in the discussions. In an address made January 4, 1906, he said, among other things: "Horticultural training tends to develop human faculties in a manner that all the forces act in harmony, in whatever direction they are pursued; when united with well directed industry, it enables a man to reach the highest degree in his calling. Great advantages pertain to early training, for youth is the period when the head and hand may easily work in harmony."

The deceased had been a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for a long term of years and had filled the highest offices in the gift of the society, including that of president, which latter he vacated five years ago. His was a familiar figure at the shows and business meetings and the society's welfare was ever in his thoughts.

Mr. Hadwen had been president of the Massachusetts Agricultural Club, the Worcester County Agricultural Society and the American Pomological Society. He had also been chairman of the executive board of the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst and president of various other organizations in Worcester. He was an active member of the Patrons of Husbandry, attending many of the state conventions and filling various responsible positions in the Worcester and state granges. Hadwen park, a beautifully wooded tract of fifty acres, was presented by him to the city of Worcester a few years ago and now forms a part of the city's park system.

Lovers of horticulture and agriculture were always welcomed to Mr. Hadwen's estate and his collections of trees and shrubs and extensive orchard were great objects of interest. Few men in Massachusetts have lived longer or more honorable lives and the esteem in which he was held was strikingly shown by the large outpouring at his funeral, which included representatives from the many societies with which he was identified, members of the Worcester city council and many other bodies. The floral souvenirs were more numerous and costly than at any recent interment in Worcester.

W. N. CRAIG.

INCARVILLEA DELAVAYI.

Among hardy herbaceous plants, Incarvillea Delavayi is one of the most striking introductions of recent years. Being a native of northern China, it has proven perfectly hardy under cover as far north as the state of Maine and in southern Canada. The roots are thick and fleshy, forming heavy, compact clumps. The large leaves, springing directly from the root-stock, are highly ornamental, resembling in form the famous acanthus. They appear rather late in season, but retain their dark green color up to the arrival of the first frosts. Incarvilleas bear their flowers on long, erect stems, well above the foliage. The single blossom, measuring about two inches in diameter, reminds us of the gloxinia. Its color is a deep rosy pink, well adapted for near and distant effects. Along the northern Atlantic coast, noteworthy in Mount Desert Island gardens, the flowers, opening the latter part of June, have shown remarkable keeping qualities. Incarvilleas, when planted together in small groups or clumps, are doubtless very desirable acquisitions in herbaceous gardens, or, in fact, in any perennial border. The present heavy demand for plants shows their increasing popularity among garden owners and plant lovers. The photograph our illustration originated from was taken in the Mount Desert Nurseries in Bar Harbor.

"PLEASE SEND THE REVIEW."

The REVIEW finds much encouragement in the receipt of letters like the following from a florist at South Framingham, Mass.:

"Please send the REVIEW to —, South Framingham, Mass., for which I enclose his dollar. The REVIEW is all right, as is shown by my advising Mr. — to take it in preference to three others."

But what interests the publisher is that the REVIEW is all right enough for a subscriber to take it upon himself to take a friend's money and mail it in, simply because he thinks the friend will profit by having the REVIEW; it must be all right, sure enough.

The REVIEW frequently receives such courtesies at the hands of its readers, for which it not only returns thanks but promises to provide an increasingly interesting paper.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The members of the committee of fifty on National Flower Show will please not overlook the meeting which is called for 2:30 p. m., November 8, at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago. The committee will be pleased to receive and consider any and all suggestions for the strengthening of the big national exhibition of 1908.

THE FARMERS' WEALTH.

There is only one thing needed to insure good business for every florist, and everyone else in this country. That one thing is money in the hands of the farmers. A banker from a country town in Illinois, visiting a Chicago florist last week, remarked, "Why, this country is richer than it ever was and business cannot be otherwise than good this winter. Our bank is full of money, and our depositors are all farmers. The prices they are getting for their grain are the best on record. I, myself, sold the corn off my farm for 60 cents a bushel. The farmers are buying automobiles and displaying other evidences of wealth. One man in our neighborhood felt so rich after marketing his crop that he bought a carload of automobiles and presented one to each of his ten sons."

The government at Washington has a big force of statisticians constantly at work figuring on the country's crops and their value. The figures are so wonderful as to be almost beyond comprehension. The table below shows the government's estimate of the quantity of this year's crops, compared with last year's, and the value of the crops of 1906 and 1907 on the farm. It shows this year's value to be $324,000,000 greater than last year.

The following table shows the government's October estimates of this year's yields of corn, wheat and oats:

	Estimated yield, 1907.	Yield, 1906.
Corn	2,500,000,000	2,963,000,000
Wheat	825,587,000	735,000,000
Oats	741,520,000	931,000,000

The approximate farm value of crops is summarized as follows:

	Farm-value, 1907.	1906.
Corn	$1,375,000,000	$1,185,000,000
Wheat	531,000,000	519,000,000
Oats	333,000,000	300,000,000
Other products	1,717,000,000	1,628,000,000
Total value	$3,956,000,000	$3,632,000,000
Increase	324,000,000

DON'T LOSE IT.

You may have a little surplus stock in some line—not much, perhaps, but enough to cut quite a hole in the profit made on the whole lot if this little surplus is lost. But it isn't necessary to lose it. Nearly always there is someone, somewhere, who needs just that little batch of plants. You can reach that someone, everywhere, through a classified advertisement in the REVIEW, at a cost of 10 cents a line. Frequently a 30-cent advertisement will sell $30, $60 or more of stock, depending on its seasonableness and abundance. Everyone reads the REVIEW's classified ads. Don't let the little surplus go to waste.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is the general report that the demand slackened to a considerable extent last week but that various conditions combined to make a decidedly active market beginning October 28. As usual, the growers cut lightly Sunday, so that Monday's receipts were lighter than in the preceding days. A change to cold, cloudy weather also had its effect on the cuts of the following days. Local demand being fair, shipping up to its usual standard, and the All Saints' day demand from the south heavier than ever, served to create a strong pressure upon the available supply. Monday is regularly crowding Friday for first place as the heaviest shipping day in this market. This week Monday's demand was strengthened by a number of orders for chrysanthemums for New Orleans. Tuesday the bulk of the All Saints' day shipments went out and the market was cleaned. Wednesday there were further heavy shipments for the south for All Souls' day and it made three days of especially heavy shipping.

The pressure of chrysanthemums is not quite so strong as a week ago. Probably the reason is that the growers have learned to refrain from crowding a weak market and are not cutting all that they might if the demand were stronger. All the good mid-season sorts are now to be had in quantity and the late varieties are coming on. The rose growers congratulate themselves that the chrysanthemums will be out of the way earlier this year than usual. Prices were decidedly weak last week, but have been quite satisfactory for the first three days of the present period.

There are no special supplies of Beauties, but enough to satisfy the demand. Richmond is in fine form with nearly all growers, stems up to three feet long being cut. Bride and Maid also have improved materially. The other varieties are in less active demand but cleaning out well.

The prices on carnations weakened last week, but Monday inaugurated another period of stiffening rates. The supply does not increase rapidly, but the quality is excellent. Violets are selling better than at any time this season, but the supply is so large that prices are held down. Quality is fine. Those growers who are cutting Easter lilies find them cleaning out well. Valley is abundant but in good demand.

There are all sorts of green goods, except bronze galax, which brings $2 per thousand.

Retailers' Premiums.

Since publishing the final premium list the executive committee of the Horticultural Society has decided to offer $750 in cash and one silver medal for the best booth by a retail florist, to be main-

Poehlmann's Plans.

After building practically a million feet of ridge and furrow houses the Poehlmann Bros. Co. will next year erect a big addition of detached structures.

August Poehlmann states that he believes ridge and furrow houses, all things considered, are the best for general purposes, but that the firm will for the present build no more Beauty houses other than detached structures. Plans are still subject to change, so far as the size of the addition goes, but the present intention is to put up ten or possibly twelve detached houses, each 40x350. They will be three-quarter-span to the south, eight feet to the south plate, ten feet to the north plate and nineteen feet to the ridge. The houses will stand fifteen feet apart.

Part of these houses will be erected at each of the company's two plants and in addition several ridge and furrow houses will be added to each range, so that the season's addition will be considerably the largest the company ever has built.

A contract has been made with Freeman & Sons Co., Racine, Wis., for three return tube boilers 72x18, of 150 horse-power each, for early delivery, and three more similar boilers will be put in next summer.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. also has let contracts for the installation of a cold storage plant at Morton Grove, the apparatus to cost about $8,500, exclusive of the cost of the buildings. Not only are two large cooling rooms for cut stock to be provided, but rooms are to be piped for the cold storage of valley pips, lily bulbs and other stock now stored in public warehouses. The Wolf ice machine is to be used.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has decided to give the name of Mrs. Potter Palmer to its rose heretofore known as Morton Grove, the pink sport of Chatenay. October 28 Mrs. Palmer signified her acceptance of the honor.

Wienhoeber's Opening.

For some months the E. Wienhoeber Co. has been at work in the rooms above the store on Elm street, which have gained celebrity for their occupancy for many years by Mansfield, the actor. The space is now to be used for demonstrating rooms to show customers just how floral work will look in use. The firm's annual engagement book was sent out this week and contained an invitation to an opening of the demonstrating rooms October 30 and 31. The attendance of the elite on Wednesday was large.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. had the decorations October 30 for the wedding of Marjorie Burns and Sidney C. Love, house and church, one of the most elaborate of the season.

Flower Show Preparations.

Manager George Asmus is enthusiastic over the prospects for the best show

Chicago ever has seen, and the press agent, James Burdett, is sanguine as to the crowds which will respond to the excellent notices the papers already are giving. The show opens next week, Wednesday, November 6, and carries over until the following Tuesday. This is an innovation and the result will be watched with much interest. Sunday is sure to be a big day, but opinion differs as to whether the show has been prolonged by running into the next week or whether interest will wane after Sunday. Manager Asmus has laid plans for special features for Monday and Tuesday to keep the crowd coming.

The final premium list was issued October 28 and may be had by addressing E. A. Kanst, assistant secretary, 5100 Cottage Grove avenue.

There will be a large attendance of florists from outside the city and many business houses, as well as the Florists' Club, are making preparations to entertain them.

Excursion to Joliet.

A. T. Pyfer, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., has issued an invitation to all florists visiting the Chicago flower show to participate in an excursion to Joliet November 9. A special car will be attached to the Rock Island train leaving at 11:45 a. m. Tickets will be furnished on application at the manager's office at the show, or by Mr. Pyfer at the train.

Employees' Ball.

As the REVIEW goes to press, the wholesalers' employees are enjoying their second annual reception and ball at Columbia hall. The attendance is greater than a year ago and the affair a most gratifying success. Fitzgerald's orchestra is on hand and the decorations show that many wholesalers' employees had their early training in retail establishments. The committee in charge consists of John Enders, Charles Erne, and H. W. Rodgers.

Various Notes.

Secretary Philip Schupp has sent out a call for a special meeting of the Florists' Club at Handel hall October 31, to arrange final details for show week.

The telegraph companies have reopened their branch offices in the wholesale cut flower district, but the service is yet far from what it should be.

George Walther, on Sixty-third street, says business is all that he could expect at this season.

J. A. Budlong cut the first Timothy Eaton chrysanthemums October 28. They were as big as ever.

Charles Risch is the latest addition to the staff of Weiland & Risch. He is from New York and a cousin of John P. Risch.

Peter Reinberg is cutting about the best Richmond roses in the history of the establishment; stock that will be hard to beat at the show next week.

N. J. Wietor says that the New Orleans demand this season was the heaviest the house of Wietor Bros. ever has experienced. On Tuesday each of two orders called for 500 chrysanthemums, and 600 of the lot were at 25 cents each. Their Appleton are gone and Bonnafon is sent for yellow.

C. W. McKellar is handling large quantities of green goods and has among other things cut fronds of Adiantum Farleyense that bring what look like high prices to those who use cuneatum.

George Reinberg is having better success with chrysanthemums than any previous year. Just now he is cutting more Bonnafon than any other sort and has finely finished stock.

The A. L. Randall Co. is handling Adiantum Croweanum from Peter Crowe, Utica, N. Y. A bunch of it is as large as half a dozen bunches of cuneatum.

E. Fransen, manager of the selling end for Scheiden & Schoos, says their red seedling carnation is better this year than last and that it brings more money than any other red on the place. They have no present thought of sending it out to the trade.

October 25 George Baer, of Toledo, began his annual shipments of Bonnafon to the Kennicott Bros. Co., showing that mums at Toledo also are earlier than usual, the same as in this vicinity.

Bassett & Washburn have concluded that they will disseminate their red carnation, Orland P. Bassett, originally known as No. 20, during the approaching season. The flowers thus far cut are excellent and the stems especially good. John Mangel and one out-of-town customer have had all the flowers so far at 4 cents each.

A. I. Simmons is making use of his 1905 flower show medal for advertising. The Englewood Times recently gave him a good send-off on it.

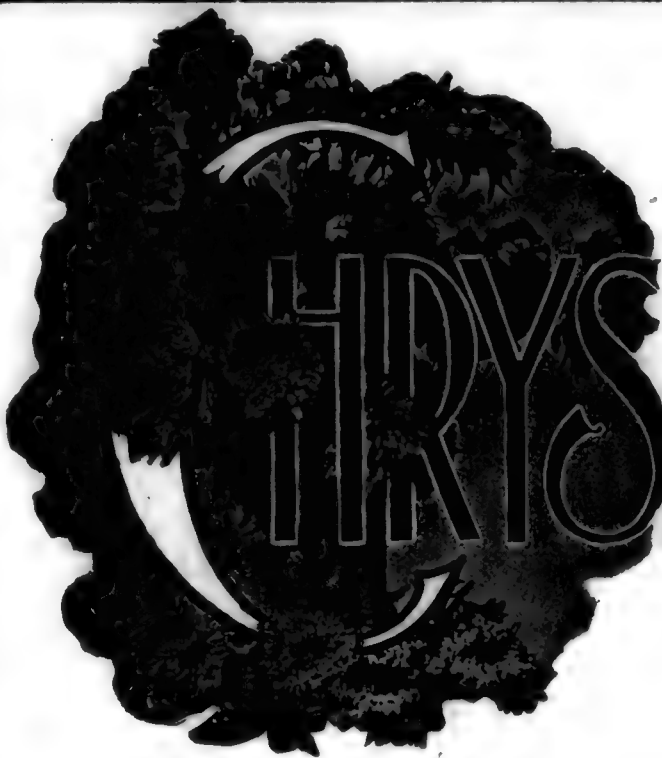

At E. H. Hunt's, C. M. Dickinson says the supply department already is feeling the approach of the holidays, the demand being stronger than ever at this season.

Frederick Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, is entertaining his father and his sister, Miss Ione Sperry, from Conneaut, O. Mrs. Sperry recently returned from Colorado.

The trade thinks this year's flower show poster the best up to date.

E. E. Pieser took advantage of last week's flurry in Wall street to become a partner of Rockefeller in the Standard Oil Co.

E. C. Amling says he thinks the market for mums quite a little weaker this year than last, although he is getting for his growers as much per square foot of space as last year, which he says is largely due to the fact that the stock is the best ever. But Mr. Amling says he can trace back for years a steady annual decline in the average prices of any given grade of mums. He thinks it is due entirely to increased production and not to any decrease in popularity of the flower.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is doing a nice business with well colored oak foliage, which the retailers like, not only for decorations but to put up with chrysanthemums in cut flower work.

The burial of James Reddick, the politician, made a big call for funeral work Monday and Tuesday.

John Evert is marketing a big cut of mums at his father's stand at the Flower Growers' market.

Among the week's visitors were J. W. Ludwig and daughter, Allegheny, Pa., who were guests of Victor Bergman, of E. Wienhoeber's staff; F. W. Ritter, Dayton, O.

The Market.

Business continues much as last reported. The demand is good and the total sales average well up with last year, which is saying a good deal. I do not believe that as a whole the mums are averaging as well, though last year was an exceptional one and I think everyone ought to be satisfied as it is. A few large decorations helped to move the stock. Funeral work was better. Society does not seem to have awakened as yet. Only now and then is there anything of note, so that the florists are making a rather poor haul in that respect. It is to be hoped that these conditions will not last much longer.

Mums are coming in large quantities and the mid-season varieties are with us. It is a pleasure to see some of our old standby varieties come in, as the trade knows their qualities and buys them without question. Many of the newer sorts are unknown and still more of them will not stand up with the old-time, tried sorts. It is hard to find a better all-round yellow than Bonaffon or a better medium white than little Ivory. They, together with some others of the old varieties, are the surest sellers in the business.

One good thing is that roses are beginning to get off crop. The last few weeks they have been selling poorly and the supply has been heavy, but with the supply growing less every day we can soon look for better things from them. Beauties are not very plentiful, but the demand for them is not so strong now and we have plenty to go around.

Carnations continue scarce, and from the outlook it will be some time till there is really a good supply of them. At present it is just as well that they are scarce, for with the mum in first place there would not be so much demand for them. As it is, they will most probably be in good crop when most wanted. Violets are just about equal to the demand. Valley is selling very well. Other lilies are in good demand, with a fair supply.

Small bunched white mums find a ready market for funeral work; in fact, all funeral work flowers sell well. Green goods are in good supply and selling well.

Various Notes.

D. Rusconi is now nicely fixed up in his new location at 128 West Sixth street. He has gone into the retail cut flower business in conjunction with his wholesale and retail bulb and plant business, and it is now rumored that he will do a wholesale cut flower business as well. Mr. Rusconi has always done a good business in this locality and is well known and liked by the trade in general.

George & Allan report that they will not force quite so many bulbs this year as last, but still the amount will be enormous. They have been making a specialty of bulb forcing for many years and their product is known for its high quality all over this section of the country.

Ben George has been suffering with a very heavy cold for a long time. On several occasions he has been obliged to stop work for a day or two. The cold was one of those summer kinds which are so hard to lose. At last reports he was getting better.

A. Sunderbruch's Sons report business as very good, on an average, this fall. This firm is one of the most successful in this city, and if they report that

The last week's trade among the local florists was not as good as expected. Interest centered in the international balloon races and our trade suffered. Society did little entertaining and transient trade downtown fell off greatly. Now that the fall festivities have ended, business in the cut flower line will become more steady; at least, we expect it to be. The bulk of work done was for funerals and a few small weddings. Some of the uptown florists have booked quite a number of good wedding orders for the first part of next month, which they say will require a lot of first-class stock and decorative plants.

The wholesale market is stocked up with almost anything the store man wants and there seems to be plenty of it. The wholesalers report quite a good shipping trade of late, which helped them to use up some of their surplus stock.

Chrysanthemums are at their height now and the demand for white and yellow is good, with some extra fancy stock coming in. Roses are in plenty, but the demand is slow and prices are away down in all grades and will remain this way until mums are over.

Carnations are not yet what they should be, but the demand seems quite good in all colors and grades. Enchantress and white have the call, with the top price at 3 cents.

- There is plenty of good valley in the market and violets are becoming better almost every day. Colder weather will bring them on edge. The recent frosts have killed all outdoor stock. Everything in greens is plentiful with all the wholesalers.

due entirely to increased production and not to any decrease in popularity of the flower.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is doing a nice business with well colored oak foliage, which the retailers like, not only for decorations but to put up with chrysanthemums in cut flower work.

The burial of James Reddick, the politician, made a big call for funeral work Monday and Tuesday.

John Evert is marketing a big cut of mums at his father's stand at the Flower Growers' market.

Among the week's visitors were J. W. Ludwig and daughter, Allegheny, Pa., who were guests of Victor Bergman, of E. Wienhoeber's staff; F. W. Ritter, Dayton, O.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business continues much as last reported. The demand is good and the total sales average well up with last year, which is saying a good deal. I do not believe that as a whole the mums are averaging as well, though last year was an exceptional one and I think everyone ought to be satisfied as it is. A few large decorations helped to move the stock. Funeral work was better. Society does not seem to have awakened as yet. Only now and then is there anything of note, so that the florists are making a rather poor haul in that respect. It is to be hoped that these conditions will not last much longer.

Mums are coming in large quantities and the mid-season varieties are with us. It is a pleasure to see some of our old standby varieties come in, as the trade knows their qualities and buys them without question. Many of the newer sorts are unknown and still more of them will not stand up with the old-time, tried sorts. It is hard to find a better all-round yellow than Bonaffon or a better medium white than little Ivory. They, together with some others of the old varieties, are the surest sellers in the business.

One good thing is that roses are be-the outlook it will be some time till there is really a good supply of them. At present it is just as well that they are scarce, for with the mum in first place there would not be so much demand for them. As it is, they will most probably be in good crop when most wanted. Violets are just about equal to the demand. Valley is selling very well. Other lilies are in good demand, with a fair supply.

Small bunched white mums find a ready market for funeral work; in fact, all funeral work flowers sell well. Green goods are in good supply and selling well.

Various Notes.

D. Rusconi is now nicely fixed up in his new location at 128 West Sixth street. He has gone into the retail cut flower business in conjunction with his wholesale and retail bulb and plant business, and it is now rumored that he will do a wholesale cut flower business as well. Mr. Rusconi has always done a good business in this locality and is well known and liked by the trade in general.

George & Allan report that they will not force quite so many bulbs this year as last, but still the amount will be enormous. They have been making a specialty of bulb forcing for many years and their product is known for its high quality all over this section of the country.

Ben George has been suffering with a very heavy cold for a long time. On several occasions he has been obliged to stop work for a day or two. The cold was one of those summer kinds which are so hard to lose. At last reports he was getting better.

A. Sunderbruch's Sons report business as very good, on an average, this fall. This firm is one of the most successful in this city, and if they report that paid. Mr. Brix is making great preparations for his flower show, which takes place November 7 to 9 in the Y. M. C. A. building, Nineteenth street and St. Louis avenue, to which the public will be invited free. The members of the Florists' Club have accepted an invitation to visit the show in a body on Friday, November 8, which will be known as florists' day. On this day Mr. Brix has some surprises in store for the trade.

Jules Bourdet, at South Vandeventer avenue, has the finest lot of cyclamen plants seen for many days. Mr. Bourdet is also cutting extra fine yellow and white chrysanthemum blooms, which are consigned to W. C. Smith & Co.

The Riessen Floral Co. decorated several swell dinners at the downtown hotels, given in honor of visiting balloonists last week.

H. Baer, of Peoria, and Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., are sending in to this market a fine quality of carnation blooms in several varieties. Among them Enchantress is supreme. This stock is handled by C. A. Kuehn.

J. F. Windt, on Bayard avenue, has his large show house filled with extra fine chrysanthemum plants in full bloom. Mr. Windt had two large wedding decorations last week and reports the business fairly on for the season.

C. Schlueter, at Fourteenth street and St. Louis avenue, reports an extra good demand for plants of all kinds. His show house, adjoining his store, shows a fine selection. Mr. Healy, the manager, says funeral work was abundant last week.

George Angermueller, who is handling Heller Bros.' consignment to this market, is receiving a lot of extra long Beauties and other good roses, as well as good chrysanthemums.

James Young, president of the C.

Young & Sons Co., reports that the firm is doing a large trade in bulbs this fall, both local and shipping. The cut flower department has been busy so far this season with decorations and funeral work.

William Winter, of Kirkwood, and A. Jablonsky, of Central, are consigning to Henry Berning extra good quality of stock in carnations and roses. The demand for these is suffering a little, owing to the demand for chrysanthemums.

Robert J. Windler and Conrad Bergsterman, on South Grand avenue, report a nice season's business in cut flower work and decorations. Pretty window decorations of mums are seen here daily.

The Bentzen Floral Co., Mr. Huettmann, the Mullanphy Floral Co. and John Quinn, florists along North Grand avenue, are having a good run of business in funeral work, decorations and blooming plants. These places also have attractive window displays.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society is making great preparations for its fall flower show, which takes place November 12 to 15, in the United Railway Co.'s new hall, at Grand and Park avenues. The executive committee holds meetings weekly now and a fine exhibition is looked for. The executive committee is composed of men who are known as workers and will leave nothing undone to make the show a success. The feature of the show will again be the Henry Shaw prizes. These, with the local and outside entries, should make a show which should be a credit to the young society.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was the most strenuous ever known in the metropolis. The upheaval in financial circles has been the one subject of conversation and has affected all business interests. It goes without saying that the influence on metropolitan floriculture was disastrous. Strange to say, ten miles outside of the city there has been no excitement, no loss, no lessening of enterprise and faith in the future, and, apart from New York, all is good cheer, and hope, and optimism. So will it be here when the clouds have flown and common-sense rules and public confidence is reestablished.

Naturally, with this nervous and unstable condition comes the enforced reduction in the retail florists' trade, a result invariable when economy is forced upon the public. But underlying all the disturbed equanimity of business men, remain the foundations of the nation's prosperity, and before Thanksgiving day arrives we shall all be realizing the fact that there is much remaining to be thankful for and that all is well.

Beauties are abundant and, like every other cut flower, lower in price and likely to be as long as the chrysanthemum flood pours in. The receipts of the latter are enormous and the variety and quality have never been excelled.

All prices have fallen, as usual when the mum is king. It is the inevitable rule for these weeks before the turkey holiday. Why should this year prove an exception? Memory and experience make one patient when the past is considered and we realize that what has been will be again.

Carnations grow daily in size and stem and variety, but prices are lower than a week ago. Violets hold their own, when they are perfect. A lot of inferior stock comes in and gets what it deserves. But good violets begin to be appreciated once more and the tendency of values is upwards. Of other cut flowers, including valley, the orchid and gardenia, the November weddings and the society events, the horse show, the auto shows and the dinners in honor of duchesses and princes, will hold these steady, whatever betides. The crop of millionaires is large and the few who have lost their tail feathers in the slump will soon be forgotten. The coming season will be brilliant in floral display and after Thanksgiving and election are past, and financial waters are no longer tempestuous, we will hear no more of hard times and bad business and will look on the bright side of things again.

Thanksgiving Prospect.

Ford Bros. gave me their list of mum arrivals October 28 and they included Halliday, Tousey, Appleton, Alice Byron, Coombes, Ivory, Bonaffon, Robinson and Balfour. Every wholesale window is resplendent. This year has never been equaled in quantity and superb quality of the stock shipped to the New York market. The prospect for a Thanksgiving shipping trade was never brighter, for out-of-town retailers close to New York are doing the biggest business on record. If the volume of sales in the city is lessened by prevailing conditions, it must be recognized that business, in general, in the cities of the state and Jersey and New England give no evidence of lessened enterprise and believe in a continuation of the era of prosperity.

Various Notes.

Many of the retailers had their money in the banks that closed their doors last week. The wholesale contingent was more fortunate. One or two had deposits with the Knickerbocker or the Lincoln, but the majority will suffer no inconvenience. In due time all the institutions in New York and Brooklyn, it is believed, will pay dollar for dollar.

The retail windows, with their oak foliage, prize mums, orchids and new creations in vases and baskets, are a dream. It would be an endless task to specify the artists who have realized their opportunities and made these window decorations worthy of the city.

Arthur Herrington was in town October 28, preparing for the Madison exhibition, which he says will pass all its predecessors. This will be Thursday and Friday. At Red Bank, on Wednesday and Thursday, the Monmouth County Horticultural Society will celebrate.

Next week, November 6 to 8, we have exhibitions at Tarrytown and Glen Cove, and on the same days, November 6 to 8, the Chrysanthemum Society of America will have its annual show at the American Institute in this city, 19 to 21 West Forty-fourth street, unfortunately so cramped for room that to do itself justice is out of the question. A grand exhibit, however, is assured and Pres. Totty and all the expert mum growers in and around us will display their novelties to the limit of the room afforded.

The establishment of a protective association by the wholesale florists is now assured. Preliminary meetings have been largely attended, and those not present are quite certain to join their brethren in the scheme. Every wholesaler has evinced a practical willingness to bind himself to the fulfillment of the obligations. The prospects for a union of the Plant Growers' Association with this organization are also encouraging. With the two interests acting in common, and loyal to each other, there can be no question of the benefits accruing to all concerned. It will inaugurate a new era in credit giving, similar to that so effective in the fruit markets, with clearing house methods that will soon eliminate the men who do not pay their bills and place the retail business on such a basis that benefit must come to all. The infamy of dishonest methods and inexcusably long credits will cease, and the men who deserve to succeed will no longer be forced to compete with the class who pay only when they have to and, when opportunity and inclination join hands, do not pay at all. Wholesalers pay their growers every week. It is a poor rule that does not work both ways.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions seem just a trifle disappointing. There is business, but not quite so much as was confidently predicted when the first frost had destroyed many of the outdoor flowers. Considering the enormous quantity of chrysanthemums coming into the market, and the fact that other flowers are coming in freely, business is fully up to the standard of previous years, excepting only in comparison with the wonderful strides made last October, when early frosts and a scarcity of indoor flowers kept the early chrysanthemums on the run for the entire month. The demand for chrysanthemums appears to be strongest for the medium grades of white. Fancies are not so easily disposed of, while the common stock is unsatisfactory. The midseason varieties are now at their best. Col. Appleton, Major Bonnaffon and Florence Harris are the leading yellows. Mrs. Henry Robinson, White Balsley, Alice Byron and Ivory lead the whites. Harry Balsley, William Duckham and Pink Ivory are the best pinks.

Violets have improved to a degree that warrants the listing of singles in two grades, the fancies being superb, while the ordinary stock is excellent when not compared with the others. Cattleyas are a trifle less plentiful. There have never been so many in this market before. The orchid list is strengthened by the arrival of Vanda cærulea. Mignonette has made its appearance. Adiantum Croweanum is meeting with ready sale. Smilax has fallen off a little as compared with a week ago, when it rose unexpectedly, selling above listed quotations. The quality of valley in this market has created a steady demand, which is well maintained over a wide stretch of territory.

Carnations show improvement. The supply has fallen off a little and the demand is excellent, so that prices rule firmer. Beauties are fully up to their standard. Richmonds are increasing in numbers. The quality is now good. Brides are selling better than Bridesmaids. Killarney is becoming a factor. Kaiserin in the fancy grade is unequaled among the smaller roses for size of flower and length of stem. Boxwood sprays have made their appearance.

Alfred Burton's.

When the Flower Market first became prominent as a competitor in the business of this city it was a common thing for the anti-market people to say that "without Alfred Burton the market would not amount to much." Be that as it may, while the Flower Market had many other consignors as well as stall-holders, Alfred Burton was a prominent factor, indeed, in their daily business. Every market employee, from Dick to Daddy and Miss Miles to Miss Lathrop, felt a personal pride in securing the best possible returns for Mr. Burton. Fortunately, it also so happened that Mr. Burton had Liberties of a quality which at that time was most rare, to say nothing of the Beauties of the true Burton brand. The result I can give you in Mr. Burton's own words: "I had a good thing of it that year."

Alfred Burton has his entire place planted with Beauties and Liberties, except for an odd hundred plants of the western rose, Miss Kate Moulton. His plants are all in solid beds except the house added last summer, where the Beauties have been tried in benches with cement bed foundations by way of the anchor to leeward. The points that most impress the visitor at Mr. Burton's place are the ease by which any point may be reached, the houses being all open between; the extreme lightness of the structure, its strength, and probable durability. One is also impressed with the general vigor of the stock, and what may be termed the field methods of culture, I suppose due to coddling and excessive zeal in cropping. An effort is evidently made to secure roses when they are desired, but the crops are harvested at every season of the year and contribute to the increased demand for choice red roses at all times. Mr. Burton's stock of flowers attracts attention daily with the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Dahlias at Drees's.

The gems of the dahlia family this year are the new Holland peony-flowered varieties. These varieties may be best described as improved singles of the Twentieth Century type. They are in reality semi-double, having two rows of petals, of enormous size and exquisitely colored. George A. Strohlein, who secured the stock of this type of dahlias for his company, describes his experience entertainingly. Mr. Strohlein said that while on an azalea trip on the Continent he heard of this wonderful dahlia and called on the originator. The place proved so out-of-the-way that Mr. Strohlein had great difficulty in finding it and arrived about 9 o'clock in the evening. The originator at once conducted him to the garden, where, with the aid of a lantern, they picked a few of the flowers. Mr. Strohlein took these to his hotel and was astonished at their size and beauty. When he inquired the price of the entire stock the figure was so high as to remove it from the realms of business. Arrangements were finally made, however, for a portion of the stock. Although the flowers have not yet attained the size in this country that they have reached in Holland, they are a distinct improvement on anything in the market today.

The leading varieties of this class are: Queen Wilhelmina, pure white; Queen Emma, lavender pink overlaid with golden yellow, very large; Glory of Baarn, soft rose; Paul Kruger, carmine suffused and tipped with white; Duke Henry, carmine red; Germania, strawberry red, fluffy, artistic flowers.

There are 317 new varieties of dahlias on trial; some of them have already proven their worth. Souv. de Gustave Douzon, a new French variety, seems to be of unusual merit for cut flowers. It belongs in the decorative class; it is of unusual size; the flowers are of bright scarlet and can be cut with long stems. Also in this class is Colosse, red suffused with carmine, of immense size; a very full double flower.

Following are a few of the many excellent varieties which Mr. Clark has kindly picked out:

Cactus—Country Girl, golden yellow suffused with bronze red; Havel, nymphæa-form, fiery salmon, very free; Prince of Yellows, clear yellow, long stems, free blooms, good cut flower variety; Rohland von Berlin, cinnabar scarlet, large flowers of fine form; Rosy Morn, pink, lighter center to tips, a very pretty variety; Aurora, rose, shading to white tips, pale yellow center, a very delicate and beautiful combination of colors; Pink Pearl, rose-pink, tipped white, a beautiful flower; Frau Hermine Marx, delicate silvery rose, a very full double flower, desirable as a cut flower variety; Lavinia, pure white, very double flowers; W. H. Sillem, intense crimson, very large; Godelinde, clear yellow; Horn of Plenty, carmine, shaded plum; Else, rosy white, tipped yellow center, very pretty; Amos Perry, scarlet, long petals, very fine; Keyne's White, pure white, fine.

Collarette—Maurice Rivoire, rich carmine, pure white florets of large size; Gazelle, purple, yellow florets, large flowers; Exposition de Lyon, crimson, large white florets, very free bloomer.

Single—Frau Van der Zyphe, white, each petal edged with scarlet, a large, fancy flower; Ami Barrilet, dark foliage, scarlet flowers; Anemone, large white, fine; Black Bird, maroon, very free.

Pompon—Ganymede, clear amber; San Toy, white, tipped rose; Cheerfulness, golden yellow, carmine tips; Snowlad, white.

Decorative—Orange King, orange, very fine; F. L. Bassett, glowing magenta purple, very free; Mrs. Winters, white, fine flower; Mme. Van den Dael, pink and white, very fine, one of the best cut flower varieties.

The dahlias, both at Locust Farm and at Riverton, are in splendid condition, having made remarkable growth during their three months in the field; the tubers are large and well developed. Mr. Clark believes that the tuber is the proper medium for the dissemination of the dahlia, as plants grown from roots are far more satisfactory than those grown from cuttings. The method of housing these dahlias has been so systematized as to render mixing, even of so large a number of varieties, almost an impossibility to workmen whose minds are on their work.

The First Cabinet Meeting.

The first cabinet meeting under the new administration was held in the Florists' Club's room October 25. The secretary of the treasury was unavoidably detained by press of business, while the new secretary of horticulture was out of the city. Those present were the vice-president, the secretary of state, the secretary of the interior, the chief of the bureau of registration, the commissioner of publication, and the leader of the opposition. Why the president had asked the leader troubled the street greatly. Opinions differed, some believing that his presence was purely accidental, while others insisted that this was evidence of the new administration's desire for harmony, pointing out, in support of that idea, the selection made for the new department of horticulture and its advancement to a position of great prominence.

While all the members present were reticent as to what actually took place, it was learned on excellent authority that the president unfolded his plans for the coming year, chief of which were in the direction of securing desirable exhibits for the monthly meetings, interesting florists with a view to their becoming members, and making the club both useful and entertaining to all. While there was a little sparring among the members of the cabinet concerning precedence, there was an evident desire on the part of each member to do all in his power to further the common interests and support the president in his plans. The vice-president was named as head of the bureau of physical culture.

Various Notes.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving fine shipments of Richmond roses from several of its specialists, that show that this grand rose is rapidly coming into winter form. The company has added gardenias to its list; they will be handled regularly.

Walter P. Stokes will give an informal talk on forcing lily of the valley before the Florists' Club next Tuesday evening, November 5. The quality of stock sent in by Mr. Stokes from his Floracraft greenhouses at Moorestown, N. J., is too well known to require comment.

William P. Craig will distribute the new hybrid tea rose, Mrs. Jardine, for Robert Scott & Son.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. has added Vanda cœrulea to its list of orchids. Boxwood and leucothoe sprays are other additions. Mignonette, too, is now on the list.

Last week I stated in this column that Franklin Ely, of the Henry F. Michell Co., is a son of the late Zebulon de Forest Ely. This was an error.

The chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will be held November 12 to 15. Premium lists may be secured by addressing the secretary, David Rust, Horticultural hall, Broad and Locust streets, Philadelphia.

Mrs. R. J. C. Walker has contributed prizes amounting to over $300 to the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's November show.

W. E. McKissick is handling early pompon chrysanthemums in quantity. They find ready sale.

E. A. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, Pa., was in the city October 25. Mr.

Harvey, who has been ill with typhoid fever, is rapidly gaining strength.

Edward Reid is shipping quantities of Adiantum Croweanum. They are exceptionally fine.

Alfred M. Campbell is handling a beautiful English single chrysanthemum, Ladysmith, pink-petaled, yellow center. It is produced in sprays like a pompon and is very graceful.

Berger Bros. are receiving some of the finest Appleton chrysanthemums seen this season. PHIL.

ESCANABA, MICH.—C. Peterson & Sons will hold their second annual flower show October 31 to November 4. C. Peterson, who has been suffering for some months from primrose poisoning, has now almost recovered from the disease.

PLEASANT HILL, Mo.—During the four weeks that have elapsed since the explosion of the boiler at Geo. M. Kellogg's greenhouses, the plant has been restored to fair working condition. It required 1,000 boxes of glass to repair the sixty-seven houses, all of which had been damaged by falling fragments from the boiler-room. In place of the five boilers that were wrecked, two large and two small boilers have now been put in operation and are giving good service. Two or three more boilers will be installed next month, and then the place will be in readiness for the severest winter. The repairs and extra expenses have amounted to about $20,000.

SITUATION WANTED

I desire to make a permanent connection with some responsible establishment as a first-class florist. Capable of managing an up-to-date place. I am at present employed and have held responsible positions for the last twenty years, but owing to personal interests, I find it advisable to make a change to better my conditions. I am not looking for a snap or a place to loaf, but prefer a position that demands ability, aggressiveness and perseverance. I am 45 years old, married, one daughter 14 years old; nationality, English, and will not make a change unless I am assured there is opportunity for merited advancement. My past record is my strongest endorsement. Address NO. 178, CARE FLORISTS' REVIEW, CHICAGO

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

REPORTS from the milling of beans add nothing of a reassuring nature.

SOME of the advance price lists of European seedsmen withhold prices on radish.

THE corn has had good curing weather, but the late sorts of sugar corn are bound to be scarce.

THERE is a considerable difference of opinion among the catalogue makers as to what onion seed will be worth.

IN Holland Alaska peas are offered at 18 shillings, $4.32, per cwt., and American Wonder at 23 shillings.

CUCUMBER seed, particularly the pickling sorts, promises to give trouble to the wholesalers who have been careless about prices.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co., Philadelphia, announce that they are already oversold on their new sweet pea, Burpee's Primrose Spencer.

WE value your magazine very much for the seed news and could not get along without it.—L. L. OLDS SEED CO., Clinton, Wis.

N. J. BURT, Burlington, Ia., has adapted to his own use the trade mark of the Burlington Route, making it read: "Burlington Seeds are Best."

At Sedalia, Mo., October 25, L. H. Archias, president of Archias' Seed Store, with Mrs. Archias, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage.

THERE appears to be a considerably larger quantity than usual left on hand after advance orders for both Bermuda and Japanese Easter lily bulbs have been filled.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture shows that in 1906 the United States imported 458,041 bushels of beans and dried peas. Of these 127,709 bushels came from Canada and 111,737 from Mexico, while only 4,066 came from the United Kingdom, but the latter had an average value of $3.54 per bushel as against $1.45 per bushel for the entire year's imports.

THE new Wisconsin law making it compulsory for seedsmen doing business in that state to print on each package the year of growth and the percentage of purity of the seed enclosed therein, will place them in a peculiar position. It is asking more from them than their competitors in other states are called upon to do in conducting a similar line of business and is a discrimination against them that is not just.

AMONG the most carefully selected muskmelons that have reached the eastern markets this fall were those from Ordway, Colo., a station on the Missouri Pacific about ten miles north of Rocky Ford. The shipping association there has taken much care to send out only perfect fruit and has been putting Burrell's Gem on the market in splendid condition. The pink flesh is its distinguishing mark to the buyers.

THOUSANDS of empty onion-set trays, stacked in the fields, are conclusive evidence that some of the largest growers in the Chicago district failed to harvest anything like an average crop.

AMONG the seed trade visitors to the flower show at Lenox, Mass., October 23 to 25, were J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; A. T. Boddington, New York; John Low, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, and Mr. Hay, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia.

WATKINS & SIMPSON, London, report excellent demand for their novelties, Godetia Crimson Glow and Eschscholtzia Dainty Queen. Many American catalogues will list them for the approaching season. Other Watkins & Simpson novelties for 1908 include the Pilot pea, Early Model Red Globe beet, Drooping Crimson Willow-leaved beet (ornamental), Alyssum Little Dorrit and improved strains of several introductions of previous years.

CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

Every seedsmen will be interested in the following letter from A. J. Pieters, president of the A. J. Pieters Seed Co., Hollister, Cal., dated October 25:

"We have not yet finished cleaning, the season here having been unusually cool and late.

"In regard to the condition of the seed industry on this coast, we believe that the coming year bids fair to be a more satisfactory one in many ways than the past has been. Rains have begun early and we should be able to get the crops in early. Early planting, other things being equal, will give us better crops and earlier deliveries. There will be little surplus in the hands of the growers by the time all deliveries are made, and that little should move, if reports from Europe and from the east are correct, long before the new crop is in sight.

"Orders are being booked now for the crop of 1908, and, in some cases at least, at better prices than we got last season. It is still too early to say what the growers are going to do about onion seed prices for next year. One large grower has already come out with prices that, to say the least, seem moderate. Other growers have so far declined to make prices. It probably all depends on the crop of bulbs they believe they have in sight. The one element in the situation that will tend to put prices up, if nothing else will, is the labor problem. This is becoming very serious, especially so since the exclusion of the Japanese that formerly came over from the islands. Practically all the hand work on the seed farms is done by Japanese or by Chinese labor, and these people have not been slow to see their opportunity in the present situation, with the result that the price of labor has been steadily going up, and bids fair to be higher next year than it was this.

Representing so large a part of the expense of producing a seed crop, the cost of the labor must inevitably affect the price of seed. Of course, indirectly this will have an effect on the quality, as, no matter how hard a grower tries to put out first-class seed, he cannot, without a substantial increase in what he gets for the seed, afford to put the present high-priced labor on the roguing and selecting. If the dealers want good seeds they can get them from almost any of the growers here, but not at the prices that have prevailed in the recent past."

HEINEMANN'S NOVELTIES.

The leading novelty in the list of F. C. Heinemann, Erfurt, Germany, is the Eros pansy. It is a large flower, of deep, velvety brown, with a broad golden yellow margin. The chief characteristic of the variety is that, like the Freya pansy, the back of each bloom has the same broad margin as the front. Heinemann also has for this season three new colors of his Emperor salpiglossis: Faust, black; Purple-brown with Gold and Lilac with Gold. The first of these is without any marking and is something entirely out of the ordinary. Last year Heinemann introduced a Princess pink (Dianthus laciniatus punctatus) with ground colors of lighter shades, but this year his offering is a variety of dark purplish violet and blood red ground color. Meteor is the name given to a

THE POSTAL PROGRESS DINNER.

As the guest of honor of W. Atlee Burpee, Postmaster General George von L. Meyer met at dinner at the Union League, at Philadelphia, Saturday evening, October 26, a distinguished company of manufacturers, merchants and financiers and discussed with them plans for the improvement of the service, notably in the direction of enlarging the scope of the parcels post, and the establishment of postal savings banks.

These are two things about which there exists a difference of opinion among the business and financial interests, and following the address of Mr. Meyer there was an interesting discussion in which two noteworthy participants were former Postmaster General John Wanamaker and United States Senator Boies Penrose, whose work on the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads gives him an insight into the workings of the department.

W. Atlee Burpee, the host of the evening, has long been a member of the Postals Committee of the Board of Trade, and in addition is a vigorous advocate of the parcels post. To meet General Meyer he invited the most notable men in the city and the 100 or more who gathered about the banquet table at the League represented the city's largest interests. The tables were decorated in red and the room presented a magnificent appearance. Mr. Burpee presided and at his right was the guest of the evening. Mr. Burpee, in introducing Postmaster General Meyer, referred to the need of postal reforms and declared that one law, at least, under which the department was conducting business dated from 1792. "That is too far back even for conservative Philadelphia," he declared, amid laughter.

The address of the Postmaster General was a forecast of the things he will ask of congress in his forthcoming annual report. These include:

"The extension of the parcels post, by increasing the weight limit, reducing the rates, and extending the service to the rural free delivery.

"The establishment of postal savings banks on a basis where they will not conflict with established financial interests.

"The introduction of slot machines and other devices to give greater facilities for the purchase of stamps.

"The improvement and simplification

BULBS NEAR BELLINGHAM.

After a number of years of coöperative experimental work, much of which was carried on in and near Bellingham, Wash., the United States Bureau of Plant Industry has decided to establish somewhere on Puget sound, if practicable, a regular station of ten or a dozen acres for the further investigation and exploitation of bulb culture in the Puget sound country. This will be done under the direct management and personal supervision of Henry E. Juennemann, bulb expert of the Department of Agriculture, who has had charge of the bulb experiments of the government for the last six years and who has spent the last year conducting experiments at Bellingham, Tacoma and Spokane, with headquarters at Bellingham.

L. M. Morrison, assistant in charge of the Bureau of Plant Industry, has been on the ground during the last week, and it is understood that he is authorized to close negotiations for a suitable tract of land and formally establish the station under contract for ten years. The requirements are that the land must be ready for cultivation and must include a suitable residence for the superintendent and other buildings, all of which to be furnished free of cost to the bureau.

So far as the matter of informing the bureau is concerned, the work of experimenting has progressed to the final stage and there is no longer any question as to the future of the flower bulb industry in the Puget sound region. The experiments have conclusively demonstrated that the bulbs can be successfully grown here on a commercial scale and in competition with the best bulbs of Holland. It will be the purpose of the prospective experimental station to demonstrate successful methods of growing the bulbs in the various soils of the Puget sound region and to issue bulletins explaining the details of the business.

THE BEST SWEET PEAS.

We have compiled the following list from our classified order book, say C. C. Morse & Co., to indicate the comparative popularity of the different varieties of sweet peas as proved by actual orders for seeds, which must represent sales, and naturally prove what the public is using. This list is based on this season's contract orders, beginning with King Edward VII, with 9,000 pounds, and so on with smaller amounts to the fiftieth. The orders represent an average of 100 dealers, the largest in America and England. The most heavily ordered twenty-five are named in order in the first column, the second twenty-five in order in the second column.

NASTURTIIUM PEREGRINUM.

Speaking of Nasturtium peregrinum, the canary bird flower or canary creeper, Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, say:

"The steady growth in the demand for this really very valuable climbing annual in various countries, induces us to draw more particular attention to it in America.

"The appropriate popular name for this lovely climber is derived from the shape and color of its flower, which resembles a canary perched on the twigs of a tree.

"The plant flowers abundantly, and its well-shaped, fine yellow flowers are very effective upon the tender green foliage.

"It is one of those climbers that do not make too much straw, as some others do, giving a rather disorderly, wild appearance to a small garden in the autumn. This very attractive, neat plant, however, is still a quick grower, and flowers freely, when there are no early frosts, till almost Christmas. For this reason it has become a great favorite for covering veranda railings, balconies, etc.

"It is easily cultivated and seldom causes disappointments to amateur gardeners. It attaches itself well to any support without particular care in guiding it. Altogether it is naturally destined to grow more and more a flower of large demand, as it comes within the reach of the public.

"Having grown this flower for ten or twelve years on an ever-increasing scale, we have been able to grow it at a more moderate price than it was offered formerly, and considering the above it will soon be a flower for the million, and we would therefore strongly recommend that particular attention be paid to this popular climber."

NOTES FROM HOLLAND.

Bulb growers have no reason to complain, as nearly all sorts of bulbs have cleared out at fair prices, and although hyacinths have not sold as freely as was at first expected, the surplus is not of such importance as to justify any grumbling. Crocuses have been selling at a premium, as was expected, and especially yellow crocuses have been in unusually good demand.

Planting operations are now in full swing with all the growers and from the present outlook it is almost certain that the area of hyacinths planted out again will be materially reduced, whereas tulip stocks have increased considerably.

Darwin tulips also have been in unusually good demand and especially the choicer sorts are now getting more into public favor than has ever been the case before.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

A FINE DAHLIA.

Maurice Fuld, of W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, and secretary of the New England Dahlia Society, says Souvenir de Gustave Douzon is a most wonderful dahlia, which has flowered profusely the entire season, and since the frost is producing a most remarkable crop of flowers, remarkable not only on account of quantity, but also on account of perfection and size of blooms; it is without doubt one of the best decorative dahlias, and should be in every collection.

This rejuvenating of growth after the first frost has a most wonderful effect upon the roots. They are only perfected from then on, and in a great many cases entirely new roots are made; the latter case is particularly true of the plants which were entirely blackened by the first frost. It is therefore of the greatest importance not to do anything to the dahlias after the first frost has appeared.

It may be well here to mention that in order to produce the greatest amount of tubers and the largest clumps, it is advisable to cut back the dahlia plant to within eighteen inches of the ground right in the height of the flowering season. Experiments along these lines will be found most interesting and instructive. In this period of second growth it is of advantage to those who are anxious to increase their stock of certain varieties to make cuttings, as just the ideal growth for cuttings is then made.

WELL MATURED BULBS.

Those who have had any experience know the advantage of having well-matured bulbs, but during the last few years we have been receiving consignments from Holland earlier than formerly, and I think many of them have been dug before properly ripened, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. Early potting is, no doubt, an advantage, but well-ripened bulbs potted later will do better than immature bulbs potted early. Treatment has much to do with success, yet the most skillful grower cannot make up for imperfect bulbs, especially with those where the flowers are in embryo state before being started into active growth. Flowers may be developed to a larger size and every bloom opened, but you cannot add to the number of flowers originally formed in the dormant bulbs.

Another matter worthy of notice is that it is not always the largest bulbs that prove the most satisfactory, but those of smaller size, which are firm and plump, succeed better. Sorts vary; some produce much larger bulbs naturally than others do. In hyacinths the blues are usually the largest and yellows the smallest. Any that appear to be low and soft in the crowns rarely prove satisfactory; but in this, sorts vary; some show signs of starting much earlier than others.

PACIFIC COAST.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Empire Plant & Floral Co. has just completed the erection of more than 5,000 feet of glass and will build two more houses, each 25x100 feet, next spring. The firm does a general business and has a bright outlook for the coming season. The stock at present includes 4,000 ferns, all of large size; 10,000 geraniums, and 3,000 double petunias, among which there are some choice seedlings. There is also a house of carnations, planted in June, which are at present one mass of flower stems.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had several showers of rain during the past week and everything looks somewhat brighter. Business is fair and flowers are, in a general way, quite plentiful. Chrysanthemums are in their glory and can be had at almost any price offered. This is especially true of the smaller varieties, but of the larger, indoor flowers there are already signs of shortening in the supply.

We have had a good supply of indoor roses, about the first of the new crop, and prospects are good for plenty of stock of that kind from this time onward. The prices range from $3 per hundred up to $2 per dozen for fancy Beauties. Carnations are in good shape and continue at about the same prices as they have been for the last month. Fancy stock brings about $3.50 per hundred and from that price down to $2 for the cheaper varieties. Valley is plentiful and costs the retailers about $4 per hundred. Roman hyacinths move slowly at $3 per hundred. Violets, however, share with mums in being the favorite of the hour. They are in their glory at this time. The price has steadily decreased since the first of the season, so that now they cost the retailers about 75 cents per dozen bunches.

A tour of the florists' establishments over in Oakland shows business to be fair for this time of the year, the greatest demand being for funeral work.

Various Notes.

William J. Dingee has resigned as park commissioner, on account of the pressure of other business affairs.

James Niven has accepted a position as head gardener to H. E. Botkin, of Ross Station, Cal.

W. W. Saunders is erecting a building on Center street, Berkeley, to be devoted to the florists' and seed trade.

C. C. Morse & Co. are making extensive improvements on their grounds at Glen Echo, Alameda county. They are reconstructing a range of plant houses at the present time.

The fourth annual exhibition of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society was held at that place October 19 and 20. Under the direction of the committee of arrangements, Sidney Clack and F. G. Hutchinson, president and secretary of the society, respectively, and H. Goertzhain, S. Pay, K. S. Murray, M. W. Carter and A. McDonald, all of whom are well known gardeners, the mammoth tent in which the show was held was transformed into the most beautiful of hot-houses. The judges were George Walters, of Ross; Charles Abrahams, of the Western Nursery, San Francisco; and Thomas Woods, of San Mateo. The collections of chrysanthemums, ferns and foliage plants of James L. Flood, Timothy Hopkins, S. E. Slade, J. L. Donohue, and Mrs. W. H. Crocker were especially worthy of mention and all were the recipients of various prizes. Sidney Clack, president of the society, stated this was the best exhibition ever given in Menlo Park. G.

BULB PLANTING.

The planting of bulbs for blooming in the garden during the winter or early in the spring should interest the intending grower at this time. Under ordinary conditions the general planter on the coast does not have good success with bulbs as a garden flower, especially when he buys promiscuously and uses no judgment as to the varieties he plants out. The idea is to get a couple of dozen hyacinths, tulips, daffodils or whatever he fancies, plant them among a lot of shrubbery and wait for developments. A few suggestions along these lines may be in order at this time.

To begin with, bulbs do not grow to any advantage if planted among shrubbery or, in fact, anywhere except by themselves. They invariably want sunshine; all of it they can get, in fact, as they bloom during that portion of the year when sunshine is at a premium. This does not apply to everything in the bulb line, but easily includes ninety per cent of the more common kinds.

The soil should not be too heavy. This is an important item, and by heavy soil I refer to that which packs down hard with the action of an excess of moisture and has a tendency to bake like a brick on top. On the other hand, sandy soil acts well with bulbs for the first season and if there is a sufficient quantity of sediment in it they thrive well, provided they are not allowed to dry out in the summer season. Too much moisture, however, and especially if the drainage is not of the best, is fatal to the long life of almost all flowering bulbs, with the exception of callas, etc.

Another factor that should be taken into consideration is the cutting of the flower stem before it dies off in the natural way. This interferes with the full development of the growth and the subsequent growing of the bulblets. The dying down of the foliage is apparently not sufficient for the thorough drying of a mature bulb. This does not apply so much to the narcissus family as it does to hyacinths and tulips, but in no case does it make any particular difference to the florist, who only expects one crop of flowers from his bulbs and then throws them out. I refer to the planting for permanent beds for garden display.

Bulbs do not, in this climate, want an excess of moisture after their growing season, as they will be found to be weak, soft and small and will amount to but little the following year. Too much manure in the ground is another factor which should not be countenanced.

Bulbs of the narcissus family should be separated and transplanted at least every three years, as they multiply rapidly and can be easily induced to still further spread themselves under reasonable circumstances. G.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

State of Trade.

Trade has been good. Funeral work has been plentiful, using up lots of short stock. Flowers outdoors are practically all over; the night of Friday, October 18, froze up everything outdoors. Boilers are all in operation now.

Carnations are in fairly good supply, with the demand equal to it. They bring from 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen retail. The stems are getting longer every day. Some nice roses are now coming in. These sell at $1.50 per dozen retail. With the advent of cooler weather, violets will now begin to bloom more freely. These are retailing at from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Mums are now in DENVER.

Supply and Demand.

Trade was fairly active last week, opening good October 21 and 22, but quiet for a couple of days, but again active on Saturday. The continued mild weather is not conducive to active trade in cut flowers, the weather being altogether too good for the trade.

Stock of all kinds is again fairly plentiful. Of roses, American Beauties seem to be most in demand, quality being good. In tea roses the sale has been mostly for pink and white. The Brides are in perfect color and with good stems, as well as Bridesmaid and Richmond, both being good and having a fair call. Carnations are coming in more plentifully, and some good flowers are seen. Although some are as yet short of stem, they are getting better every day.

The chrysanthemum season is now on in full blast, but the demand is not exactly what the growers would like, as it

The Alpha Floral Co. is receiving some splendid chrysanthemums from the El-

In all the greenhouses in the city, chrysanthemums are now the main feature, and in the greenhouses at City park the display this year is especially attractive and noteworthy. Frank Rush-more, head florist, has taken care to have the display as varied as possible.
They have fifty varieties and the exhibit numbers 2,300 plants. The greenhouses at the park are open to the public every day from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Sundays included, and the exhibit is quite worthy of a visit. E. S. K.

at last passed away, and the chrysanthemum has come to take their place. It is hard to say just what price will be realized, as the early mums were in competition with the outside blooms and a good price could not be had for them. However, they are now selling well and we do not know of any going to waste. The retail stores have a heavy supply on hand. The yellow variety generally finds a ready sale. Pink is a little scarce. The small, white blooms come in well for funeral work. This is the kind our country farmers bring to town and offer in large bunches for 10 cents a bunch. The later varieties are on the way and the large blooms usually attract more attention and sell much better than the early varieties.

Roses are still coming in heavily and are offered at retail as low as 35 cents per dozen by the boys on the streets. Carnations are still scarce. Callas are now coming in slowly. Violets are a little scarce yet. Greens are enough to meet the demands. Ferns of all kinds are in demand.

Various Notes.

C. Gregorius, of Arlington, Md., is installing a new boiler, a Burnham of the largest type.

James Hamilton, of Mount Washington, Md., is installing two new boilers, forty and sixty horse-power. He now has about 50,000 square feet of glass and is still building. He has some fine mums in several houses. Later he will have a large quantity of roses and carnations.

John B. Harman, of Catonsville, Md., has cut nearly all of his mums. As usual, his roses are in first-class condition.

The bulb situation here among the growers is having little attention. Many are drifting away from the planting of bulbs.

C. E. Smith & Co., on Liberty street, last week held a chrysanthemum show at their store and made quite a hit.

W. W. Fiedler & Co., on Pennsylvania avenue, had a beautiful window of mums, backed up with ferns, last week.

George F. Lurssen, the manager of the Flower Garden, on North Baltimore street, reports business this month as satisfactory and he will now give his entire attention to the business.

Some of the decorations of the Old Home week still occupy part of the stalls of James Glass and Mrs. F. N. Powell.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

R. F. SPURLIN has purchased all the interest in the Home Nursery Co., at Ussery, Ark.

O. H. TINDELL, who about four years ago established the O. H. Tindell Nursery Co., at Corryton, Tenn., has moved to a new location at Fountain City, Tenn.

SINCE the retirement of E. Albertson from the firm of Albertson & Hobbs, wholesale nurserymen at Bridgeport, Ind., the firm has been conducted as C. M. Hobbs & Son.

F. G. KEYS, a nurseryman of Monroe, La., has been arrested at Memphis, Tenn., on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. After standing trial at Memphis he will be taken to Covington, Tenn., to face a similar charge.

No honest nurseryman will oppose legislation for the protection of the farmers, but when the laws are framed by the score in haste, by those who know nothing of the business of growing and selling of nursery stock, the result is restrictive to conditions almost impossible to be conformed to.

FRENCH NURSERY FEDERATION.

Though the movement in favor of organization in the French nursery trade is comparatively recent, it has been taken up with enthusiasm, and is already producing important results, some of which will, without doubt, have an effect upon the trade in other countries.

English nurserymen are pleased to see that one matter has received attention which has been the cause of much ill-feeling, and that is the practice of certain French firms sending wholesale lists to retail buyers in England. According to the Horticultural Advertiser and in consequence of representations made on this subject, M. Rene Barbier, secretary of the Orleans association, announces that it has been agreed by every nurseryman in that district publishing a catalogue that for the future there shall be a difference of at least twenty-five per cent between wholesale and retail lists. This decision has been communicated to the Angers and Ussy districts and adopted by them.

The Lyons branch has taken similar action, with the rule that no trade lists shall for the future be sent to landed proprietors and other private buyers. "It is very pleasant to us," says the Horticultural Advertiser, "having strenuously advocated the advantages of organization and co-operation in the nursery and seed trades for many years, to see that at last the movement has not only taken firm root here, but is now being warmly taken up in France, Germany, and other continental countries. Our American cousins, with their well-known business acumen, are, of course, years ahead of us in this important question."

Our French confreres have already tackled the thorny question of prices, and the Paris district has decided on a general rise of ten per cent upon previous

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Where circumstances or conditions have not been favorable for the thorough preparation of the soil when rhododendrons were at first planted, it will be a good plan now to cover the ground over the roots of the plants with a good coat of leaf soil, which will be so much the better if there is some well rotted two-year-old manure added to it. All winter this covering may remain on top, but in spring it may be lightly forked in. This will have a wonderfully beneficial effect on the plants, even during the season immediately succeeding the time of application.

Ampelopsis Veitchii makes a glorious and intensely brilliant display wherever it is growing, at this time of the year. The only drawback to this vine is that it remains so short a time in leaf when the colors are the most brilliant. For covering the stumps of old trees and other objects it is doubtful if there is any other vine as serviceable as this one. At any rate there is none that will do the work more rapidly and effectively when it once gets a good start. This vine needs little protection in winter and the little that it may require will be some manure over the roots. M.

EVERGREENS.

Evergreens in nurseries require frequent transplanting in order to give them room for growth and development, but when evergreens are planted on private estates it will be greatly to the benefit of the trees if at the very start they are planted where they may be allowed to remain permanently. In the case of single specimens there will be no difficulty attending such a disposition of the trees, but when they are planted in large or small groups some foresight and a good deal of judgment will be required to have things come out right at the finish. Moving evergreens after they have attained considerable size in almost every case has the effect of a set-back. In group planting, those intended to remain should be placed at first in such positions that there will be no necessity for disturbing them. It is also a fairly well known fact that in cutting the tap root of some evergreens the character of the tree is thereby changed considerably. When planting evergreens in exposed places it is a good plan, even if specimen trees are preferable eventually, to plant in groups for the sake of sheltering those that will remain. R. R.

EXPORTS OF NURSERY STOCK.

The Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture has just made public the revised figures of the exports of nursery stock for the last three years, as follows:

Exports to—	1904.	1905.	1906.
Canada	$ 71,062	$ 69,143	$ 82,017
Cuba	36,653	62,881	48,115
Germany	9,060	14,700	15,078
Mexico	15,573	19,771	36,532
Netherlands	12,576	10,697	22,350
United Kingdom	120,730	23,930	23,597
Other countries	22,226	18,101	14,367

Total$287,880 $219,223 $242,056

In this connection it is of interest to note in last week's REVIEW, page 34, that our imports of nursery stock in 1906 were $1,617,622, so that the balance of trade is against us in the proportion of almost eight to one.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

As chairman of the committee on peony diseases, I wish to bring before the attention of the peony growers of the United States some lines of work which this committee proposes to undertake during the coming year, and to ask their hearty cooperation in the same.

It is proposed, first, to bring together all the literature bearing upon the subject of peony diseases. This the chairman of the committee expects to complete during the coming year, and will present a paper on the subject before the next annual meeting of the society. In connection with this work it is especially desired that all persons interested in peony growing will send to the chairman references to any literature on the subject of peony troubles of which they may know.

Second, we will endeavor to get together all of the observations and experience of peony growers with diseases of the plant. This will include any experiences they have had with diseases, methods of treatment and success or failure of the same. On this point it will be necessary to appeal directly to the grower, and it is hoped that every one interested in the matter will write out briefly, and clearly anything he may have to offer and send it to us.

Third, we shall endeavor to get together specimens of the different diseases of peonies for the purpose of studying them carefully and making experiments to determine their cause and methods of their treatment. It is planned to continue this work for a number of years, in order that we may arrive at some definite conclusions in regard to the matter. Growers are urged to send in any diseased plants whenever they find them, transportation prepaid, in return for which the chairman of your committee promises to give whatever information he can in regard to the trouble and to prepare from time to time short articles on some common and destructive disease, that will appear for publication in the proper magazines, etc. These specimens should be carefully wrapped in a box or stout package and mailed directly to our address.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

If used as directed in my article in last week's REVIEW, page 48, for houses thirty feet wide, six jars per 100 feet of house will kill all the white flies. This might be too strong for some plants, and five jars might be enough. Much depends upon the weather. If it is at all windy the gas does not remain in the house long enough to be successful. Some growers advise opening the ventilators from the outside in an hour or two, but we find this too much trouble as long as it is not necessary.

Many are unsuccessful in the use of gas because they expect one fumigation to rid them of the pests, not thinking of the eggs yet to hatch. Three successful doses are necessary to exterminate white fly, and two will usually kill anything else entirely out. After the first fumigation we watch for the oldest of the eggs to hatch and the first insects we see are the signal for another fumigation, but the last eggs laid are not yet hatched and if we wait until they are the first ones have laid more eggs, so we give three fumigations and then we are rid of everything for a long time and at a much smaller expense than by using any other insecticide. If the first attempts are not successful the grower will do well to study the above and try to find out why, and it will be well worth while and save much money and worry.

There are two reasons for keeping the cyanide wrapped up in double papers: First, it is deadly poison; a taste or a touch to the tongue will kill a person instantly, and a few breaths of the fresh gas will do the same. Second, the acid eats through the paper quickly, and two thicknesses of paper permit the employee to get a few yards away before the acid eats to the cyanide, which decomposes it rapidly, causing the acid to churn and boil and emitting the poisonous gases. If any acid be spattered on anyone or on shoes, etc., a little grease applied will stop it from burning. H. G.

FORCING TOMATOES.

At what temperature should a greenhouse be kept, day and night, in which tomatoes are now growing? What fertilizer is best to use for top dressing in a house of tomatoes? W. D. H.

I find that a night temperature of 65 degrees and a day temperature of about 80 degrees on bright days gives us the best results.

Some growers recommend a lower temperature and many run their houses somewhat warmer with good results, but there is one point on which we will all agree, and that is: If you have a cool night temperature you should run your day temperature accordingly, and not try to make up for it by running the houses warmer in the daytime. The difference between day and night temperature should never be more than 15 or 20 degrees in growing any hothouse crop. If you must hurry a crop, do it by giving a longer day temperature by running the temperature up to the day limit early and holding it there well into the evening, but only on bright days, and be sure that it gets down to proper night temperature before 10 p. m. On dark, cloudy days it is best to run the temperature only a little above that of night.

As to the fertilizers, there is much difference of opinion and much depends upon what plant food is already in the soil. For making up the beds before planting, nothing is quite so good as horse manure, if it has been well cared for, but unfortunately this is seldom the case. If carefully turned, shaken out and watered while it is fresh and hot, it will not burn, and when it is partly decomposed and all heat has left it, it is most excellent and it would be well for greenhouse proprietors to give more attention to it. When a pile of horse manure is neglected until it is all burned out, it is of little value. When it is good it is not only a benefit as a fertilizer, but it loosens up the soil like roots in sod and the soil is kept nice and mellow and well drained.

It must be remembered, however, that horse manure is strongest in nitrogen, ammonia being mostly nitrogen, and although it will give the plants an excellent growth of stalks and leaves they may be slow to set fruit or mature it, for lack of phosphoric acid or potash or both. For this reason the commercial fertilizers are better for the mulching or feeding after the crop has grown to the fruiting stage. A grower should not think of refuse as so much manure or by-product of some packing house, but should consider the amount of plant food contained in the different kinds of refuse or fertilizers. If little or no manure is used in preparing the beds, nitrogen should be applied in some form for making a good growth, and there should also be a feeding of bone meal or some similar product containing the phosphoric acid and potash for producing and filling out fruit. Some fertilizers, even when much needed, will injure the plants if not properly applied. The best rule is to apply small doses often and water them in at once, or cultivate them into the soil a little and then water. H. G.

Current Comment.

Weather conditions were favorable last week and roses and carnations show it in better quality and quantity. Chrysanthemums hold the stage and will do so for some time to come; the different store men use them lavishly in their window decorations.

The premium lists are out for the flower show on November 13 and 14, held under the auspices of the State Florists' Association, at the conservatory of A. Wiegand & Son, Sixteenth and Illinois streets. This ought to be a success, judging by the efforts the secretary and committee are putting forth. A good exhibit of new roses by all the large rose growers is assured.

The annual fall opening of the Bertermann Floral Co. will take place November 11 and, as usual, will be a great feature in florist circles.

Henry Rieman expects to have his fall opening next week or the week following. This will be one of the greatest attractions of the fall season. All the other florists expect to have their openings at 7 a. m. every day, to which the public is cordially invited.

Mr. Barnes, the dahlia specialist of Spencer, Ind., is around visiting the craft. He promises many good things and surprises for next summer. He reports a very good season and finds the dahlia is fast becoming a favorite again.

S. A. Baur, of Los Angeles, Cal., visited here for a few hours on his way east.

LEXINGTON, KY.

Without any fireworks the officials of the Agricultural Experiment Station at State College have secured the funds for the erection of what will be one of the finest greenhouses in the country for experimental work in the study of greenhouse plant diseases. Besides the greenhouse proper, there is to be a two-story building 20x55 devoted to laboratories for agricultural research. The greenhouse is to be erected by the Pierson U-Bar Co., with steel frame and curved eaves. The floor is to be of concrete and everything about the place is to be the best that skill can provide, the benches being of cement.

HOWELL, IND.—The greenhouses of the L. & N. railroad are located here and are under the management of B. S. Wiltshire, who is 75 years of age and is the oldest employee of the railroad company. Mr. Wiltshire has the reputation of knowing more about flowers than the average florist.

CARNATION SARAH HILL, ACTUAL SIZE.

SARAH HILL

The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON- ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

Either variety at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

State of Trade.

Trade is picking up in good shape and is beginning to take on its winter garments. The heaviest part of the business is on mums. Roses and carnations are improving right along; in fact, they look like winter stock, and by the outlook stock in general will be of splendid quality this season. There have been a few good decorations lately, but nothing to speak of.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, October 22, President Stephens in the chair, and all officers present. E. F. Alspach, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., was elected to membership. The mum show committee reported everything in readiness for the show to be held Tuesday, November 13.

This being election night, the following officers were elected: President, R. A. Currie; vice-president, C. P. Torrey; secretary, James McKellar; treasurer, Jacob Reichert; sergeant-at-arms, J. H. Williams; trustees, G. H. Woodrow, A. Knopf, John Brust, Geo. Bauman and G. Drobish.

The club is starting off the new year in a flourishing condition and the members seem to be getting better acquainted and are attending meetings more regularly. We have great hopes of seeing a good delegation go from here to the next convention, and no doubt our bowling team will be in good shape, as we have the material for a good team and they are looking forward to the contest. Jacob Reichert is acting captain.

Various Notes.

The Munk Floral Co. has been cutting some fine Appleton mums and its carnations are promising.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has been cutting fine carnations, roses and mums. The Tousey are unusually fine, being grown mostly three to a plant. The cut flower branch at 47 North High street has opened in good shape.

William Graff has been making a run on chrysanthemums at 10 cents each and handling an immense amount of stock.

Everyone here reports business good, but the bulk of it is mums. J. M.

ARAUCARIAS our specialty. Watch us grow
 1907 is our 12th anniversary in a successful career in the importation, growing and shipping of those well-known and well admired evergreen decorative plants.

The Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta, Compacta and Excelsa Glauca. Our importation this spring, 1907, has swollen up to the enormous amount of 6,000. More are coming on with the azaleas, in October. By buying now your plants will grow into money 100 per cent in 2 or 3 months. Next in rank come our Nephrolepis or Ferns, of which we have only the best selling varieties. A big lot of Boston, Elegantissima, Whitmani and Scottii. Have 3 large houses full in all salable sizes; all pot-grown, not bench-grown. Our ferns are not forced or grown in shady houses, but were grown in sunny houses; ventilators open day and night. Such treatment makes hardy, stiff fronds and strong, stout plants. Can be shipped 5,000 miles without injury in transportation.

Now is the best time to ship; as you can ship safely by freight.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine—6-inch pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00 each.

Current Comment.

There is not much change in the cut flower business since last report. Roses have been coming much better. Beauties bring $3 to $6 per dozen; teas, $1 to $3; carnations, 50 cents to $1 per dozen; violets, $1.50 and $2 per hundred. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and bring from $1 to $5 per dozen. Good pink is scarce. Clark Bros. are cutting some fine Carnot roses.

There was a lot of funeral work and there were quite a few large designs. Nearly all of the stores had their share.

Wednesday seems to still be the popular day for weddings. October 16 Gude Bros. had the bridal work for ten weddings. George Shaffer had a fine decoration for the Ridgley-Brown wedding at the Church of the Covenant. The coming week will be a busy one for the decorators.

J. Robertson reports business opening up finely at his Connecticut avenue store.

Henry Pfister has completed his new store. Besides his former store, he now occupies the one adjoining it, and he thus has two fine show windows, with a nice entrance in the center. The ice-box was made according to his own design and is done in white and gold. His floor space is 30x75 feet. He reports business good.

Z. D. Blackstone has added a conservatory to his store. The carpenters and painters are through and the effect could not be better.

George Shaffer has a very attractive store, with its new coat of white and gold.

F. H. Kramer has his store looking fresh with a frescoed ceiling and walls.

Fred Wolf, of the Washington Florists Co., has been operated on for a tumor. He is still in the hospital.

Among the visitors this week were Mr. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Wm. Hagemann, and Mr. Reed, of Reed & Keller. O. O.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—Julius Theodore Roehrs, of the Julius Roehrs Co., was married October 23 to Miss Elsie Marie Koch, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Chrysanthemum reigns queen at present in the floral world and the windows of the flower shops of the city are beautiful with great bunches of the various colored mums arranged in most artistic manner. The trade also has improved all around, notwithstanding the financial scare. All of the shops have seemed quite busy. The wholesalers are looking more pleasant every day since the outdoor stock has seen its finish, as no matter how cheap the commission man sold the stock he could not compete with the farmer who had no expense except his own time, which, in his own opinion, wasn't worth anything.

Chrysanthemums are coming in heavily and in all sizes, and most of the stock is good. While there is nothing in fancy prices, the stock cleans up at fair prices, which is satisfactory.

Various Notes.

In the Allegheny market, E. C. Ludwig, G. & J. W. Ludwig, D. A. Malie, Frank Faulk and Erhardt & Swartz keep up a show which is worth traveling to see and the evidence that it is appreciated is the fact that they draw much of their trade from Pittsburgh, where their customers are compelled to take a street car to reach them.

Allegheny park opened its flower show October 27, but, owing to the extremely disagreeable weather, the crowd was not as great as usual. The show reflects great credit on George Moore, head gardener, and his assistant. One house of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in pots and hanging baskets was a sight. Nothing handsomer in this line was ever shown in this city and it would be worth any of the florists' while to go and see what can be done with this plant. This house was in charge of William Getting. The show of mums was attractively arranged, but much like other shows of the kind.

Next week a report of the Schenley park show, Frick, Peacock and Heinz shows will appear in the Pittsburgh notes. Hoo-Hoo.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Blackman Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the Retail Merchants' Pure Food Show, which was opened in Evans hall Monday evening, October 21.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL.—The proprietors of the Antlers hotel have built a greenhouse, at a cost of $1,200, on the south side of Antlers park, for the purpose of keeping the hotel supplied with flowers and plants.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

The American Carnation.

By C. W. WARD. Invaluable to the carnation grower. All departments of the business are treated in a thoroughly practical manner. This book is the work of a careful, studious grower of ripe experience. Fully illustrated. $3.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Greenhouse Heating.

INSUFFICIENT RADIATION.

Will a 2-inch overhead flow supply two 4-inch pipes in a house 10x75 feet, with walls four feet high and eight feet to the ridge? The house runs east and west. There is one foot of glass in the south wall. There are no gables exposed. I wish to have a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Our weather here in Indiana hardly ever goes to zero. F. C. A.

While one 2-inch riser will supply two 4-inch pipes seventy-five feet long, this will not provide sufficient radiation for your house to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees. In order to carry the temperature you desire, it will be necessary to provide the house with a 2½-inch flow or riser and five 4-inch pipes, or better still, nine 2-inch pipes the length of the house. L. C. C.

HOT WATER FOR SINGLE HOUSE.

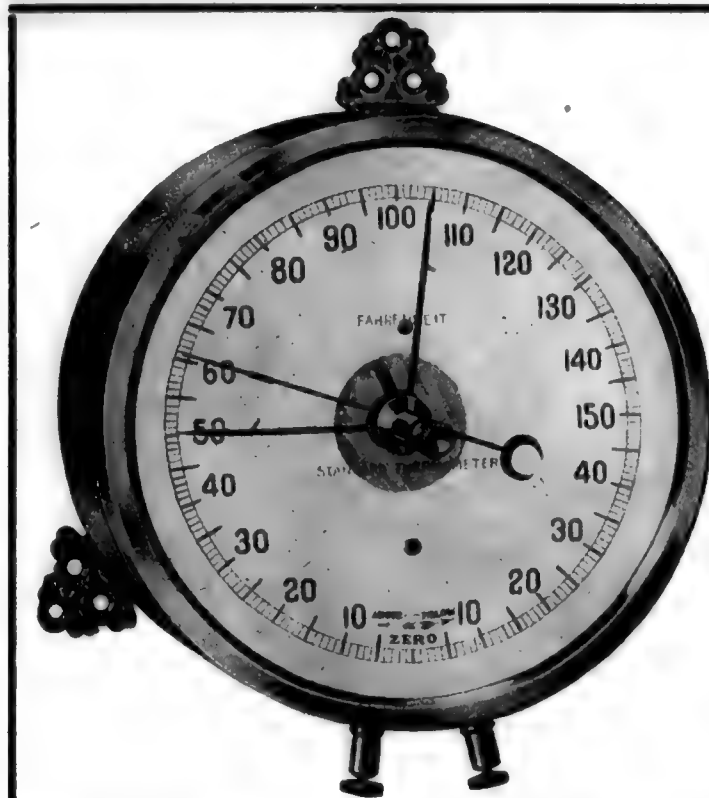

How shall I pipe, for hot water, a greenhouse 20x60 feet and ten feet to the ridge? There are twenty inches of glass on the sides. The house is exposed on both sides and also at one end, which is of glass. It is partly protected from strong winds. I want a temperature of 70 degrees in this Michigan climate. R. E. H.

A satisfactory plan for arranging the heating pipes in your greenhouse 20x60 would be to install fourteen 2-inch lines of pipe. Use five lines of pipe—one flow and four returns—under each side bench, and four lines of pipe—one flow and three returns—under the middle bench. This should give radiation sufficient for a temperature of 65 degrees in severe weather and 70 degrees at other times. The high point in each manifold should be at the point most distant from the boiler. By using a well elevated expansion tank, connected with the main return close to the boiler, such a system should give good service. L. C. C.

THE BELL AND THE PENCIL.

Many a florist has been saved from a crippling loss by the tinkling of a bell, and in places where there is no night fireman the prudent man installs a thermostat. The Parker Mfg. Co., Boston, has installed thousands of such for greenhouses, or rather has sold them to florists who have installed them themselves, so easy are they to put up. All you have to do, get two cells of battery, Sampson or Le Cleche, and the necessary wire and bell. The thermostat is arranged with binding posts to be connected with wires and can be set at any two points on the entire scale, so that the bell located in the owner's sleeping-rooms will ring if the temperature goes either below or above the degree wanted. The cost of the whole outfit, and the work of putting it in, is so slight that it has no comparison whatever with the loss a grower would be subjected to if the contents of one house were lost by frost, as happened with more than one grower last winter.

The better stock a man grows the greater pains he takes in growing it, and in most of the big places where first-class stuff is turned out there is a recording thermometer in one or more of the houses, to show exactly what has taken place during the night, because each morning the owner of such an instrument has penciled upon a paper dial a record of the temperature of every minute through the previous day and night. When these thermometers first were installed in greenhouses their presence was resented by many night men, as indicating a suspicion of neglect of duty, but now quite a different view is taken, as these penciled dials are the strongest testimonial as to a night man's ability. A good man makes the pencil draw an even line along the degree called for, but a careless one causes the instrument to draw a wavy and uncertain mark which looks like a map of the Alps.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Supply of Mums.

A few years ago some growers of the dahlia, which was then the only flower in demand for All Saints' day, said that large chrysanthemums could not be grown around New Orleans. They soon found that Mississippi could raise them satisfactorily, and for a few seasons the chief part of the supply for New Orleans was drawn from that state. Today a great change seems to have taken place, as New Orleans does not depend on any other market for that flower. In fact, we do not see why, in the near future, all the northern growers will not come to New Orleans for the bulk of their chrysanthemums. We have now a few large growers making a specialty of them. They grow a crop of beans or lettuce during a few months; then all their ground is devoted to mums.

We do not need expensive greenhouses for this purpose. A raised bench, well protected late in the season with glazed frames, seems to be the ideal way to grow chrysanthemums to perfection.

Only a few more days and the millions of flowers we have around here will be cut and taken to the cemeteries.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Cut flowers are scarce here at present, and there is great demand for them for funeral work.

Gustav Bartholme, proprietor of the Woodlawn Greenhouses, has completed six new houses, located at 600 to 604 Manlius street. They are built on a wall of cement blocks, are connected, and cover 100x100 feet. They are fitted with the Quaker City ventilating apparatus and with the Pierce, Butler & Pierce B Advance boiler. Mr. Bartholme is raising general stock for the retail trade.

DULUTH, MINN.

The cut flower season seems to have commenced with renewed vigor once more. Mums, roses and carnations are as fine as ever. Trade is much better. Funerals, weddings and receptions keep the retail florist busy.

W. W. Seekins has just received a shipment of bulbs, which are in fine condition.

Among recent visitors were R. A. Latham, of Minneapolis, and E. F. Lemke, of St. Paul.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

Most of the cottagers have taken their departure and in consequence business is now down to its usual level. All the Bellevue avenue stores are closed, with the exception of that of Joseph Leikens, whose store will be kept open for at least another week.

Mr. Smythe, of Wadley & Smythe, visited Newport last week on business connected with the landscape department of the firm.

F. L. Zeigler is so far satisfied with his avenue venture that he has about completed arrangements whereby he can resume business there again next spring.

During a slight business lull Gibson Bros. are devoting a great deal of time and energy to putting their greenhouses on Malbone avenue in first-class order.

Oscar Schultz, while on a business trip to New York recently, made an extensive purchase of orchid plants, mainly cattleyas. Mr. Schultz believes that it will pay to grow cattleyas more extensively for the Newport trade than has been done in the past.

Stewart Ritchie is sending in some fairly good plants of Nephrolepis elegantissima. Zeigler is handling them.

Chrysanthemums are coming in now in quite large numbers, from in Newport and vicinity. The quality is fully up to the standard of former years. As usual, the finest blooms seen here are in the greenhouses of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, which shows conclusively that William Miller, who has charge of that department, knows how to grow them and grow them well. M.

LENOX, MASS.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Lenox Horticultural Society opened in the town hall October 23. The exhibits were unusually good and so extensive that the main hall could not afford sufficient accommodations. Experts declared that the display of chrysanthemums was the finest ever seen in the county. The exhibits were practically all from the private estates in the neighborhood, including those of Robert W. Paterson, William D. Sloane, Mrs. John Sloane, Giraud Foster, Charles Lanier, Mrs. Robert Winthrop, Mrs. John E. Parsons, George G. Haven and Morris K. Jesup. Some fine stock also was shown by R. H. Scoville, of Chapinville, Conn., Frank K. Sturgis and George H. Morgan. The judges were T. D. Hatfield, superintendent of the Hunnewell gardens at Wellesley; Robert Cameron, of the Harvard botanical gardens, James Ballantine and George Middleton, of Tarrytown, N. Y.

Pussy Willows.

The pussy willow has a peculiar charm to the flower lover, being the first harbinger of spring. This design is exquisite in its simplicity. An additional touch of life has been added in the shape of the live pussy, the mascot of the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, where this was considered one of the most tasteful baskets made by Charles Henry Fox.

TEACHING HORTICULTURE.

The Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst has just issued an illustrated booklet on the Division of Horticulture. In a letter to the alumni President Kenyon L. Butterfield says:

"It is my opinion that M. A. C. now has the best equipment for teaching horticulture—in buildings, apparatus and men—of any institution in the United States, and probably in the world. I say this advisedly. And why should not this be so? Massachusetts agriculture must necessarily concern itself to a very large degree with fruit-growing, market gardening, greenhouse work, landscape gardening and related lines.

"I hope you will take pains to make these facts known among your friends everywhere. We are able to offer special facilities to young men going into practical work, as well as to those preparing for investigational service; in fact, we ought to have here a large number of graduate students in horticulture."

FERNS.

What is the most satisfactory way for a florist with a small place, where bench room is scarce, to grow ferns, beginning after the bedding season is over, say the middle of June? Would you buy 2½-inch or 3-inch stock, plant them out in a bench or grow in pots? I will need between 200 and 300 plants in 5-inch and 6-inch, ready to sell by October 1. I should like suggestions in regard to watering, shading, etc. If the pot plan is advised, what size would you start with?
O. T.

If you use your benches for any other crop after bedding stock is gone and have some coldframe sash at disposal, you can grow splendid ferns in them. The sashes will need shading and the pots should be stood in a bed of coal ashes, not allowing the tops of the ferns to quite touch the glass. Ferns will make just as good and in some varieties better growth in frames than in greenhouses from June to the end of September. As you do not say what particular ferns are needed, I presume that nephrolepis, the most salable sort commercially, are specially in mind. If you do not need your benches after bedding stock is gone, you can plant your nephrolepis right in the benches, using four to five inches of loam and leaf-mold, and if your young stock is in 2½-inch pots you will have excellent stuff ready for potting up for winter sales in September. The Boston fern still leads all others as a seller. Probably N. Whitmani is the best of the sports and with least signs of reversion. N. Scottii has many admirers. It has narrower fronds than the Boston and makes a nice, compact plant. N. Elegantissima is similar to N. Whitmani.

Adiantums are always in demand. A. cuneatum still leads all others in popularity. It should be grown in pots, not benched. The same applies to any of the pteris, such as Wimsetti, Cretica, be unwise to shift from the smaller size to 6-inch. Try your adiantums and pteris in a frame and plant out the nephrolepis. You will find this will give good results.

ENGLISH IVY.

English ivy needs some kind of winter protection almost everywhere in this country. Small and medium sized plants may, perhaps, be as cheaply and conveniently preserved for future use by being lifted and potted and wintered over in a cool greenhouse as in any other way, but such a method is altogether out of the question when it comes to the work of protecting large plants on trellises or walls, or even those of like size trailing on the ground. The safest manner of protecting ivy on walls or trellises is that of covering them with cheap burlap. Spruce or hemlock branches, however, make a much cheaper covering than burlap and, if care is taken that they are properly put on, they will answer the purpose nearly as well as the more expensive material.

It must not be forgotten that during cristata, Mayii and others, and Cyrtomium falcatum and other ferns useful as pot plants.

Nephrolepis need less shade than the other sorts named. All the ferns enjoy a moist atmosphere, but do not need spraying overhead; in fact, it is hurtful to some. Plants in 2½-inch pots will be all right to start with. If kept in pots these will soon need a shift to 4-inch and later to 6-inch pots. It would winter ivy suffers fully as much from the effect of freezing and thawing at the roots of the plants as from the effect the same have on the wood and foliage. For that reason, then, it will be well to put a good covering of manure or leaves over the roots. Manure is preferable to leaves, because of the moisture it helps to retain in the soil.

No plant likes a soil frozen dry; conserve moisture by mulch.

New Display Rooms of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago.

WIENHOEBER'S DISPLAY ROOMS.

The retail store of the Ernst Wienhoeber Co. is located in the richest residence district of Chicago, within a block of the famous Lake Shore drive, with its mile of homes of millionaires. Naturally, in such a location there is a demand for the exercise of good taste in its superlative degree. The Wienhoeber store not only has been noted for the artistic character of its work, but it has achieved fame through several seasons' occupancy of the rooms above the store by Richard Mansfield, who not only was a great actor, but who had many friends in the neighborhood of the Wienhoeber establishment. The society editors often wrote of the gatherings in the rooms "above the florists' shop," and the editor of the Sunday supplement pictured Mansfield in his quarters there.

Since the death of Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Wienhoeber has decided that the best use he can make of the suite of rooms is to employ them for the display of his stock, and accordingly the three front rooms have been taken for this purpose. Hardly any change was necessary in furnishings or fixtures, except the addition of one or two cabinets. The accompanying illustrations show these rooms as they appeared October 31, on the second day of an opening to which the Wienhoeber Co. invited a selected list of flower buyers.

The large living room occupies the entire front of the building, over the store. Back of this is the dining-room and, farther yet, a former sleeping-room, which does not show in the illustrations but in which the walls are lined with display cases for vases, jardinières, fern-dishes, baskets, etc. One of the pictures shows the parlor-living room, photographed with the camera standing in the entryway. The old-fashioned fireplace is shown at the side, and in the corner a writing desk with its grandfather's clock. In the right hand corner, just out of range of the lens, stood a small table with a red-brown pitcher filled with Sunrise roses. At the left hand corner stands the piano. The other illustration shows the rooms looking from the living-room into the dining-room, the walls of which are occupied by cases of artistic novelties in the way of vases, window-boxes, ferneries, etc. In the window was a large vase of Beauties and on the table stood other vases of flowers. During the opening there was on display somewhere in the store a vase of each of the popular roses of the day and each one bore a label in order that customers might learn to call for the newer sorts by name.

Of the large number of visitors, not one failed to mention the artistic quality of these rooms, and Mr. Wienhoeber is of the opinion that by maintaining them he will add largely to the number of visitors to his establishment.

ENCHANTRESS VARIETIES.

I should like to hear about the experience of some florist who grows Rose-pink and White Enchantress, as to their productiveness, size and earliness, as compared with the original Enchantress. Will the Rose-pink take the place of the Lawson shade of pink? M. W. W.

This is our first season with White Enchantress and our second season with the Rose-pink variety, and we find that except for the color there is no difference between them and the original Enchantress. They are just as strong in growth and as early and free in blooming. Rose-pink Enchantress will never take the place of Mrs. Lawson, though I am not prepared to say that it is not a more desirable and more beautiful shade of pink. The two are in distinct classes of color, just as red and crimson are distinct, and while the lighter pink may be planted in increased numbers, and the darker Lawson shades may be cut down somewhat, yet as long as we have good varieties in each shade, both shades will continue to be grown as they are now.

It will, no doubt, be remembered that when Mrs. Lawson was being introduced, considerable doubt was expressed by prominent growers as to the desirability of such a deep shade of pink, the predominating varieties being of a lighter shade, such as Wm. Scott, Rose Queen, Edna Craig, Melba, Victor, etc. Mrs. Lawson, however, with her other good qualities, soon made a place for herself and gradually crowded all the others off the growers' benches, and out of the market. It proved, in a most convincing manner, that its color was no barrier to its popularity, when it offered size, stem and superior keeping and shipping qualities. Now that this deep shade is established as a class and new varieties are being raised in that class of color, and of first-class quality, there is little likelihood of its ever becoming unpopular. In fact, any variety, of whatsoever shade of pink, if it be a clear shade, will become popular if it is prolific enough to pay the grower well, and is large enough and handles well enough to make it desirable for the retailer to handle. And, by the same token, it might be said that whenever the varieties representing a certain color fall behind the procession in these qualities, that color will disappear from the market until another is offered which will rank with the best varieties of the day in the other colors. LAST SPRING'S NOVELTIES.

A few words about last spring's novelties will not be amiss. It is too early to pass final judgment on them as yet, but still, one will begin to formulate an opinion even this early and it is well to bear in mind how they have acted the early part of the season. Another season one can avoid mistakes if a variety shows up better later on, but failed to make a good showing early.

Winsor looks like a splendid thing in every way except the stem. We will have to get a longer stem on it another season, though it is coming up better now.

Beacon made fine plants in the field and what blooms we have had were of splendid size, but of poor color so far. Lately the color has deepened considerably, and in a few weeks it will likely be all right. Stem and calyx are fine.

Red Riding Hood is picking up rapidly now, and may prove worthy of a place, but up to date the color has been poor.

Red Chief is a free flowering, medium sized scarlet of fine color. We made the mistake of allowing it to come right into crop after being housed, instead of encouraging it to make a strong growth first.

Aristocrat made poor plants with us in the field, on account of not being pinched enough. It is picking up now, though, and has made some splendid blooms. It needs careful handling in the field.

Mabelle made fine plants in the field, and is making strong growth inside, but will be a trifle late in throwing its crop of blooms.

Bonnie Maid seems to want close pinching in the field in order to get a bushy plant. It comes in early, makes fine stems and blooms right from the start. Its color is a beautiful combination of light and dark pink.

Pink Imperial is throwing up the stems for which it is famous. What blooms we have had have been of fine quality, and we expect this variety to trot. It has the appearance of a long-stemmed Lawson. A. F. J. BAUR.

AZALEAS.

The inquiry for azaleas is not unfavorable, says a German contemporary, when one notes on the one side the extraordinary great numbers on offer, and the cheap prices which the Belgian nurserymen are inclined to take for their wares, which in consequence of overproduction have gone back to an extraordinary extent. Owing to the cool summer, the flower bud development is below the normal and not so regular as usual. The quality is on an average good, although the growth is mostly short and compact. As always, the early varieties well adapted for forcing are those mostly in request, and it is reported that in general the larger examples of these are already sold.

WIENHOEBER'S DISPLAY ROOMS.

The retail store of the Ernst Wienhoeber Co. is located in the richest residence district of Chicago, within a block of the famous Lake Shore drive, with its mile of homes of millionaires. Naturally, in such a location there is a demand for the exercise of good taste in its superlative degree. The Wienhoeber store not only has been noted for the artistic character of its work, but it has achieved fame through several seasons' occupancy of the rooms above the store by Richard Mansfield, who not only was a great actor, but who had many friends in the neighborhood of the Wienhoeber establishment. The society editors often wrote of the gatherings in the rooms "above the florists' shop," and the editor of the Sunday supplement pictured Mansfield in his quarters there.

Since the death of Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Wienhoeber has decided that the best use he can make of the suite of rooms is to employ them for the display of his stock, and accordingly the three front rooms have been taken for this purpose. Hardly any change was necessary in furnishings or fixtures, except the addition of one or two cabinets. The accompanying illustrations show these rooms as they appeared October 31, on the second day of an opening to which the Wienhoeber Co. invited a selected list of flower buyers.

The large living room occupies the entire front of the building, over the store. Back of this is the dining-room and, farther yet, a former sleeping-room, which does not show in the illustrations but in which the walls are lined with display cases for vases, jardinières, fern-dishes, baskets, etc. One of the pictures shows the parlor-living room, photographed with the camera standing in the entryway. The old-fashioned fireplace is shown at the side, and in the corner a writing desk with its grandfather's clock. In the right hand corner, just out of range of the lens, stood a small table with a red-brown pitcher filled with Sunrise roses. At the left hand corner stands the piano. The other illustration shows the rooms looking from the living-room into the dining-room, the walls of which are occupied by cases of artistic novelties in the way of vases, window boxes, ferneries, etc. In the window was a large vase of Beauties and on the table stood other vases of flowers. During the opening there was on display somewhere in the store a vase of each of the popular roses of the day and each one bore a label in order that customers might learn to call for the newer sorts by name.

Of the large number of visitors, not one failed to mention the artistic quality of these rooms, and Mr. Wienhoeber is of the opinion that by maintaining them he will add largely to the number of visitors to his establishment.

ENCHANTRESS VARIETIES.

I should like to hear about the experience of some florist who grows Rose-pink and White Enchantress, as to their productiveness, size and earliness, as compared with the original Enchantress. Will the Rose-pink take the place of the Lawson shade of pink? M. W. W.

This is our first season with White Enchantress and our second season with the Rose-pink variety, and we find that except for the color there is no difference between them and the original Enchantress. They are just as strong in growth and as early and free in blooming. Rose-pink Enchantress will never take the place of Mrs. Lawson, though I am not prepared to say that it is not a more desirable and more beautiful shade of pink. The two are in distinct classes of color, just as red and crimson are distinct, and while the lighter pink may be planted in increased numbers, and the darker Lawson shades may be cut down somewhat, yet as long as we have good varieties in each shade, both shades will continue to be grown as they are now.

It will, no doubt, be remembered that when Mrs. Lawson was being introduced, considerable doubt was expressed by prominent growers as to the desirability of such a deep shade of pink, the predominating varieties being of a lighter shade, such as Wm. Scott, Rose Queen, Edna Craig, Melba, Victor, etc. Mrs. Lawson, however, with her other good qualities, soon made a place for herself and gradually crowded all the others off the growers' benches, and out of the market. It proved, in a most convincing manner, that its color was no barrier to its popularity, when it offered size, stem and superior keeping and shipping qualities. Now that this deep shade is established as a class and new varieties are being raised in that class of color, and of first-class quality, there is little likelihood of its ever becoming unpopular. In fact, any variety, of whatsoever shade of pink, if it be a clear shade, will become popular if it is prolific enough to pay the grower well, and is large enough and handles well enough to make it desirable for the retailer to handle. And, by the same token, it might be said that whenever the varieties representing a certain color fall behind the procession in these qualities, that color will disappear from the market until another is offered which will rank with the best varieties of the day in the other colors. THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

Promptly at noon on Wednesday, November 6, the doors of the Coliseum were thrown open for the sixteenth annual autumn exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, and the early visitors found the show in a state of completion rarely seen in any of the larger exhibitions. The management responsible for the present success is so thoroughly experienced in its work that all arrangements seem perfect and the big task of installing the exhibition moved like clock work.

The show is notable, especially for Chicago, for the large number and remarkable excellence of the chrysanthemum pot plants. In number they far exceed any previous exhibition and for quality they surpass anything heretofore exhibited by western growers. The example set last year by A. Herrington, with his enormous specimen from Madison, N. J., has inspired the local gardeners to surpass themselves. Also, the rules were so changed this year as to provide classes in which a number of growths could be carried up, previous schedules having called for plants with at least an inch of single stem above the soil. The principal exhibitors of pot plants are H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., and Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., but the gardeners of the wealthy members of the Horticultural Society are splendidly represented, Lake Geneva and Lake Forest having also sent many entries.

The arrangement of the show is after the excellent park plan of Jens Jensen. The floor is carpeted with sod, save for the walks, and the central space is reserved to the chrysanthemum pot plants. The arrangement is unanimously voted the best ever. The parks are all represented by big groups of palms, ferns and other decorative plants, and Mrs. Pullman and other private growers have sent their choicest. The Geo. Wittbold Co. also has several fine groups.

The decorations are not as elaborate as last year, when the great arch of the Coliseum was festooned with laurel roping, but many consider the effect fully as good. The steel structure is covered with a sky-blue, starred canopy, through which the brilliant electric lights depend, each group of lights in the center of a great wreath of wild smilax. The edge of the balcony is covered with autumn foliage, bringing the decorations down to the line of the booths underneath the balcony.

In the retailers' exhibits lies the one detail in which the show is not up to the preceding ones in the Coliseum. The retailers have not responded as it was thought they would do when a silver medal and $750 in cash were offered to stimulate their enterprise. Those who are represented are C. Frauenfelder & Co., the Geo. Wittbold Co., Julius Schnapp and Schiller the Florist. Frauenfelder has an elaborate booth of birch-bark, with wild smilax drapery, and a display of cut flowers and plants which will be changed daily. The Wittbold Co. has a solid bank of green in which there are vases of fine yellow mums, creating an excellent effect. The Schnapp booth also has a solid green background, with cut flowers attractively displayed. Manager George Asmus is responsible for the Schiller booth and has executed this with the same efficiency he has displayed in all the show arrangements. It is a garden scene, with a picture for a background, presenting a vista in harmony with the plant display.

In the corners at the south end are miniature greenhouses erected by the Foley Mfg. Co. and the John C. Moninger Co. In the Foley house gardeners are at work potting cuttings and shifting the pot plants. The Moninger house is filled with orchids and decorative plants and next to the wall is a hotbed filled with stock.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. maintains a table decoration in another section and A. H. Revell & Co. use one section for a dining-room scene. Another section is occupied by the benefit flower booth in charge of W. P. Kyle. Another is occupied by the Maywood Nurseries and Mount Auburn Cemetery. One section is given to a display of house plants which are to be given to the school receiving the most votes. Peter Reinberg has a section for a display of roses, one or two varieties at a time, which will be changed each day.

The annex is given to the nurserymen and they all have winter scenes, with cotton snow. The effect is fine. The Douglas nursery at Waukegan is especially to be commended for its group of evergreens. The Peterson Nursery has a fine showing of shrubs with autumn foliage effects and a path through the shrubbery leads to B. S. Gage's private office. Klehm's Nursery has one side of the annex and Swain Nelson & Sons another, each with a good display. Vaughan's Greenhouses has the side next the main building and the exhibit is staged on both sides of the wall, the principal portion being in the Coliseum itself, where there is a splendidly executed landscape scene, the path leading the visitor through the archway to the other side of the exhibit in the annex.

Among the trade displays on the opening day, and not for competition, were a table of orchids from Lager & Hurrell, staged by C. W. McKellar; a fine bed of valley in pots from H. N. Bruns; a group of begonias, Farleyense and ferns from J. A. Peterson; some fine Ficus pandurata, crotons, dracaenas, etc., from the Robt. Craig Co., Philadelphia; two fine exhibits of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, one from Wm. P. Craig, Philadelphia, the other from Edward Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis. Other trade displays will be added from day to day, with the carnations, roses and floral work that are to be later features.

Chrysanthemum Cut Blooms.

The chrysanthemum cut blooms were not as numerous as in some years and they no longer were the chief feature of the show, as in times of old. As a matter of fact, all save the vases of fifty, were relegated to a corner of the building under the balcony. The judges are, W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; J. T. Temple, Davenport, Ia., and they have their hands full, and judging a slow process because of the uniform high quality of the stock. Up to 6 o'clock, on Wednesday, they had covered nothing but chrysanthemum cut blooms, the awards being as follows:

Fifty blooms white, D. C. Noble, Columbia City, Ind., first, with Mrs. Robinson; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, second, with Eaton; Wietor Bros., Chicago, third, with Eaton.

Fifty blooms pink, H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., first, with A. J. Balfour; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., second, with Amile David; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third, with Enguehard.

Fifty blooms yellow, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; D. C. Noble, second; H. W. Buckbee, third, all with Appleton.

Fifty blooms any other color, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Schrimpton; Wietor Bros., second, with Intensity; Gunnar Teilmann, Marion, Ind., third, with Julian Vuillerpet.

Twelve blooms white, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., first, with Beatrice May; H. W. Buckbee, second, with Alice Byron; Poehlmann Bros. Co., third, with Eaton.

Twelve blooms yellow, not darker than Bonnaffon, Smith & Son, first, with Crocus; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Yellow Eaton; J. A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., third, with Yellow Eaton.

Twelve blooms yellow, darker than Bonnaffon, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Appleton; H. W. Buckbee, second; E. M. Barton, Charles Reardon, gardener, third, with Appleton.

Twelve pink, lighter than Vivian-Morel, H. W. Buckbee, first, with Robertson; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Enguehard; Wietor Bros., third, with Detroyat.

Twelve blooms pink, not lighter than Vivian-Morel, H. W. Buckbee, first, with Enguehard; D. C. Noble, second, with Vivian-Morel; Nathan Smith & Son, third, with Balfour.

Twelve blooms red, J. A. Salzer Seed Co., first, with Intensity; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Schrimpton; E. M. Barton, third, with Intensity.

Twelve blooms bronze, H. W. Buckbee, first, with Mary Ann Pockett; E. G. Hill Co., second, with Dubuisson Foubert.

Twelve blooms any other color, E. G. H. Hill Co., first, with M. Louseau Rousseau; H. W. Buckbee, second, with Charles Longly; E. M. Barton, third, with Harrison Dick.

Collection of twenty-five varieties, one bloom each, H. W. Buckbee, first; E. G. Hill Co., second; Nathan Smith & Son, third.

Collection of twenty-five varieties, one bloom each, shown on mossed boards, H. W. Buckbee, first; E. G. Hill Co., second; Nathan Smith & Son, third.

Display of pompons, E. G. Hill Co., first; Nathan Smith & Son, second.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its twelfth annual show October 31 and November 1, and for the quality and quantity of the products exhibited it was away ahead of its predecessors. This year the exhibition committee made some changes in the layout of the exhibits and the result was voted the prettiest show the society ever held. One solid bank of flowers, which were chrysanthemums on short stems, filled a table 175 feet long, and seemed to constitute the chief attraction.

It was unfortunate that W. Duckham and A. Herrington were unable to be competitors this year, owing to deaths in the families of their employers, but with that handicap, the show was, to the visitors, a revelation as to the immense number of high grade flowers produced in this section.

The principal prize in the mum classes was $50 for twenty-four flowers on 12-inch stems, in twenty-four varieties. This was won by C. H. Totty, with Wm. Turner, of Oceanic, second, and Wm. Lyons, Morristown, third. The flowers set up in this class were superb, and it is an open question whether such another exhibit could be set up elsewhere. The winner's varieties were Beatrice May, President Viger, M. Hankey, F. S. Vallis, Merza, Mrs. H. Partridge, Col. Appleton, Mrs. T. W. Pockett, Mrs. D. V. West, Reginald Vallis, M. L. Rousseau, Mrs. Geo. Hunt, Armand Detroyat, Mrs. J. Dunne, Ben Wells, Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, Montigny, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Nellie Pockett, O. H. Broomhead, Mary Donnellan, Mrs. Norman Davis and Mary Mason, the latter four being novelties not yet in cultivation. Wm. Turner had splendid flowers of Pres. Loubet, Beatrice May, F. S. Vallis, and G. J. Warren in his exhibit.

The thirty-six flowers in six varieties was also won by Mr. Totty, with Wm. Lyons second. The winning six were M. L. Rousseau, Col. Appleton, Nellie Pockett, F. S. Vallis, W. Etherington and Reginald Vallis. Eighteen flowers in six varieties was won by John Downing, Morris Plains, with James Fraser a close second. In the class for twelve in twelve varieties, conditions were reversed, Mr. Downing running second to J. Fraser's first. Mr. Fraser was also successful on ten white and ten pink, six white and six pink. Mr. Fraser's Duckhams are always a feature of this show. This year with the white Duckham, or Miss Clay Frick, as it should properly be called, he did the same in whites and the flowers were better at the close of the show than when staged. Mr. Downing also did finely, winning the Kahn silver cup, the Rickards special and the Hammond special.

C. H. Totty won for twelve yellow with Appleton and on single varieties and collection of pompons. Peter Duff won for six flowers, any other color, with Glenview, and A. R. Kennedy won on six yellow with immense Mrs. Geo. Hunt.

Mr. Fraser won for six flowers of 1906 introductions, and Harold B. Vyse won the six of 1907 introductions, Mr. Duff taking the six flowers of any six varieties. Particularly noticeable in his exhibits were Mrs. W. Duckham and Beatrice May.

In the groups of chrysanthemum plants in flower with foliage plants, Mr. Downing was first, H. B. Vyse second, and John Jones third. Peter Duff showed himself invincible in specimen plants, as usual, Mr. Downing running second. Six plants in flower was won by Mr. Lyons, with H. B. Vyse second.

The rose classes were poorly filled, though the quality was high. L. A. Noe won first for eighteen Beauties, twenty-five Bridesmaids and Brides, and second on Richmond, S. Wyatt running second in Bridesmaid and L. B. Coddington second in the Beauty class. Frank L. Moore got first for Richmond and twelve Brides and W. J. Badgley first for twelve Richmond and twelve Maids.

In the rose classes open to private gardeners only, Andrew Kennedy got first for six Beauty and second for six teas and six Richmond, first in the last named classes falling to Peter Duff and E. Reagan, respectively.

Competition in the carnation classes was stronger than ever before. Edward Reagan got first for three vases of twelve blooms each, and Jas. Fraser second. Andrew Kennedy got first in twenty-five, one variety, with Philip Cox second. John Downing won the Pierson special for twenty-five Winsor, Jas. Fraser second. Wm. Inglis won for two vases of twelve blooms each, and C. H. Totty the single vase. The principal varieties shown were White Perfection, Victory, Enchantress and Robt. Craig.

The violet classes were won by W. J. Herzog and Peter Duff.

In the vegetable classes Jas. Fraser covered himself with glory, winning the Boddington special and the Burnett Bros. special. Mr. Vyse captured the Henderson prize, and Mr. Lyons the celery classes.

Certificates of merit were awarded to Dailedouze Bros., for a fine vase of Afterglow carnations; to Lager & Hurrell, for a table of orchids; to C. H. Totty, for collection of single varieties; to A. T. Boddington, for Cosmos Lady Lenox; to A. R. Whitney, for splendid bunches of grapes; to Andrew Kennedy, for Cattleya labiata, and to Harry Turner, for new and entirely distinct celosias. Mr. Turner calls his strain Pride of Castlegould, and has refused many tempting offers to sell his plants. Jas. Fraser received a certificate for new coleus, which he expects to place on the market later.

Honorable mention was given to Brook Lawn Farms for a collection of trained chrysanthemum plants, which attracted considerable attention, one of which, a hen sitting on her nest, was particularly telling. Others were trained into boats, fans and several other designs.

The stage was grouped by Mr. Herrington, as usual, and the other positions by Mr. Duckham, and the gratuitous work performed by these gentlemen every year in so doing has made this show an event that is looked forward to with great pleasure by lovers of good plants.

The judges were Eugene Dailedouze, Wm. Hastings and Alex. Mackenzie.

NEW YORK.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America was unfortunate in having a heavy rain on the morning of staging its annual exhibition, in the rooms of the Merchants' Society, in New York. The quality of the stock is an advance over anything heretofore seen in the exhibitions of the society. W. Wells, the English exhibitor, who has sent blooms to previous eastern meetings of the society, sent a set of sixteen grand novelties. Among the leading trade exhibitors are R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, Nathan Smith & Son, C. H. Totty, and Thomas E. Meehan. A large number of gardeners on leading private estates also are represented with superbly finished blooms, among them being Messrs. Duff, Turner, Fraser, Smith, Wait, Kleinheinz, Bauer, Wingate, Proctor, Sorenson and Hale.

A. T. Boddington exhibits Cosmos Lady Lenox, F. R. Pierson Co. shows carnations, John Cook, of Baltimore, stages a new pink rose, W. A. Manda shows Dracena Mandiana, and there are many other exhibits.

The rooms are crowded. C. H. Totty, ex-president of the society, is receiving congratulations upon his election as councilman, at Madison yesterday.

ENGLAND'S ROSE SOCIETY.

From an English gardeners' magazine it is learned that this society continues to grow rapidly, and is increasing at the rate of 600 members per year. At the committee meeting held October 1, the secretary reported that 216 members had joined during the three months ended September 30. Next year the society will hold four exhibitions instead of three, two in London, and two in the provinces; the metropolitan show will be held at the Royal Botanic Society's Gardens, Regent's Park, July 9, and the northern show will be held at Manchester at a date yet to be arranged. The autumn show will, as usual, be held at Horticultural hall, but the date has not yet been fixed. The southern show has been revived for the purpose of enabling amateurs in the south to exhibit under the best conditions.

VIRGINIA POEHLMANN.

At the establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., one of the finest benches of early mums this season was a pure white sport of Mme. Paul Sahut, as shown in the illustration accompanying this note. August Poehlmann has named the sport for his daughter, Virginia Poehlmann. The form and substance of the flower are among its best characteristics. It is a fine, solid flower and a splendid shipper. The photograph reproduced was taken October 14 and shows a remarkable evenness in a bench of flowers grown without special care and purely for commercial purposes. The blooms were ready to cut a few days ahead of Touset.

The parent variety, Mme. Sahut, was a Calvat sort, imported and distributed in 1904 by Smith & Son and the E. G. Hill Co. It is white, edged with pink. It is not a tall-growing sort, usually about three feet when the crown bud is taken.

SINGLE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

[A paper by C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., read before the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York, November 6.]

The single-flowered type of chrysanthemum is not new, in the sense that it is a recent break from any other type, and yet it was, until the last two years, practically unknown by the majority of flower buyers in America.

There are several reasons for this, the principal one, perhaps, being that the public had been educated to the large flowers and could not see the money's worth in the more modest singles, putting them down in their own minds as merely outdoor hardy flowers. Today things are changing and the single varieties are becoming recognized at their true worth. I will confess that it was the working of the old law of supply and demand that caused me to turn to the single varieties.

Americans traveling in Europe and noting the many beautiful types of singles, and the varied uses to which they were put, asked their superintendents why these singles were not grown more in America. As in every walk of business life, the demand created the supply, and today I can point you to many private establishments where the singles are grown in ever-increasing quantity for conservatory decoration, as pot plants, and where they are highly appreciated for cut-flower use.

Popular in Flower Stores.

One day last week I spent a few minutes in a high-class retail store. On the counter were two vases of singles, one Kitty Bourne, a yellow, and the other Ladysmith, a light pink. During those few minutes I noticed that two sales were made of those varieties, and, though it may be only a straw, does not the old proverb say that a straw shows how the wind blows?

Virginia Poehlmann and Her Mum.

Aside, however, from the financial side of the question, the singles make beautiful pot plants, they are easy to grow, and there are few homes the occupants of which cannot enjoy them if they care anything for flowers at all.

There is no fear that the singles will displace the big flowers, either on the show table or for large decorations, but both have their place and should be recognized.

Society's Attention Suggested.

I am not aware that the Chrysanthemum Society of America has ever made provision in its classification or scale of points for the single-flowered type, but I submit it to the executive board for consideration at some future date. The American hybridizer is busy raising new singles, and if the C. S. A. will give him encouragement and an ideal to strive for I think we could soon see wonderful improvement over present types. I do not happen to know the scale of points of the British society, but for the sake of uniformity it might be well, perhaps, in case this society takes up the matter, to find out and see how they would apply to our own case.

A good type of single to my mind should be, first, dwarf in habit. The weedy, loose growing forms are not so well adapted for pot plants, nor do they make the showing as a cut flower that the dwarf, closer type does. The flower should be almost flat when opened. If the petals droop too much it destroys the shape of the flower, which should be circular. Also, the flower should not have too many rows of petals. A semi-double flower cannot be called a single in any sense of the word. If one add to these qualifications a flower of good, clean color, the result is a thing of beauty, which, if not a joy forever, is at least a source of great satisfaction to the grower, and a boon to the gardener who has to produce a good deal of stock from a limited space.

Of Simple Culture.

Culturally, the singles present no problems to master. There is no question of crown or terminal buds, since the plants are allowed to develop naturally, and, of course, give flowers only from terminals. I find it pays to disbud slightly, as the flowers then come much finer, and the plants respond to generous feeding as readily as do the big flowers.

A selection of good varieties would run about as follows:

White—Miss Irene Cragg, Nancy Perkins, Gertrude, Miss T. C. Warden and Merstham White.

Pink—Ladysmith, Mrs. E. Roberts, Gracie Lambert, F. W. Smith, Reine des Roses, Katie Covell and Marvel.

Yellow—Kitty Bourne, Lily Beer, Golden Star, Miss A. Holden, Pretoria and Kathleen Bunyard.

Odd colors—Mary Richardson, salmon red, one of the finest we have; Crown Jewel, a fine bronzy yellow; Belle of Weybridge, chestnut; Felix, chestnut; Linton, large flowered deep blush; Rev. W. E. Renfrey, crimson maroon; Ethel Beer, bright terra cotta.

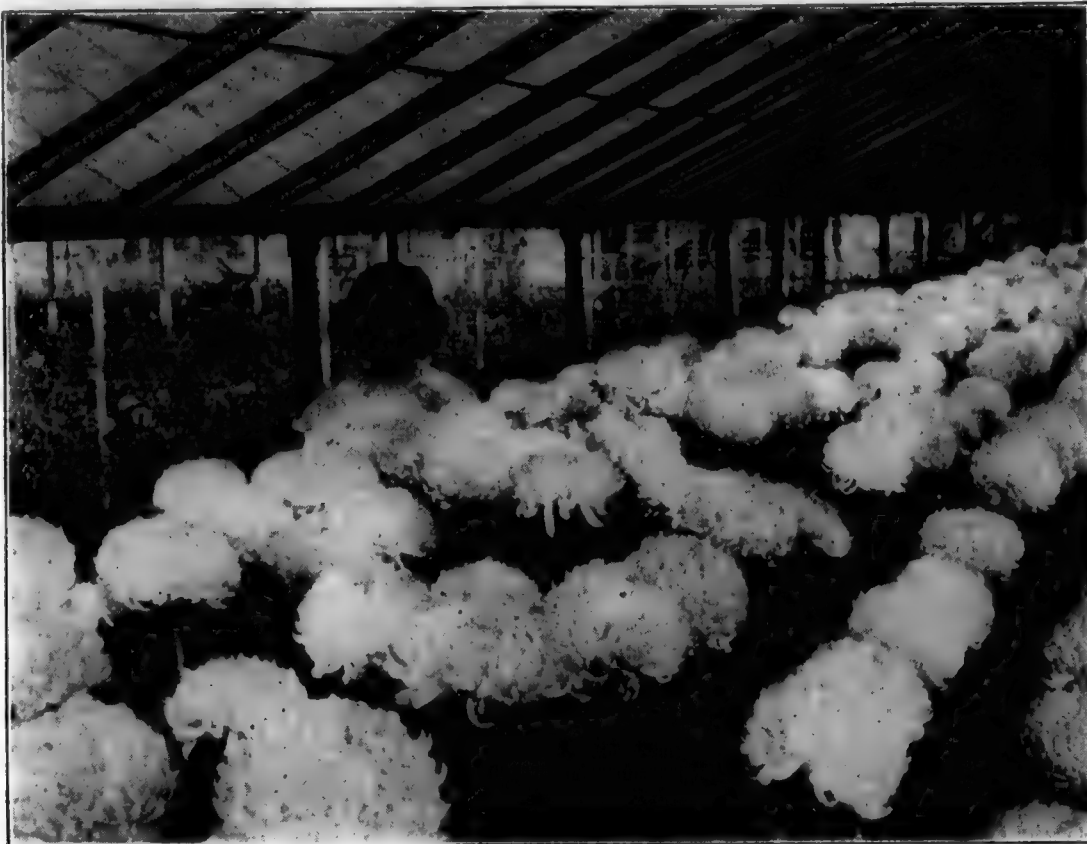

The list of varieties runs into the hundreds, and all have some merit, though many are almost identical in color, and one naturally looks for the cream only. In conclusion, gentlemen, permit me to say that few plants will give better return for the amount of time and trouble involved in their culture than the once despised single chrysanthemum.

load of well rotted barn manure (preferably that from cows) to every two or three loads of sod. Stack it six feet high, and leave a flat surface for water to thoroughly soak it and assist in its decomposition.

If you stacked it early in the fall you now can chop down and mix over the pile. If made now, the mixing can be done in April after frost has gone.

Some growers decry this piecemeal mixing of compost, but we have yet to find a superior way of preparing soil to grow good roses, carnations, violets, mums and, in fact, any other bench crop. It answers, we find, very well for many pot plants. Of course specialists may not approve of this mode of preparation, but it answers admirably for the average florist who handles a variety of crops and cannot go to the trouble of preparing a number of mixtures.

Some of your plants to be grown in pots will not need any manure in the soil in their early stage of growth, so reserve a pile of pure sod to use for them. Get good sod, even if it needs a longer haul and costs more. The best is usually the cheapest in the long run.

Miscellaneous Composts.

In addition to loam, a good supply of which will need to be placed under cover before the ground freezes tight, you should have some of that valuable and necessary medium, leaf-mold. Save your leaves and stack them each year. Turn once or twice, and in two years you will have a supply of excellent mold, than which nothing is better for seedling-raising and for adding to the loam for many plants. Be careful not to mix pine needles in your leaves. An experience of these has been that they almost ruin the mold.

Sand is another necessity, it being needed not only for propagating but for adding to the compost for many plants. Secure a good supply of sharp sand now.

Well rotted and dried cow and sheep manure are both of great value, being better than the manure from horses or hogs. You cannot go wrong in placing some of this where it is at least protected from the weather.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Preparing Composts.

Autumn is the season when the florist must needs gather together a bountiful supply of compost to last him for another year. If a sufficient quantity has already been stacked, all the better. If not, an early opportunity must be taken to secure it, as the ground may freeze up tight at any time and the frost king may not release his grasp until April, a season when work overwhelms us on every side and when we have less leisure than now to secure what we need.

The supreme importance of good compost cannot be overestimated. We may have good houses, a fine heating system and every other advantage for the production of good crops, but if our soil is below par we cannot hope to compete with our neighbors, who have paid more attention to their soil. How many florists there still are who continue to use over old soil for their carnations, roses or chrysanthemums, merely mixing some rotten barnyard manure or chemicals with it and planting their crops right in it! Common sense tells us that we cannot get the same returns from exhausted as from fresh compost, yet hundreds from a spirit of false economy persist in using the old soil.

Secure Good Composts.

Progressive florists would never think of building greenhouses until they had assured themselves of an abundance of good loam, either on their own land or within easy haul. It pays in the long run to secure good pasture sod, with plenty of fiber, even if it costs considerably more per cubic yard than the loose loam you can purchase from some nearby contractor who is excavating cellars for some of your neighbors.

Land which has been in pasture for a number of years makes the ideal compost. The tougher and more fibrous it is, all the better. Cut the sod four inches thick, stack it in square piles and add a

Moss, either from the woods or that from swamps, commonly known as sphagnum, is useful for bottoms of pots for covering drainage or for packing plants you may have to ship away.

It is possible that we may have open weather for some weeks yet, but it is better to be on the safe side and get the necessary constituents for your compost together now, rather than when snow and ice have covered them.

Chrysanthemums for Stock.

Many of the mums will be cut now and you will have much needed space for other crops. Be sure to reserve an ample supply of stock plants of kinds you intend to keep. Do not put these in pots or boxes under the benches, or in any out of the way place. If possible, plant them in a bench in a cool house; one just clear of freezing is ideal. Treated in this way, you are certain to have an abundant supply of sturdy cuttings when you want to propagate. If you cannot spare a bench, put them in flats in a cold house or pit; if you have frost-proof frames, plant in them, as many do. A little frost at times will not hurt them if they are allowed to thaw out in the dark. Select vigorous plants for stock and throw away kinds which have become superseded.

Marguerites.

With the passing of the early and Cinerarias.

Those spring blooming plants, the cinerarias, make rapid growth now that the weather is cooler and soon fill their pots with roots. As a rule, 6-inch pots are large enough for commercial stock, but if specimens of good size will sell, it will pay to shift them into 8-inch. Give them a tolerably rich compost for their final potting. Fibrous loam, dry cow manure, sand and a little fine bone grows good plants. Press the soil quite firmly and continue to grow as cool as possible; 40 to 45 degrees at night is better than 10 degrees higher. Keep some fresh tobacco stems scattered among the pots to hold green aphids in control.

Hardy Lilies.

It is usually November before the supplies of such lilies as auratum and speciosum come to hand. Each of the two varieties named has some commercial value, speciosum album being especially useful. If you want some of these to bloom next summer inside, get them into the soil right away. Better not use too small pots. Those seven and eight inches in diameter and holding three or more bulbs each answer well. Boxes six inches deep also answer well for a large number and where the flowers are all cut this is good enough to grow them. After potting, give one good watering and then keep somewhat on the dry side until the roots are running freely around the sides of the pots.

To follow the pot plants, which can be stood in any cellar or shed just clear of freezing, a good batch can be planted outdoors. Place the bulbs nine to twelve inches below the surface, bedding them in sand, and give a winter mulch of strawy manure or leaves after the ground is hard frozen.

The present is also a suitable time to plant nearly all hardy lilies. Do not make a mistake and put them in the soil as shallow as tulips or daffodils. Even the smaller-bulbed sorts do better eight to ten inches below the surface, and none of the larger ones should be set less than ten to twelve inches deep. In Japan many are found growing luxuriantly at double these depths, and many failures in growing hardy lilies are due to too shallow planting. A little shade, a summer mulch and deep planting in ground well drained are essentials to success with hardy lilies.

Brief Reminders.

Move lilies on to the benches as soon as they are nicely above ground. Guard against overwatering, which is a cause of failure and diseased plants.

Keep mignonette disbudded and supported; 45 degrees at night is sufficiently warm. Give plenty of ventilation and feed the cut coming along for Christmas.

Allow flowers to develop on Lorraine begonias wanted for Thanksgiving sales. If not needed until Christmas, pinch off flower buds until the middle of November. Afford the plants full sunshine.

Plant out any antirrhinums, left over in pots, in benches from which mums have been cleared.

Finish up planting of Dutch bulbs as soon as possible. Weather for this week has been ideal, but can hardly last much longer.

Keep gloxinia bulbs in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees and be sure water does not reach them, to excite premature growth or cause rot. Keep fancy-leaved caladiums in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees.

Spread out the little geraniums as you have space to spare. Keep them on the dry side for some time.

Practically all shading can now be removed from foliage plants. Adiantums will be of better color if shaded, but nephrolepis does not now need it.

On warm evenings do not shut off all midseason mums you will be able to give marguerites more room. They are rapid growers and need frequent repotting, compared to the majority of flowering plants. The earliest and largest plants propagated last spring should now be large and bushy and if well matted with roots will be benefited by manure water every few days; but, as with all stock, use it weak at first.

These plants are valuable at Christmas and are always in demand. To flower for the holidays, old plants are the best. If in a light, airy house these should now be commencing to flower. Keep succession batches potted on as they require it. You can still secure nice Easter stock by inserting cuttings now. For Memorial day you can propagate even later. Plants in benches or in pots allowed to root through into the benches are less liable to give you a Christmas crop than those closely restricted to their pots.

heat from any of the houses. Rather allow a little warmth to circulate in the pipes and ventilate freely to preserve a buoyant atmosphere.

The present is a good time to plant hardy roses, provided they are afforded proper winter protection.

Do not forget to fumigate once a week. It is better not to see any pests. It is poor policy to wait until they are swarming and smoke heavily, injuring some of your more tender plants.

AT AUBURN, N. Y.

The illustrations on page 10 are from photographs taken at the establishment of Dobbs & Son, Auburn, N. Y. One picture shows the range of greenhouses, photographed from the carnation field in the rear. The other picture is from a snapshot of the delivery outfit, which is a standing advertisement for the firm.

Dobbs & Son say that business with them has been exceptionally good, not only this fall, but all summer. They attribute this largely to persistent advertising, in which they are firm believers. They are using all possible methods of reaching the buyers, including newspapers, telephone and city directories, street car cards and circulars. They believe newspaper advertising to be most effective, but consider its value added to by the constant showing their name receives in other methods. They are up-to-date in all their equipment, not only in the greenhouses but in the office as well, as they recently added a card index of customers and a filing system, which makes it possible to economize both time and space.

E. H. Dobbs is the youngest florist in business for himself in his section, being only 28 years of age. He has been at the business all his life, working for his father until he was 20 years old, when he was taken into partnership. He bought his father's interest in the business in May, 1906, but continues it under the same firm name.

DETROIT FLORISTS' CLUB.

Annual Outing to Mt. Clemens.

On Friday, November 1, another outing was added to the long list of annual outings at the Bath City, by the Detroit Florists' Club. On this occasion, as on some previous ones, they had as guests a large number of Toledo florists, among them Messrs. Bayer, Mills, Barrow, Peck, Peck, Jr., Kruger, Schiller, Wortz, Miller, Miller, Jr., Searles, Phillips, and Gallier. Just thirteen, and on a Friday! No wonder the rear of the car was stove in by a runaway freight car. Luckily no one was injured.

The car was hardly under way when cigars were passed around by Albert Pochelon, on the strength of a baby boy.

The first stop was made at J. F. Sullivan's greenhouses. One of the features of this place is a fine house of Killarney roses. The mums looked especially good, with the exception of a lot of Enguehard, the foliage of which suffered from overfeeding. The inner man was here well provided for.

Leopold Mallest grows Lawson, Enchantress, White Perfection and Boston Market. All these were in splendid condition. A house of violets was coming along nicely after having received a setback from poor soil. Mr. Mallest became famous in this locality last year on account of his violets.

From this place it is but a short distance to Breitmeyer's large span of glass, where the visitors found a table literally covered with good things to eat and drink.

Breitmeyer's roses look fine, La Detroit, Killarney, Richmond and Beauty, especially so. Killarney is Fred's favorite this year, and he intends to grow many more in 1908. Chrysanthemums are not being grown in as large numbers as before, the fancy ones being grown at their Mack avenue place, but what stock they are growing is good. The carnations promise to bring in good returns this season. White Perfection is the favorite white variety. Beacon is the favorite red. Winsor is liked very much. Craig, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Lawson, Victory and several others are grown and they have a number of good seedlings of their own. Between the Beauty houses, which were formerly separate, they have built small houses which are devoted to violets. From these they are already cutting some good flowers and the outlook is for a large crop.

Just across the way from Breitmeyer's is Robert Klagge's large span of glass. In the new boiler-room, two immense new boilers are waiting for winter. Mr. Klagge's place has always been known as a model one, and this season it surely is well worthy of the name. The stock in all the houses is in fine condition, with the exception of one house of La Detroit, which has been suffering from mildew all summer. One house of Kaiserin attracted particular attention; some of the stems must have been five feet long.

Just across the way are A. L. Stevens' greenhouses. Mr. Stevens grows nothing but carnations, but these are exceptionally well grown. Lady Bountiful, Lawson, Flamingo and Morning Glory are some of the varieties. Of course, the hospitality of this place meant some more refreshments and cigars for the crowd.

James Taylor was waiting at the door with a glad hand for everyone. The old shed which adorned the Taylor place for many years has given place to a long cross house which is to be devoted to smilax and other green stock. From the general appearance of things, it was easily seen that he has been busy during the summer. The mums are as good as we saw in Mt. Clemens. Mrs. Taylor provided some fine coffee, with sandwiches, doughnuts and apples.

Just another short distance and we arrived at John Carey's. To hear him tell it, one would think he grew the poorest stuff in the city, but if our eyes are not deceiving us, he was wrong. The carnations were fine. He has a variegated sport of Lawson that is a winner. The color is a delicate pink with dark pink stripes, making a very pleasing combination.

Carey's large shed is usually where the boys rest for a short time, and during the serving of refreshments the president called on some of the talented members for stories, songs, etc. Mr. Peck, of Toledo, recited a funny piece and George Browne, who has been called the Michigan poet, recited several clever things of his own composition.

A. Von Boeselager's place makes by far the prettiest appearance of any in Mt. Clemens. A new front of cobblestone and cement has just been added to the front end of one of the greenhouses, for it is the intention to do some retail business. The whole stock, roses, carnations and mums, was spoken of as being as good as any seen. White Enchantress showed up exceptionally well. After a photo was taken of the whole party, we were all fed again in the potting shed, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The Toledo boys thoroughly enjoyed themselves, at least so they all said. The Toledo club resulted directly from a visit of the Detroit florists to Toledo, several years ago. Since then the club has been growing steadily and now it ranks with the best of them. H. S.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The market last week can best be explained by the everyday phrase, "Nothing doing." Everybody complained of stock going to waste and the commission house was crowded the whole week. Everything is abundant, with mums standing above the others.

Various Notes.

Through the courtesy of Charles Sandiford we were able to see the beautiterations in its store at Cold Springs. A complete change was made and the store is now very attractive.

The fall flower show, which was proposed for this season, it seems will not occur. There seems to be no particular reason for not having it, but the matter seems to have been dropped entirely.

Conrad Forbach, Buffalo's begonia king, is again in evidence with a grand lot of plants for Christmas. A visit to his place makes you wonder how he does it. The houses were built years ago and are in bad condition. The grower's ability enables him to succeed against these conditions and it will not be long before he has a place that is modern in every respect. R. A. S.

A CORTLAND STORE.

Hike & Jones do a general business at Cortland, N. Y., handling seeds as well as plants and cut flowers and doing a wholesale as well as a local retail trade. The accompanying illustration shows the store and a part of the show house, which is sixty feet long. At the rear are the greenhouses, 250 feet deep. The decorations are those put up during a recent firemen's tournament in the town.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business in the cut flower line last week was not encouraging to the local retailers, who think that the dull week was owing to the present difficulty in obtaining currency. Large social functions are few and far apart. Funeral thought is to cut out luxury, and that means us.

There is plenty of good stock in the market for any and all work that comes in. As show weeks are at hand, chrysanthemums are at their height, and all the wholesale houses are receiving extra good stock in all varieties and are having a good demand.

Beauties are selling better, but fancy long are limited, and there are not any too many of the other grades. The smaller roses are plentiful, with only the first grades moving.

Carnations are cleaning up well each day, with fancy grades scarce. White has been in great demand. The sharp change in the market has had a beneficial effect on violets in color and stems, and the demand for them is very good.

Small white chrysanthemums in bunches, outdoor grown, sell well for funeral work. There is plenty of good smilax, adiantum and asparagus in the market.

Various Notes.

Adolph Brix, who celebrates his tenth anniversary with a grand floral exhibition, free to the public, spent a few days in Chicago last week buying plants for the exhibition, which opens November 7 and ends Saturday night.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., is sending C. A. Kuehn a fine lot of Uncle John roses. Mr. Ammann expects to be in Chicago during the flower show.

Charles Schoenle is making a pretty show of blooming plants at his store. He reports a good run in wedding decorations and also a number of large funeral designs last week. Mrs. Schoenle is among the best in arranging floral designs.

The Horticultural Society last week distributed window posters announcing the show. These are of the same design as those of the Chicago show. All the members of the society are hard at work for a grand opening November 12.

John Held, a florist living at 4722 Tennessee avenue, was robbed last week. His wife and one of the workmen were chloroformed while he was firing the boiler. Mr. Held arrived in time and held on to the robber, but before the police arrived he got away. A gold watch and some money went with him.

The Grand Leader, one of our largest department stores, has opened a plant department, which is in charge of Frank Buckshadt, lately with the Michel Plant and Bulb Co. They are daily advertising cheap sales and are doing a rushing business. No doubt, their next move will be to add cut flowers to this department.

Robert F. Tesson visited Chicago recently, in the interest of the Horticultural Society. Mr. Tesson will be married November 12 to Miss Harriet Wilkerson. The wedding will take place in the Christ Church chapel. The happy couple will be at home to their friends after January 1, at Sunny Point, West Forest Park. We extend our congratulations.

Tom Carroll, who a few years ago had an extensive greenhouse plant at Clayton, and retired on account of his eyesight failing him, had the worst of luck again last week. His house burned down, and his wife, who was trying to save him, as he is blind, was burned to death. He lived at 6170 Bartmer avenue. He lost everything he had. Great sympathy is expressed for him in the trade.

ful cosmos, Lady Lenox, the latest introduction of A. T. Boddington. The flower is a winner in every respect and will no doubt be grown extensively next fall.

The Wm. Scott Co. has completed al-work is a daily occurrence and this alone helps out greatly. As a number of retailers say, if it were not for this kind of work we might report the market as being very dull. With the money market in its present condition, the first ry C. Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., died November 3, after an illness of three weeks. She is survived by her husband and five children. Mr. Ostertag is well known in the trade throughout the country, and is a member of the Florists' Club and Horticultural Society, which extend their sympathy. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon from the family residence, 4727 Washington boulevard, to Bethlehem cemetery. A great many beautiful floral designs were sent by Mr. Ostertag's friends, expressing sympathy.

Florists Waldbart, Ayers and Newman, at Grand avenue and Olive street, are great attractions for the buyers in that district, with their fine window displays of cut chrysanthemums. An excellent trade is reported in these blooms, with good prices.

Henry Kohrs, manager for Grimm & Gorley, reports an abundance of funeral work last week. A chrysanthemum window display is attractive this week.

The Missouri Botanical Garden opened its free chrysanthemum show November 4, and it will be open for two weeks. The show, as usual, is held in a large tent near the main entrance. A large crowd was in attendance the first day.

The members of the St. Louis Florists' Club should not forget that on next Thursday afternoon, November 14, the club holds its regular monthly meeting in the Burlington building. Owing to the great number of visitors who are expected in town, extra preparations have been made by the officers of the club to entertain them on that afternoon, and an invitation is extended to all visitors to meet with us. President Wm. Young says there will be plenty to eat, drink and smoke for all who attend, and requests that all members attend who possibly can.

Charles Johann, son of the well known florist, Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., was married recently in Collinsville to Miss Anna Flahd, of Troy, Ill. The church in which the wedding took place was artistically decorated by Mr. Johann, assisted by his friend J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville. The happy couple will reside in a new house, built by the father on the Johann place. Mr. Johann is well known among members of the trade here, who extend their congratulations.

Among the visitors have been B. Eschner and M. Reukauf. J. J. B.

ANEMONE JAPONICA.

During the last half of September and the first half of October outdoor flowers, outside of asters and dahlias, are by no means plentiful. To those requiring an abundance of flowers which can be cut with long stems, there can be no better plant than the Japanese anemone, or Anemone Japonica. Propagation should be done in the winter, by cutting up the roots into small pieces, laying quite thickly in a propagating bed and covering with sand. Growths will soon start, and when a couple of leaves are made the plants should be potted off into 2½-inch pots and grown along in a cool house until the end of March, when they can be placed in a coldframe and planted outdoors a month later.

The plants will not flower so profusely or so early the first season as in succeeding years. After the second season they will produce flower stalks four feet in length, which are very fine in large vases and make beautiful table centerpieces. The flowers should be cut and their stems plunged in a tub of cold water over night before they are marketed or used for house decoration. In planting, select a sheltered location for a number of the plants, to avoid early frosts. A light freezing will not hurt them. In 1906 we cut flowers until November 1. A coating of leaves or strawy manure is needed after the ground freezes. Ground on which water stands in winter is unsuitable for anemones, as the roots will decay under such conditions.

Of the several varieties of Anemone Japonica we consider alba, single, pure white, the most chaste and useful. Whirlwind, semi-double white, is good, but less graceful either growing or cut. The common A. Japonica has two rows of rosy pink petals. Queen Charlotte is of a better shade, namely, silvery pink, with large semi-double flowers. Lady Ardilaun, single white with overlapping petals, and Lord Ardilaun, double white, are other good forms. It is surprising that these anemones are practically unknown commercially. They fill in a gap just before the chrysanthemum season opens, which should commend them to florists. The blooms partially close at night, which, however, does not destroy their popularity with critical flower buyers.

SEEDS OF LILIUM.

I am growing quite a variety of bulbs in the Puget Sound region and I would like to know something about the sowing of seeds of Lilium Washingtonianum. What is the proper time for planting? Any other information will be welcome.

G. G.

Lily seed is best sown as soon as gathered. Germination will commence the following spring and continue over a long period; in fact, seeds of some lilies will remain in the ground and not germinate until the second season after sowing. The seedbed should therefore be left undisturbed for a considerable period.

HOUSTON HEIGHTS, TEX.—W. A. Hawkins reports a fine business for All Saints' day, better than ever before. He had a nice lot of pot mums, grown outdoors in open ground, potted October 15, protected by 8-ounce ducking, well flowered by October 30, and all sold.

The REVIEW brings results.

THE trade and the public both like Carnation White Perfection.

CORRESPONDENTS will add to the value of their contributions if they will state the day of the month an event transpired, instead of writing it "Monday week," or otherwise leaving it to the reader to guess what day is meant.

A. J. LOVELESS, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, is of opinion that for size, color and finish, the magnificent blooms staged October 23, in his home town of Lenox, Mass., are not likely to be excelled at any exhibition this season. The growers were the gardeners who preside over the fine estates which abound in the picturesque Berkshire Hills.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

The Dun mercantile agency, in its review of general business conditions last week, said:

"Buying of necessities and seasonable goods in the leading retail lines has undergone no notable diminution. Country buyers continue coming to market in goodly numbers, many urging prompt shipments, and the bookings in the principal staples and holiday wares make a gratifying aggregate. Some reassortment orders appear in the textiles, indicating that consumption has already exceeded expectations. Reports as to mercantile collections are mixed, but slowness is more apparent at various points.

"Iron and steel contracts keep the furnaces and mills busy, and heavy deliveries continue of furnace product, rails, structural shapes and factory outputs. Activity is well sustained in forge and foundry work, heavy hardware, machinery, furniture and footwear, and the absorption of raw material generally is unabated, except lumber, which feels effect of lessened building demand."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Quite general satisfaction is reported as to the market in the last week. Shipping demand has been fully as good as usual at chrysanthemum season and local buying is up to normal. Supplies are rather more than equal to all requirements, with the possible exception of carnations, some orders having had to be cut last week.

The chrysanthemum rules the market. Quality has deteriorated, for the mid-season sorts are passing off, and the late kinds do not seem to be much earlier than usual, with the result that there has been a hiatus, during which we have had only the fag end of the earlier varieties. Only now and then is there a wholesaler who thinks he is getting as much for his mums as he received last year, but most of them say they are getting as much for them as they received two years ago, last year having been an exceptionally good season. The good late sorts are now coming on and it is to be hoped better prices are to be realized, but by November 5 the demand was exceedingly slow.

Rose crops are lighter than they have been, and the market therefore is stiffer, and not so much affected by the glut of small chrysanthemums. Maid and Killarney have lost their color, but Richmond is superb. Chatenay is not so greatly in evidence as at this season last year, when it was overabundant. Such varieties as Mrs. Field, Kate Moulton, Joe Hill and other specialty roses are selling well, but principally in the city. The crop of Beauty is not heavy, but orders can be filled if wants are made known sufficiently in advance of the hour of shipment.

Good carnations are quickly taken up, at satisfactory prices. Some of the stock is of splendid quality, but a larger proportion than usual at this date shows late benching. The New York violets are coming in heavily, perhaps because of a reported dull market in New York. The quality is excellent for the season and as high as $1 per hundred is obtained, but the market averages much lower. Home grown violets also are abundant, and the singles do not fetch as much as the imported doubles, although fragrant. There is a good supply of valley, lilies, orchids and other seasonable flowers. Green goods also are abundant.

Thanksgiving is only three weeks away.

Flower Show Banquet.

The Florists' Club's banquet to trade visitors will take place Saturday evening, at 7:30, at the Auditorium hotel. Those living within a radius of fifty miles of Chicago are expected to be members of the Florists' Club, and tickets will cost them $3 each. The guests from outside the fifty-mile radius are expected to be numerous. P. J. Hauswirth is in charge of the arrangements.

Popularizing a Rose.

Probably no new rose ever received so big a boost with the public as the Tribune gave Peter Reinberg's Mrs. Marshall Field in its Sunday issue, November 3, when a full page in colors was devoted to its exploitation as a flower show attraction. The picture was striking and among other things the story said: "No doubt the popularity of Mrs. Field contributed to the popularity of the rose. It instantly attracted attention. The rose which had been christened in her honor captivated Mrs. Field. She at once popularized it. The namesake rose outstripped all its competitors in the rose market. Mrs. Field ordered hundreds of the wonderful blossoms. She decorated her house with them at every affair at which she was hostess. She had the roses which bore her name on her table at every meal. When she sent flowers to her friends she sent Mrs. Marshall Field roses. Visitors to the big Coliseum exhibition will look upon the graceful, nodding flowers with added interest when they know that it has been a gold mine to its originator, Ald. Peter Reinberg, has already brought him a fair sized fortune, and is valued by him now at $40,000."

Weather in October.

The mean temperature in October was 53 degrees, exactly normal, but the rainfall was less than an inch and only two-fifths of normal. The wind movement, which has an important bearing on greenhouse heating, was 10,842 miles, a little greater than usual for October. There were ten clear days, ten partly cloudy and eleven cloudy. Killing frost arrived October 14.

October Business.

The footing of October sales gives average satisfaction. The early part of the month was considerably better than a year ago, but the slackening which took place in the middle of the month had the effect of overcoming some of the gains, and spoiled some good records. The last days of the month were satisfactory to all.

Various Notes.

While some houses report the All Saints' day demand from New Orleans as less than last year, and especially so for chrysanthemums, W. E. Lynch, vice-president of the E. H. Hunt corporation, says the southern shipping left them bare of stock.

The firm of Schroeder & Myer, at South Holland, Ill., has been dissolved. L. Schroeder will continue the business.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, was the first of the flower show visitors to put in an appearance. He arrived November 2. Mr. Valentine says business this fall has been the best ever known in Denver.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting chrysanthemums of a number of varieties never before seen in this market. They mostly are exhibition sorts imported by the E. G. Hill Co. The retailers like them to add variety to the window displays.

The A. L. Randall Co. has received a large importation of statice wreaths and other prepared designs for Christmas.

C. W. McKellar again is handling nice plants of Christmas pepper from the same grower whose stock he handled in quantity last season.

George Reinberg is cutting a splendid lot of Col. Appleton chrysanthemums. The foliage is as good as the flower, and not all growers can say the same this year.

Brown, the driver for the E. F. Winterson Co., fell down the elevator shaft in the store October 31, but escaped serious injury. He will be able to be about in a day or two.

Mrs. C. Paasch has returned from Colorado, where she has been since July. In the meantime the store on Halsted street has been managed by a daughter, who is her partner in the business.

Zech & Mann have this week been receiving a limited quantity of the Dr. Enguehard mum, which they thought the best stock in the market and held at $4 a dozen. Pink has been worth a little more money than white or yellow so far this season, but is now abundant.

Harry Rowe had a large funeral order for the Lehman family November 6. The casket cover was of violets and he bought 10,000 in the market Monday.

Joseph Ziska reports himself as well pleased with the cut of roses now being made at the Chicago Rose Co. greenhouses at Libertyville.

J. E. Franke, who has a retail store on Milwaukee avenue, spends his summers next to nature at a place he owns in the woods in northern Michigan. With Mrs. Franke, he returned November 2 after four months' fishing and hunting there.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says the growers should be well pleased with the prices carnations have been bringing in this market. He says that while the best stock may not bring more than it did last year, the lower grades are certainly realizing a great deal more than they did a year ago.

Mrs. Felke is again conducting the flower stand in the North-Western depot, Anton Then having decided to again wholesale his stock at the Flower Growers' market.

W. W. Randall returned November 2 from a three weeks' vacation spent at the family home in western Pennsylvania.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, has been selected to judge the big flower show to be given at Little Rock, Ark., November 14 to 16.

Weiland & Risch say they expect to be right in full crop for Thanksgiving. E. C. Amling says his growers of carnations certainly hit it right in October, cutting fair crops when the supply was light.

J. E. Jensen, of Jensen & Dekema, says they are more than pleased with the behavior of Carnation Defiance, which is doing splendidly. Mr. Jensen thinks it bids fair to excel all other reds. He says it is admired by everyone who sees it and orders for stock are coming in at a rapid rate. Defiance is one of W. N. Rudd's seedlings which will be sent out jointly by Jensen & Dekema and Mr. Rudd. Beacon, White Enchantress, Winsor and Aristocrat also are doing exceptionally well with Jensen & Dekema.

Wietor Bros. are among the largest exhibitors of mums at the flower show this week. They have probably as large a list of commercial varieties as any growers in the country, for they do a big business in cuttings and stock plants as well as cut flowers.

John Kruchten says his chrysanthemum growers will be right in line, with their heaviest cuts at Thanksgiving.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, and his committee of fifty on the national flower enough November weddings on the books to make every retailer happy.

A. L. Randall says the violet market this year undoubtedly has been lower than heretofore. He thinks this due entirely to increased production at Rhinebeck.

Beauties remain firm at 20 cents for the best, though an occasional grower declares his specials do even better. But the general average remains as quoted, and probably will until Thanksgiving. Maids and Brides are abundant and prices are low, even for the splendid quality of the best that reach the market. There seems no limit to the quantity arriving, and value is sadly handicapped by the tremendous flood of mums.

This week will see the inrush of mums at its height, and prices have gone down with sickening thuds. Here and there, where a wholesaler has an especially expert grower to depend on, flowers of abnormal size and finish may bring fancy figures, but for stock last year commanding $4 to $6 per dozen, the wholesaler is fortunate this year to average $3. From this, prices go on down to $1 per hundred. Never were retail windows more beautiful than now. The whole city is a chrysanthemum show. Even the streets are ablaze with the wealth of color and the autumn leaves accentuate the fascinating charm.

Carnations are as perfect as one can conceive possible, but the price has gradually fallen during the week until $2 per hundred will purchase about the best of them. "Too early yet for carnations," said one expert. "Wait till the mum is dead and they will quickly come into their own." Many of the new varieties and novelties are arriving, but the demand is light.

Gardenias are perfect and have held their price well up to the present. This week a slight recession is apparent. From 200 to 500 daily are handled by John Young, who predicts a certain continuance of their popularity. Orchids, violets and valley all feel the strain of the exceptional times, and will until the holiday. Booking of orders for the annual festival, however, are numerous already, and a fine Thanksgiving trade is anticipated.

The Wholesalers' Association.

The Wholesale Florists' Protective Association is, as one of its members expressed it, already a howling success. Such unanimity of opinion and general satisfaction as to immediate results is seldom seen at the launching of a new enterprise. Nothing but good can come of the scheme, and with hardly an exception the wholesale trade of New York is a unit in its appreciation of the plan. It is confidently predicted that within the month not a man in the wholesale cut flower ranks will be out of the circle of community of interest.

The leading retail houses are unanimous in commendation. They are the first to realize the fact that in the elimination of the slow and non-reliable element in the trade, will come increasing prosperity to themselves. It will put a premium upon reliability, and give for the first time in its history a stable basis for the wholesale market and a positive protection against serious loss. Reasonable credit, by the plans and by-laws of the association, is not refused.

The grower may well congratulate himself that through all the labyrinth of risk, and trust, and hope, that has surrounded the wholesaler's footsteps, his lines have fallen in pleasant places. Every week he gets his money. Fortunate grower! I wonder if he always appreciates the blessings that are his.

Various Notes.

John Young and F. H. Traendly leave for the west November 7, and will have a look in at the Chicago show.

Next Monday, November 11, at the Florists' Club's new rooms, Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue, the great meeting of the year will take place. It is chrysanthemum night and ladies' night. Henry Sexton Adams, of Wellesley, Mass., will lecture on school gardens. A fine display of novelties will be on exhibition. Nominations of officers for 1908 will be made and there will be an abundance of refreshments and music.

G. T. Schuneman, of Baldwins, L. I., celebrates his 'steenth birthday, November 9. His twelve houses formerly devoted to violets now house the Goethe carnation. The stock is handled in New York by Joseph Fenrich.

Samuel A. Woodrow has added a delivery outfit to his conveniences and reports a good autumn trade. His sources of supply extend to Europe and he handles a large variety of plants.

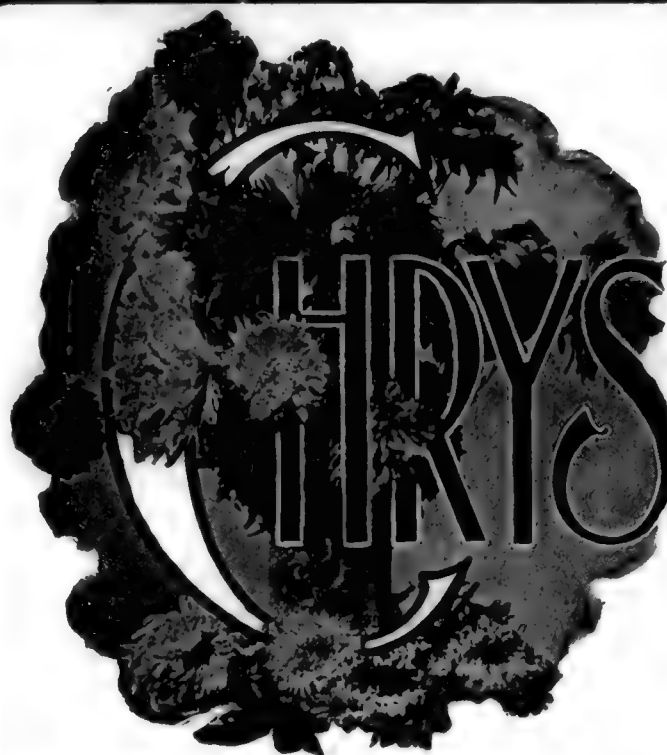

The sympathy of the trade is general in the severe illness of the wife of A. M. Henshaw.

M. Adler, at 31 Wooster street, reports a large demand for his indestructible pearl pins.

Perkins & Nelson have sublet a part of their store in the Coogan building. Their new ice-box, as big as a Harlem flat, is now complete.

Gunther Bros. say dahlia shipments have ceased after the longest season the dahlia has ever enjoyed. Messrs. Gunther have done a lion's share in popularizing this flower in New York.

street retail store of Thomas Young, Jr., October 31, a cross of valley and roses and a standing wreath of orchids being especially good. Mr. Young's handsome store on Fifth avenue is never without most attractive window embellishment, orchids and chrysanthemums now making the millionaires sit up and take notice as they ride by.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America is holding its annual exhibition and convention here this week.

Central park is having a big flower show this week.

The banks that shut up the funds of many florists, so they say, are all opening again.

Frank L. Moore is much interested in the hose business. Sunnywoods hose is a brand he liked so well for his own use, he decided to see what he could do toward getting florists, generally, to use it.

The Fellouris business is being continued under the direction of the referee in bankruptcy. The liabilities so far scheduled amount to only $3,142.59, excluding a contingent liability of $8,750 for rent of 52 West Twenty-eighth street, all the creditors, except two whose claim is for wages, residing outside of New York.

F. W. O. Schmitz's importation of azaleas has just arrived, splendidly developed stock and in fine condition.

H. E. Froment's big store is a fall exhibition every morning with mums and Beauties. The new wholesalers' organization meets with his hearty cooperation and approval.

Lecakes & Co. will have some holly for Thanksgiving, as usual.

H. Kenney, Brooklyn, has stored an enormous quantity of sphagnum, sheet and green moss this fall in anticipation of a big fall and winter demand. The wholesale shipments of moss reach into Sigmund Geller, of the Geller Supply Co., brought some interesting novelties from Europe and the last of his importations are arriving. The outside call for florists' supplies shows no sign of diminution. This is the testimony of every house in the trade.

The demand for John P. Scherer's oak leaf roping for large decorations keeps up and will until winter's icy hand strips the trees of their foliage.

Reed & Keller say they are away behind in shipments and their books are full of advance orders. The invention factory, too, is working overtime.

Charles Millang is again busy with his plant trade and has filled his greenhouse with a fine assortment of palms and ferns.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., says his violets now are quite up to the season's highest grade and that he has already booked orders for 100,000 for Thanksgiving.

DETROIT.

The Market.

A period of quiet seems to have come over the business in this city. There are any number of funerals, but there is not much work being done. Weddings are calling for a number of good decorations, but not enough to keep all busy.

Chrysanthemums cleaned up well all the week, with the exception of yellows, which are a glut on the market, just as in other years. Good whites are scarce; it is a wonder that some of the growers do not wake up after all these years of teaching. Pink just about meets the demand. Grasshoppers are destroying many chrysanthemums this year, as usual.

Beauties are moving fairly well; the $5 grade is about the best seller on this market. Roses are not at their best at present. La Detroit is producing small flowers. Bride and Maid are still none too good. Some fine long-stemmed Kaiserin are seen, but the shorter grades are scarce.

Carnations are still a scarce article on this market. From the appearance of things at Mount Clemens, there should be a better supply soon. Many good callas were seen at Bath City and these will come handy for work. Easter lilies are in good demand. Cosmos, snapdragon, pompons, etc., sell fairly well. Green is plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Greek who ran a flower stand for some time in the entrance to the Majestic building has found the rent too high and has vacated, going out of the flower business entirely.

Three of our hard workers were remembered by the boys last week. Just before leaving the Breitmeyer establishment, at Mount Clemens, last week, Secretary Sullivan presented the retiring president, Wm. Dilger, with a fine set of German drawing instruments, on behalf of the club members. Our secretary went on to say that there was no harder worker in the whole club, and no one who took more interest in its welfare. He said that, although at times the ex-president was rather gruff and quick-tempered, still, this is but the outside. In the inside there is a heart as big as that of an ox, and no one ever asked a favor but what he received it, providing it were in Mr. Dilger's power to give it.

The retiring president had a surprise in store for J. F. Sullivan, in the form of a fine solid gold watch. This also was from his fellow club members, for his untiring work for the club as secretary for the last six years. Mr. Sullivan was about the most surprised man the writer has ever seen; a photo of him at the time would have been a study. The watch has the recipient's initials engraved on the outside. Inside is the wording, "Detroit Florists' Club, November 1, 1907."

Walter Taepke, our present treasurer, in his second term, was also remembered by the members with a gold-mounted fountain pen. Walter was, of course, also much surprised, and when called on for a speech he was just about able to thank the boys.

That mums of medium size are the most popular can readily be seen. Most of the growers have given up the large, fancy varieties, as few people in this city are willing to pay the price for them.

Breitmeyer's had a large wedding decoration at Grace church last week, requiring several hundred yellow and white mums, as well as a number of lilies and cosmos. The pillars in the church were banked up with autumn foliage and Bostons. Down the center aisle, fastened to the pews, were large bunches of yellow mums representing torches, the whole making an elaborate effect.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums, of course, are in heavy supply, and little real improvement in cut flower conditions is to be looked for until they arrive in decreased volume. There are too many whites arriving; pink, as usual, sells the best, yellow being the next popular color. There is no great change in prices to be recorded.

Roses are of good quality, especially Beauty, Richmond, Killarney, Chatenay and Wellesley. Some of the latter have fine stems. Brides and Bridesmaids are extra good. Trade on all these is slow, however, and many are cleared out at low rates to fakers.

Carnations are abundant and coming with stems something like winter length. Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon, Victory and Octo-ron are notably fine. The Queen continues to be largely grown as a white by local florists, and is prolific. At present whites are selling better than colored varieties. Violets are steadily improving and are now of fine quality and selling somewhat better. Lilies continue scarce, but lily of the valley is in good supply. There are no special changes to be noted in other flowers, and greenery remains about the same.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the election of officers for the year 1908 will occur November 16. So far we have heard of no contests.

Present appearances indicate a first-class chrysanthemum exhibition November 8 to 10, entries having come in satisfactorily during the last few days.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions are rather depressing this week. With Thursday and Friday quiet, a rainy Saturday prevented that clearing up that gives tone to the market at the opening of the new week. Monday found the wholesale houses loaded down with fresh and left-over flowers, and with an unusually light demand. Tuesday, being election day, was but little better. The result will be lower average returns.

Some really fine chrysanthemums have made their appearance, yellow and white Eaton being conspicuous. Maud Dean has strengthened the pinks, while there are several other good sorts in all three colors. The medium grades are plentiful and, while they are in demand, the buyers have been complaining that there is not enough fancy stock at times to meet requirements. Roses, barring only American Beauties, have been entirely too plentiful, with many sales at low prices for quantity. Carnations have fared rather better, some choice stock in fancies and in white realizing good prices. Hudson river violets have made their appearance, but there is no special demand for violets of any kind just now. Orchids are rather less plentiful, cattleyas having decreased in quantity, and the other varieties have never been plentiful enough to exceed the demand. Pompon and single chrysanthemums are meeting with favor. There are a few nice sweet peas. The demand for autumn foliage is so strong as to suggest the wisdom of husbanding indoor greens for the days oncoming.

A comparison with the same period of last year shows that the market then passed through a depressing period during the first week in November.

The Coming Season.

It may be of interest to florists to know that the coming season is an exceptionally long one, stretching from Thanksgiving day, November 28, to Ash Wednesday, March 4. Easter will fall on April 19. Christmas and New Year's come on Wednesday.

THE DEATH ROLL.

William Kiefaber.

The death of William Kiefaber, Sr., which occurred at his home in Dayton, O., Wednesday, October 30, will be a great shock to his many friends in the trade. Mr. Kiefaber was in his usual health Monday morning, as he went to his business with the Miami Floral Co., of which he was vice-president and manager. At 10:30 a. m., just as he was preparing to return to the city, he was suddenly stricken with apoplexy. Mr. Kiefaber realized that he had received a stroke, and requested that a doctor be called at once. A few seconds later he lost consciousness, which he never regained.

Mr. Kiefaber was one of Dayton's best and most widely known business men. He was born in Philadelphia, May 22, 1843, and after a few years removed to Mt. Joy, Pa., in Lancaster county. From that place he removed to Dayton, in 1857. When the civil war broke out he joined Company A, of the First Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served for three years. It was during this memorable period that he was captured in Knoxville and kept a prisoner for eight months in the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina. Later he was captured by a guerilla band and held till the close of the war.

Returning to Dayton, he entered into the life of the place with vigor and earnestness, adding much to the progress of the city. In July, 1902, he opened the business of the Miami Floral Co., which is now one of the largest and most modern of its kind in that section of the state. Mr. Kiefaber has a large circle of friends who will greatly miss him. This was proven by the abundance of costly floral tributes, which were possibly more numerous than has ever been seen at one funeral in Dayton.

Hugh Chesney.

Hugh Chesney died at his home in Farmington, Conn., October 18, of typhoid pneumonia, after a short illness. Mr. Chesney was born in Newton Stewart, Scotland, in 1858, and came to America at the age of 16. He learned

The regular meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held November 1, President McGregor in the chair. The report of the show committee for the current year was read and accepted. A certificate of merit was awarded to Eric Wetterlow for a display of pompon and anemone-flowered chrysanthemums. James Salter had on exhibition several fine seedling anemone-flowered varieties, one lavender-colored flower being of especial merit, for which the society awarded him a special prize.

The subject for discussion was nitro-culture, being opened by William Till. Samples of the culture were used to illustrate remarks by the speaker. Cultures in liquid form were furnished by the Department of Agriculture, and cultures dried on cotton were furnished by Schlegel & Fottler Co. SWEET PEAS OUTDOORS.

I am now preparing my trenches to plant sweet peas in early spring, and wish to fill them with rich compost. Will the old soil that I used to grow carnations in last winter be all right to use for that purpose? A. R. W.

Soil in which carnations have been growing all winter must be pretty well exhausted and hardly what can be recommended for sweet peas, which prefer a moderately heavy soil, one inclined to be clayey being excellent. Good sweet peas are, however, grown in quite light and sandy soil if the ground is well manured and the plants mulched in summer. Fresh loam from a pasture would be better than your carnation soil. Add plenty of well-rotted cow manure to it and get your seed in as soon as frost leaves the ground in the spring. If you have no other soil at hand, mix one-third cow manure to two-thirds carnation compost and put in the trenches. The land between the trenches should also be well turned over and enriched, as the roots will run quite a distance beyond the trenches. C. W.

CUTTINGS OF FICUS ELASTICA.

Will you kindly tell me how to make cuttings of Ficus elastica? I have a plant with about seventeen shoots. Is it best to make them when dormant? O. H. C.

The surest method by which to root Ficus elastica is topping or mossing, as it is variously known. This operation has been described in the REVIEW before, but is briefly as follows: Cut halfway through the shoot to be rooted, making the incision about four leaves from the top. Then bind enough damp moss around the cut to make a lump about the size of a hen's egg. Keep the moss continuously moist and the plant in a temperature of not less than 60 degrees, and with these conditions fulfilled there is seldom any trouble in rooting the cuttings in from three to six weeks.

As soon as the roots show through the moss, the shoot may be cut off below the moss and potted in a 3-inch or 4-

FLOWER FOR NAME.

Under separate cover I have today mailed you a flower which I would like named. This is a native of Mexico, which I have succeeded in growing successfully, both outside and inside. I think it is one of the helichrysums.

J. J. C.

The flowers are of a helichrysum, but we cannot say what particular sort. Most of these are received from Germany in seed packets of six to twelve colors. Helichrysums, with other everlasting, such as rhodanthes and acrocliniums, are natives of Australia and Africa, but have probably become acclimatized in Mexico. They are all useful garden annuals. Rhodanthe Manglesii makes a specially good pot plant and is considerably grown for market in Europe. C. W.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE French seeds are already arriving at New York, earlier than last year.

IF anything in the line of seeds is really low in price, most seedsmen have failed to notice it.

Two boats, in from France, November 1, landed 4,300 bags of peas and 700 bags of beans.

WHEN all the returns from the bean fields are in, the crop estimators will realize how far out their figures were.

THE pea crops are about all in and those who ordinarily have plenty at this season of the year are about all out.

ON the boat from Marseilles, reaching New York November 1, R. M. Ward & Co. and Schulz & Ruekgaber each had twenty-nine cases of French bulbs.

VISITED CHICAGO: Alfred Emerich, of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France; Joe L. Ullathorne, of Ullathorne Seed Co., Memphis, Tenn.; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.

THE Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, has just completed another greenhouse 185 feet long. This makes a total of thirty-two greenhouses, which are devoted almost exclusively to growing plants for the mail order trade.

THE Herman Glass Seed Co., Rochester, N. Y., dealers in seeds and implements, has recently let the contract for a new feed mill and implement warehouse, 40x80 feet, and will push the implement end of the business.

THE onion set market remains firm at Chicago. The unusual skirmish to secure what sets were available for fall sale helped out considerably. The shortage in the crop is now known to be actual and not trumped up for effect, as was suspected by the doubters. This leaves the field open for legitimate trade and assures a steadily rising price until the end of the selling season.

FROM the wholesalers' standpoint, the old story about the seed traveler who used to wire to his customer that he would be passing through the town on the limited, and that he would accept an order conditionally if the customer would hand it to the porter, nearly represents the way things are at present. It does seem as though the buyer of seeds is seeking for the seller, and not the reverse, as is normally the case. When the retailer gets his turn it is to be hoped that he will find as easy sledding.

M. HERB, Naples, Italy, sends out a long list, printed in three languages, of novelties for 1908. Among them are Echeveria imbricata, with a long succession of waxy carmine flowers; Helianthus cucumerifolius plumosus, the little flowers of the disk changed to small feathers; Ipomœa purpurea flore pleno striata, a morning-glory resembling a gay tassel; Myosotis dissitiflora Elfriede, good for forcing and cutting; several other variations of popular strains in flower seeds, and a new mild pepper called Spanish Bull.

SWEET corn seed is going to be high. Some sorts are high now. A jobbing price of $5 per bushel for November is not so bad.

THE man who needs onion seed feels that the high price asked by the man who has some to sell will not help much in lessening the financial stringency.

THE CHICAGO PICKLE CASE.

At various times in the last two years the REVIEW has had occasion to refer to what has been called the Chicago pickle non-warranty case, which has now developed into a suit against H. W. Buckbee in the United States circuit court at Freeport, Ill. In brief, the history of the case is as follows:

October 17, 1903, H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., entered into a contract with P. Hohenadle, Jr., & Co., of Janesville, Wis., for the sale to Hohenadle & Co. of a quantity of seeds, among others being 300 pounds of cucumber seed known as Chicago Pickle, to be delivered f. o. b. Rockford. October 23, 1903, the same parties entered into another contract for the sale to Hohenadle & Co. of 3,500 pounds of cucumber seed known as Improved Chicago Pickle. The seeds were delivered in ample time according to the terms of the contract and it is claimed by Hohenadle & Co. that the growth of the seeds developed a different variety of cucumber and of less value.

These seeds were sold by Hohenadle & Co. to various parties over the country, some of them under contract to grow cucumbers for Hohenadle & Co. It is claimed that a quantity of these seeds were sold to one Philip A. Marsh, who in turn sold them to one F. H. Swett and A. W. Todd, copartners as F. H. Swett & Co. Some time after this Swett & Co. brought a suit, in the circuit court of Cook County, against Philip A. Marsh, possibly for the purpose of recovering a judgment against Marsh and giving Marsh an action over against Buckbee, as is alleged by Buckbee's attorney. Notice was served by Marsh on Hohenadle & Co. to appear and defend the suit, who in turn served notice on Buckbee. Buckbee ignored the notice and the matter was heard before Judge Honore, without the intervention of a jury, July 12, 1906. After the hearing, the court took the case under advisement and held it until the November following, when he found for the defendant and dismissed the case, holding that there was no warranty and no liability. This, too, was without any real defense, as it is a generally accepted fact, as claimed by Buckbee, that there was a collusion between Swett, Marsh and Hohenadle to practically let the suit go by default and lay a foundation for an action against Buckbee for damages.

After this suit was disposed of the parties were not satisfied, but, although they had taken appealing orders from the decision of Judge Honore, they failed to perfect their appeal. However, at the April term, 1907, Hohenadle & Co. commenced suit in the United States circuit court in Chicago against Buckbee for $22,900, claiming that the seeds sold to them by Buckbee were warranted to be Improved Chicago Pickle and were another and different variety and that on account of their being another and different variety, they suffered damages amounting to $22,900. Buckbee appeared by attorney and interposed a plea to the jurisdiction of the court. This plea was sustained by Judge Landis, since of Standard Oil fame, and the suit was dismissed.

At the October term, 1907, Hohenadle & Co. again commenced suit in the United States circuit court at Freeport, Ill., and this suit is now pending.

CABBAGE NOVELTIES.

Among this season's novelties in the seed line, Sluis & Grott, Enkhuizen, Holland, have two new cabbages. Zenith is a red cabbage which the firm considers an improvement upon all existing sorts. It is a half-early variety, making few leaves in proportion to the very solid heads. It is thin-ribbed, of medium size and exceedingly dark red in color. They say they have no doubt this sort will soon be a standard. Enkhuizen's Glory is a new white cabbage of large size and early, coming in as early as Early Flat Dutch. The heads are round, hard, thin-ribbed and there are few outside leaves.

VARIEGATED NASTURTIUMS.

There is every likelihood of the new variegated-leaved nasturtiums becoming extremely popular in gardens, writes a seedsman in an English contemporary. I have given both the American and English introductions a trial, and certainly they are worth pushing. Ryburgh Perfection is very effective, as the brilliant flowers show up well against the foliage, more so than Queen of Tom Thumbs and Crystal Queen. Wherever I have shown them they have caused much comment, and that generally means business.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending November 2 were as follows:

Kind.	Bags.	Val.	Kind.	Bags.	Val.
Annatto	5	97	Grass	155	$1,547
Anise	11	118	Mustard	250	2,256
Canary	101	447	Poppy	840	6,612
Caraway	200	1,485	Rape	217	1,923
Clover	291	7,652	Other		1,192
Fenugreek	334	1,207

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $28,493.

ERFURT SEED TRADE.

At this writing, October 20, it is possible to overlook the whole of our seed crop for 1907, with only a few small exceptions, which, however, do not count.

In general our growers have been satisfied with the weather lately, as it has made up for a good many rainy and cool days which we had to contend with last summer. September, except for a few wet and cool days and one rather severe night-frost on the 23rd, was very sunny and fine, and October has given us, up to the present, very bright and fine days indeed.

On the morning after the above-mentioned frost, all the growers of cauliflower seed, which is a great special line in Erfurt, were as busy as bees, erecting temporary stages over their cauliflower beds to enable them to protect the plants over night with canvas mats, boards or any other suitable material; but this one frost proved quite hard enough to do some damage to the maturing seed.

Although this frost was rather rough on a good many different plants, in full bloom just then, it was surprising to notice how well a lot of them pulled round again. Dahlias, for instance, got over

New Close-Clinging Hardy Climber AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Velitchii. The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn. In size the leaves are small, beautifully dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump. This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers, although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

this very soon and at present are showing up splendidly. Our beautiful October sun brings them out to their fullest splendor and they are drawing the attention of all passers-by, be they all lovers of flowers or not. The same can be said of our autumn asters, herbaceous asters of all descriptions, which are gaining in favor every year, and no doubt they deserve it. In a special note I will mention a smart little show, which on last Sunday, October 13, was arranged here in Erfurt by a number of our foremost growers of herbaceous plants. It presented autumn asters of all varieties, among them a few very noteworthy novelties.

In the following lines I am giving an account of this season's seed crop and will begin with the vegetables.

The seed crop of cucumbers, melons, vegetable marrows and beans is inferior; peas are good and medium; radishes good; onions, leek and lettuce bad, or at best only medium; turnips and celery are bad; carrots and borecole medium; kohlrabi and brussels sprouts bad; savoy, red and white cabbage and cauliflowers only medium.

Concerning the flower seed it must be said that the crop of tropæolum, tagetes, silene, senecio, schizanthus, scabiosa, salvia and xeranthemum is only medium; zinnia, verbena and salpiglossis are bad; Viola tricolor maxima and Viola cornuta good and medium; mignonette, portulaca, phlox and petunia medium; papaver is good; myosotis,

WORTH ATTENTION.

Under the above heading, F. C. Heine-mann, the well-known seed grower at Erfurt, Germany, says:

"Many novelties are bought and cultivated for the sake of obtaining some self-grown seed. But in most cases the necessary care and pains are omitted, and instead of improving from year to year, a beautiful variety may degenerate more and more, so that the raiser will scarcely recognize it as grown after his original stock. Though a plant may come quite true from seed under the hands of those who raised it, yet there are many circumstances and difficulties to prevent others from doing as well with the same seed. It is therefore advisable not to use the second-hand, but the original seed."

barrels Yellow stock delivered to shippers and Whites are $7.50 and better.

Shippers are actively working the stock and many January delivery orders are being booked on a basis of $2 a bushel.

It is estimated that nearly half of this year's approximated crop of 150,000 bushels has already been shipped or tied up for future delivery and most of the shippers figure that nearly two-thirds of the supply is now out of the hands of the growers.

During the past week the flurry in Wall street circles influenced a number of growers with liberal home holdings to let go of their supply at the unprecedented high prices now being paid. However, the bulk of the growers' supply remaining is controlled by strong men financially. The 4 cents per pound and better paying price for Yellows is not attractive to many of those with means, who have sets, but many of these grow-

DON'T LOSE IT.

You may have a little surplus stock in some line—not much, perhaps, but enough to cut quite a hole in the profit made on the whole lot if this little surplus is lost. But it isn't necessary to lose it. Nearly always there is someone, somewhere, who needs just that little batch of plants. You can reach that someone, everywhere, through a classified advertisement in the REVIEW, at a cost of 10 cents a line. Frequently a 30-cent advertisement will sell $30, $60 or more of stock, depending on its seasonableness and abundance. Everyone reads the REVIEW's classified ads. Don't let the little surplus go to waste.

"PLEASE SEND THE REVIEW."

The REVIEW finds much encouragement in the receipt of letters like the following from a florist at South Framingham, Mass.:

"Please send the REVIEW to ———, South Framingham, Mass., for which I enclose his dollar. The REVIEW is all right, as is shown by my advising Mr. ——— to take it in preference to three others."

But what interests the publisher is that the REVIEW is all right enough for a subscriber to take it upon himself to take a friend's money and mail it in, simply because he thinks the friend will profit by having the REVIEW; it must be all right, sure enough.

The REVIEW frequently receives such courtesies at the hands of its readers, for which it not only returns thanks but promises to provide an increasingly interesting paper.

PACIFIC COAST.

NEWBERG, ORE.—Thomas E. Miles says the prospect for a good winter's business was never so good as it is this year. He added a carnation house during the summer.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Trade.

Trade has developed to a point where a good opinion is expressed by everybody. All the downtown stores enjoyed an exceptionally brisk month, October beating all previous records. There has been a continuous demand for funeral work, in some cases the orders calling for quite extensive arrangements. Never were we blessed at this season with weather so helpful to the growers. It has put vigor into everything under glass, and stock is showing up in fine form. Carnations have probably made the best growth and Enchantress is monarch of them all. Violets are now being picked in sufficient quantity to meet all demands.

Chrysanthemums are doing nobly and we would not hesitate to match them with any in the country. The Oregon climate is admirably suited to their culture, and we have them perfectly formed, with quality of the highest.

Dahlias have paid better this year than any time heretofore, and we hope to see them grown more extensively another season. We must also speak of the beautiful cosmos, which has created so much admiration this fall and has sold well, too. The early rains promoted a tremendous growth, the flowers being unusually large and perfect.

We wish to compliment the stores on their decorative displays, and we hope that nothing may happen to mar the prospects of a good winter trade.

H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Although the stringency in the money market is noticed in San Francisco as much as elsewhere, and general business depression has visited our city on its regular rounds, the florists have not complained. Business is as good as it was at this time last year and up to the mark of former years; so we have no fault to find.

Flowers are plentiful and the weather is favorable for them at present. The first of the new crops of roses are making their appearance and are being well used up by the retailers. Carnations are quite plentiful and remain at the same prices they have for the last few weeks. Violets are much better and the long, cool nights have made quite an improvement on them, both in quality and quantity. The Princess of Wales are being sold to the dealers at 75 cents per dozen bunches.

Mums are at the height of their season and the price of outdoor stock is away down. Indoor flowers are cheaper than they were a year ago, but they move well and the growers are not losing any stock.

Valley and Romans are in good supply and are in better demand than a couple of weeks ago. Narcissi are seen in small lots. Sweet peas and other in quantity, should place orders with us now. Remember, our wood is all taken from healthy plants growing in the field. Also, if you handle field-grown roses on own roots, don't fail to get our R&D list at once, as sales are very heavy. :: :: :: ::

outside stock do not show well, owing to the continued cool nights and cloudy days. Red berries have made their appearance and assist in calling attention to the fact that the holidays will soon be on us.

Various Notes.

J. D. Morris has gone on a trip to Portland, Ore., and will be absent from town for a couple of weeks.

The American Florists are well established in their Polk street store and their windows are among the showiest in that locality.

P. J. Meyer & Co., of Burlingame, have several houses of roses in splendid shape for a heavy cutting in the near future. Half a dozen large houses are devoted to carnations and these are in tip-top condition at this time.

The Christmas tree men have made their appearance in town, with the usual inducements to florists to handle their wares.

The Chinese growers are complaining that the low prices at present received for their goods will force many of them into other lines of business next season.

J. M. Holland, recently with C. C. Morse & Co., will open a florist's establishment in Berkeley in a few days.

TO STUDY BURBANKOLOGY.

It has been suggested that some of the great universities either in the east or on this coast should make a special branch to include the study and continuation of the work mapped out by Luther Burbank. It has been ascertained that any movement along the lines suggested would have his hearty support and help. As a preliminary move some time since a committee was named to have a conference with Mr. Burbank and hear his ideas on the subject. The members of the committee were President David Starr Jordan, of Stanford University; United States Judge W. W. Morrow, Judge S. F. Lieb, of San Jose, regent of Stanford University; George P. McNear, of Petaluma; Mayor John P. Overton, of Santa Rosa, and Dr. Humphreys, of Stanford University.

President Jordan is enthusiastic over the educational features of Burbank's work. While nothing is definite, there is a report that a movement may be started looking towards the foundation of an educational institution in which the scientific part of Burbank's work will be thoroughly explained and studied.

The Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C., has placed at the disposal of Mr. Burbank $10,000 per year for ten years to enable the extension of his experiments along horticultural lines. Great strides have been made and Dr. George H. Shull is at Santa Rosa at present gathering data for the publication of a series of scientific treatises on Burbank's achievements.

An exhibit of Burbank's creations, both in flowers and fruits, is shortly to be placed on exhibition in the Ferry building in San Francisco and President A. R. Briggs, of the State Board of Trade, is enthusiastic on the proposition. These fruits, berries and flowers will be placed in attractive glass jars and other receptacles and it is expected that tens of thousands of people will be enabled to inspect what will be the best exhibit of the Burbank products to be seen anywhere.

The Market.

Trade last week was, by some, reported good. The heavy rain Saturday put a damper on it, and naturally many cut flowers were carried over. The week started in clear, and cut flowers, as well as pot plants, moved nicely. However, I can see no reason why any complaint can be offered. As a rule, our trade has little go to waste. At present our market is heavily stocked with chrysanthemums and roses. Last week the street boys were out with thousands of roses that were in good condition, offering bargains that were seldom passed by the public. Their price was in reach of any one wanting roses. Chrysanthemums almost met the same fate, fine, large blooms selling as low as 20 cents each, and roses about 3 cents each. Chrysanthemums are abundant and moving well, considering the large quantity on the market. There is a demand for the white and yellow.

Carnations are doing nicely and coming in a little more regularly. The price is a little low yet, 1½ cents, and will remain so for a while and then will gradually increase until the usual holiday price is reached.

Violets, the double variety, are in fairly good supply and find ready sale. The singles are also coming in. At times I find some society people that object to the single violets and regret the double is at times hard to procure.

Various Notes.

H. Grahl, Halethorp, Md., is cutting some extra fine double violets and has a fair collection of mums.

Mrs. M. Kimmelmund, Orangeville, Md., has a house, 35x180 feet, standing idle that can be rented or bought; so there is a chance there for someone.

Charles Seigwart, Station D, has a house of carnation plants that is hard to beat, and is cutting some choice blooms.

Shaw Bros., Dickeyville, Md., are raising a large quantity of double and single violets. J. L. T.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

All Souls' day was rather a disappointment this year. The weather on Friday and Saturday was bad for business, and the growers in the flower market, who were loaded down with small mums and cheap flowers of all kinds for the cemetery trade, had a hard time in getting rid of their stock. The wholesale houses also found things pretty slow; but when Sunday opened a bright, beautiful day, business took a brace. The wholesale houses sold out and those florists who were fortunate enough to be located near a cemetery did a large business. Monday found the market well cleared out. In fact, almost everything was sold out, with the exception of a few roses.

Mums are going nicely, and the average price is good. Some fine stock is being handled and the midseason varieties are in full blast. Roses of all varieties are in oversupply. They sell slowly, and the price has dropped in consequence. For the first time this season, Beauties are going slowly, with the supply greater than the demand. Of course this is due to the mum, which makes everything take a back seat. The supply of carnations comes nearer being enough for the demand than any time this season, but still there are none too many and the price holds firm. Violets are selling well, with few coming in. There is some fine valley, but it sells slowly. Harrisii lilies are in fair supply, with but little demand.

Various Notes.

The Lampert Floral Co., of Xenia, O., is sending some good mums to this market.

Some good carnations are coming from Samuel Batson, of Kalamazoo, Mich.; also snapdragon, which is one of Mr. Batson's specialties. He also grows large quantities of Baby Primrose as a cut flower and, as he grows it, it always finds a ready market.

Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, O., was a caller. He was looking for small flowers for All Souls', as also were J. H. Broxey and wife, of Dayton, O. They have a retail store in the arcade and are doing a first-class business.

C. J. OHMER.

IRONDEQUOIT, N. Y.

Business continues good, with prices below normal for the grower. About $2.50 per hundred wholesale for carnations is the highest the grower has been able to get, whereas in recent years we have got as high as $4. They have been selling for a good price retail for some time, bringing as much as 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen.

In regard to new varieties of carnations, my opinion is that Winsor is too slow and much too short in stem so far to be of value to this market. Aristocrat is much affected with rust and not as good in color as Lawson. Beacon, as I have seen it growing at H. Merritt's place, is a grand thing; it is the best thing on his place. He says he has been picking good blooms from the start, and there is a prospect of a good crop straight along. He says this carnation sells ahead of any other red, as it has a good, lively color. E. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 83d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE pruning of maples, if any be necessary, should not be put off much longer.

J. DYKHUIS is making an American trip for Felix & Dykhuis, Boskoop, Holland.

G. W. KEMP, a nurseryman of Harnedsville, Pa., will remove about December 1 to Somerset county, Maryland, where he has purchased a large farm and nursery.

DO NOT hesitate to cut down a tree that is a menace to its neighbor, if it is not worth the trouble and expense of moving it to some other location. Better one good tree than two poor ones.

THERE are two kinds of nurserymen; one of them sells what he can and then cuts the price on the surplus to half or less and does not answer letters from his first customers, who want to know where they get off.

IT may interest those who have a decided preference for the variegated Irish yew over the green, that the former is the hardier of the two, in so far, at least, that it stands the winter better than the other.

IN some places it may be a serious matter to procure material for the winter covering of everything needing it, but there are few places where a supply of forest leaves cannot be had, and for many things there is no better covering than leaves.

THE wholesale nurserymen are having the biggest season on record, for not only is fall planting on the increase, but as more nurserymen become equipped with winter storage and packing facilities, they want autumn delivery of such stock as they do not grow.

THE extraordinary popularity, deserved, of course, of Clematis paniculata, has had a good deal to do with the neglect of C. Flammula. When we consider how serviceable it is, coming into bloom so much earlier than the other, we may well wonder that more of it is not grown than there is.

BERBERIS WILSONAE, exhibited by Veitch & Son, has been given a first-class certificate by the Royal Horticultural Society of England. It is a dwarf, shrubby species from central China, with rather pretty glaucous foliage, but the attraction is the bright coral fruit with which the twigs are studded in compact little bunches. It is said it will make an admirable plant for the rock garden.

A GOOD way of protecting figs growing outdoors from the severity of the northern winters is by partially undermining the trees by excavating the soil at one side and then bending the wood down and covering it all well with the soil removed in the digging. This is, perhaps, in more ways than one, better than digging up the trees entirely and covering them up elsewhere, indoors or out.

THE ROSE GARDEN.

A garden nowadays without roses is hardly considered a garden at all, if the phrase is permissible. Beautiful and charming as roses undoubtedly are, one drawback to their cultivation in close proximity to dwellings is the fact that during most of the time when not in flower they have anything but a decorative appearance. Besides, the care and treatment necessary to produce roses to perfection, along with the musing and fussing inseparable therefrom, make it almost imperative that they be grown by themselves and at some little distance from the dwelling. The rose garden should not, however, be situated where the plants would suffer from the heavy shade of trees or from the detrimental action of the tree roots on the soil in which the roses grow. Reasonable shelter, on the other hand, is an advantage for a rose garden.

The nature of the soil and drainage, or the facilities available for providing suitable soil and means of drainage, are important considerations. Roses succeed best in rich, deep and somewhat stiff soil, free from moisture of anything like a stagnant nature. Heavy clay soil or soil of a light, gravelly nature is unfavorable to the wellbeing of

FORCING RAMBLERS & HYBRID ROSESFOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well ripened. Roses potted up in the fall or winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard and force at your leisure. We recommend American-grown Ramblers. Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are a failure.

We offer exceptionally strong two-year-old dormant, low-budded stock (on Manetti), in the following varieties, true to name:

Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.

Ball of Snow. Pure white.

Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson, shaded.

Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.

Captain Christy. Delicate flesh-color.

Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; fine.

Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.

Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.

General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.

General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.

John Hopper. Beautiful rose pink.

La France. The finest light pink.

Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.

Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.

Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.

Mme. Plantier. White.

Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.

Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.

Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.

Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

THE NEW BABY RAMBLER ROSE

Catherine Zeimet. A very important novelty. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. An important fact is that it has the true rose perfume in a high degree. One of the best polyantha types to date. Fine forcer. 50c each; $5 per dozen; $40.00 per 100. Extra heavy, 75c each; $7.50 per dozen; $60.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLERGrows as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free blooming qualities, etc. 85c each; $8.50 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

the rose. When the ground is in such a state as to be incapable of being improved by the addition of manure and fertilizer, the soil will have to be removed and be replaced with soil of the proper character. When the soil is naturally fairly good, manure may be all that will be needed and the kind of manure used must be determined by the nature of the soil in the beds. Thus, if the soil is only moderately heavy, cow manure, which is on the whole the most satisfactory for roses, should be mainly

DISEASE OF LETTUCE.

Prof. George E. Stone, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, writes as follows in the last annual report:

Our attention has been called at different times to an undescribed bacterial disease of lettuce, which is reported as causing considerable damage in some localities. This disease has been observed in our greenhouse for many years, and during the year 1901 Percival C. Brooks, then a member of the senior class in botany, investigated this problem. He succeeded in isolating an organism from a diseased lettuce plant, and obtained positive results from his inoculation experiments with healthy plants.

The disease in question has never been observed by us in this state except in our own house, notwithstanding the fact that we have for many years had occasion to carefully study the various lettuce crops in the state, and have constantly been on the lookout for it. Neither has careful inquiry brought to light any trace of a similar affection in lettuce houses in Massachusetts. Since the disease occurred in our lettuce house on crops which had been forced too rapidly, it was considered of little consequence and was given scarcely any attention, inasmuch as we thought the trouble arose from improper management of the crop. Our only reason for calling attention to this disease at the present time is that it is reported as doing considerable damage elsewhere, particularly in the south, which makes it desirable that we should be on the lookout for it. The disease results in the appearance of numerous small brownish spots about the size of a pin-head on the young and tender light-colored leaves of the head. The spots are frequently quite numerous, and in some cases run together, causing a destruction of a portion of the leaves of the head. No attempt was made by Mr. Brooks to make any extensive study of the organisms causing the disease, since at that time it was believed to be of little consequence, and only an accompaniment of too rapid forcing. In some localities, particularly farther south, we hear different reports concerning its prevalence.

We are comparatively new in the business and some of our best work has been done by following the advice given in the REVIEW.—F. D. HARTSHORN, Augusta, Me.

TIME TO PLANT LILIUMS.

When is the proper time to plant Lilium auratum, L. speciosum album, L. speciosum melpomene and L. speciosum rubrum? When is the earliest they can be planted? Can they be forced to bloom during the winter? How should they be cultivated?

H. J. H.

Lilium auratum and the various forms of L. speciosum are best planted outdoors as soon as the bulbs arrive from Japan, usually early in November. Plant them nine to ten inches deep. Place some sand below and on top of the bulbs and cover with leaves or meadow hay after the ground freezes.

Both lilies may be had in flower for Christmas if retarded bulbs are potted about the end of July. Keep them in a shed until they start to sprout; then remove them to a cool house. Some forcing can be done if the plants need hurry-

New Carnation

DEFIANCE

Brilliant Scarlet

This is unquestionably the best scarlet Carnation ever offered to the trade. It is of a most brilliant color; form and stem perfect; size, 3 inches and over; free and continuous in bloom, and of ideal habit. It is a very quick grower, producing an abundance of flowering shoots from the start, and has no tendency to split its calyx. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Usual discount on larger orders. Get your order in at once to secure January delivery.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business last week was a trifle slow, and with midseason mums in full blast, as well as a falling off in funeral work, some stock found its way to the street faker, which is rather unusual at this time of the year. Carnations, mums and violets have sold fairly well, with roses going begging.

Eastern double violets have made their appearance and are of fine quality. The Gov. Herrick single violet is also making a good showing for so early.

Various Notes.

The Ohio Floral Co., which has heretofore been disposing of its entire cut to Knoble Bros., of West Twenty-fifth street, opened a wholesale and retail store in the Majestic Theater building November 3. Mr. Coutemarche, the well-known decorator and store man, is manager of the new store.

J. M. Gasser is still at Mount Clemens, Mich., where he has been for the last month, regaining his health.

Adam Graham, Jr., is running for mayor of East Cleveland, and we all hope that he may be successful in his political venture.

The F. R. Williams Co. has been sending in some fine mums.

W. A. Calhoun has erected four new houses of the King construction type, which fill a long felt want in his increasing retail trade.

C. M. Wagner has been showing some fine windows in his new store on Euclid avenue.

John Blechschmid has a fine lot of carnations this season. One house of enchantress is extra good.

Visitors: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co.; Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co.; R. Mellen, of Ravenna, O. B.

MEDICINE HAT, CAN.—The Roseries Co., which selected this place as the site for extensive greenhouses, was led to that choice chiefly by the mildness of the winters here and by the cheap supply of natural gas for fuel. The company has now nearly completed three houses, each 20x300 feet, besides a boiler-house and office, and expects to spend $50,000 in the enterprise the first year. It is the intention eventually to cover five acres with buildings, so as to supply roses to the retail florists in Assiniboia and the three neighboring provinces. The capital for the undertaking comes largely from Winnipeg and Calgary.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

One looking into the flower shops would have thought from the amount of stock in sight, and the extent of the store decorations, that business was booming. But when you asked the man he usually said things are quiet. This is Horse Show week, and we expected a rush, but it has not yet materialized. This was a common complaint. However, there was a fair amount of business done in a small way. Chrysanthemums are catching on, but not at fancy prices. The medium priced stock is the only thing wanted. Beauties and lilies, which have been plentiful, are not in the usual demand.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements have had some large decorations, among them several for Hallowe'en, in which autumn leaves, witches, pumpkin-head and other spookish things formed a part.

Mrs. E. A. Williams took care of a number of social affairs last week, including several dinner decorations in connection with the horse show.

H. L. Blind & Bros. had several weddings and cleaned up a lot of mums last week.

The Zieger Co., although the shop is not completed and the force is working under difficulties, is picking out some of the good jobs.

E. C. Ludwig had several strenuous days with funeral work during the week, although the general market trade was not up to the mark.

There was lots of stock of all kinds in the wholesale houses last week. Even carnations were more plentiful and the rain all day Saturday did not help them to clean up to any great extent. There was still good stock on hand Saturday night. Lilies and Beauties were more plentiful and prices all along the line were pretty cheap. Hoo-Hoo.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—D. H. Hollingsworth completed last month a prosperous first year of business at 1146 De Kalb avenue. Mr. Hollingsworth's main establishment is located at Seabright, N. J., and he recently started a nursery at Eatonville, N. J., where landscape gardening is made a specialty.

AND THE Holidays

Watch! Prosperity! Look!

Election is now over, money matter settled, market revived and the country is now again in normal condition. Great prosperity is now in sight for us all. Why not for you? A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), in their original packing before we plant them in pots, at only 40c, 3 tiers, beautiful stock. You can sell them at once.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

One looking into the flower shops would have thought from the amount of stock in sight, and the extent of the store decorations, that business was booming. But when you asked the man he usually said things are quiet. This is Horse Show week, and we expected a rush, but it has not yet materialized. This was a common complaint. However, there was a fair amount of business done in a small way. Chrysanthemums are catching on, but not at fancy prices. The medium priced stock is the only thing wanted. Beauties and lilies, which have been plentiful, are not in the usual demand.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements have had some large decorations, among them several for Halloween, in which autumn leaves, witches, pumpkin-head and other spookish things formed a part.

Mrs. E. A. Williams took care of a number of social affairs last week, including several dinner decorations in connection with the horse show.

H. L. Blind & Bros. had several weddings and cleaned up a lot of mums last week.

The Zieger Co., although the shop is not completed and the force is working under difficulties, is picking out some of the good jobs.

E. C. Ludwig had several strenuous days with funeral work during the week, although the general market trade was not up to the mark.

There was lots of stock of all kinds in the wholesale houses last week. Even carnations were more plentiful and the rain all day Saturday did not help them to clean up to any great extent. There was still good stock on hand Saturday night. Lilies and Beauties were more plentiful and prices all along the line were pretty cheap. Hoo-Hoo.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.- D. H. Hollingsworth completed last month a prosperous first year of business at 1146 De Kalb avenue. Mr. Hollingsworth's main establishment is located at Seabright, N. J., and he recently started a nursery at Eatontville, N. J., where landscape gardening is made a specialty.

INTERIOR VIEW OF ONE HOUSE OF ARAUCARIA EXCELSA GLAUCA AND ROBUSTA

Grown by GODFREY ASCHMANN,
ARAUCARIA SPECIALIST
1012 Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PREPARE FOR

Thanksgiving AND THE Holidays

Watch! Prosperity! Look!

Election is now over, money matter settled, market revised and the country is now again in normal condition. Great prosperity is now in sight for us all. Why not for you? A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band

and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), in their original packing before we plant them in pots, at only 40c, 3 tiers, beautiful stock. You can sell them at once.

Last Spring's Importation

Araucaria Excelsa—3-year-old, 5½ to 6½-in. pots, 10, 12, 14 inches, 3 tiers, 50c.

Araucaria Excelsa—3-year-old, 5½-in. pots, 15, 16, 17 inches high, 3 to 4 tiers, 60c.

Araucaria Excelsa—4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 20 to 22 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, 75c.

Araucaria Excelsa—5-year-old, 6-in. pots, 22 to 25 inches high, 5 tiers, $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa—Specimen plants 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca—This variety on account of its beautiful bluish-green tiers, dwarf habit, fine compact shape, gives them a striking appearance and anybody seeing them will undoubtedly fall in love with them at sight. All are of the finest shape you ever saw. 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 16 inches high, same in width, 3 to 4 tiers, $1.25; 4-year-old, 6 in. pots, 17 to 23 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $1.50 to $1.75; 5-year-old, 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $2.00; 5-year-old, 7-in. pots, 30 to 36 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $2.50; 5-year-old, 8-in. pots, specimens, $3.00 to $4.00.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta—This variety is, as the lion is king of the beasts, king of the Araucaria family. Is of a beautiful green, fine shape and compact habit; everybody is stuck on them. Have a house full; can meet all demands. 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 4 tiers, 22 to 25 inches high, same in width, $1.50 to $1.75 each; 5-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, same in width, $2.00 to $2.50; 5-year-old, 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 30 inches and more in height, same in width, $3.00 to $3.50.

Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana—European stock. 6-in. pots, 5 leaves, 25 to 30 in. high, $1.00 each; 4-in. pots, home-grown, 18 to 20 in. high, 55c each. Belmoreana and Forsteriana, 5½ to 5½ in. bushy, 50c to 60c; 5½ to 6-in. bushy plants, 75c each.

Please mention if in or out of pots. All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Roses are more plentiful and improving in quality. Bridesmaids are perhaps not up to the standard, but American Beauties are very good. Chrysanthemums are more than enough to go around and are selling cheap. One grower is bringing them in by the wagon-load and is selling them, good big ones, at 6 cents to 8 cents each. This market never had so many mums as it has this year. Carnations are still scarce, but the plants are in good shape and there is a good outlook for the Christmas crop. Violets are small and not plentiful. Green is abundant at present.

Various Notes.

G. M. Kellogg is showing some fine Minnehaha roses at present. They have excellent stems and prices are the same as for American Beauties.

Mr. Freudenthal's window attracted much attention last week. It was gorgeously filled with mums and made a grand show for Twelfth street pedestrians.

The People's Floral Co., on Walnut street, is doing a good business. It has a neat and clean store and is in one of the best locations. Emil Eichenauer is head clerk and also the floral designer.

The Alpha Floral Co. is doing a rushing business in ferns this fall, selling 75-cent ferns for 35 cents. This is one way of bringing customers to the store. The show window is well filled with flowers in season. The company also has bought a new top wagon, each side of which is decorated with a large bunch of American Beauty roses. The wagon is a good advertisement for the store. The Alpha Floral Co. also does a large business in goldfish.

There is a rumor that there will soon be a large wholesale and commission store started here. Stockholders with plenty of money is all that is needed at present to complete the work. The present condition of the country may delay this project. W. H. H.

Current Comment.

We have experienced our first cloudy weather this fall. During the last week the sun has only shone about four hours. Carnations and roses show the effects of it, the supply being considerably shortened. Mums, of course, hold the field and there is an abundance of all grades and colors.

Ed Brown, of Shelbyville, was in the city this week and reports business good in his town.

F. A. Conway has saved 115 pounds of seed from his fine white aster. He has named it Conway's Seedling Chrysanthemum-flowering White Branching Aster; it's a mouthful, but with every pound of seed you buy he sends directions how to pronounce the name quickly. All the store men pronounce this flower as being something choice and Mr. Conway is to be congratulated on his success.

There will be plenty of bulbous stock here this season, as every florist has bulbs by the tens of thousands.

Baur & Smith are proud of the record their carnation May had for the month of October. Off a bed of 1,500 plants they cut over 2,700 blooms and the average is still good. S.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO.

Poole & Purllant, who established their business here January 1, 1901, have sold out to R. S. McMurray. The partnership has not been dissolved and, after a rest, the firm will decide upon a location and make a fresh start. In the meantime S. F. Purllant is visiting his parents at Stamford, England, whom he has not seen in sixteen years. Thomas A. Poole has recently returned from a trip to the Jamestown exposition, having on the way stopped to investigate several business chances. The firm did well here and sold out a prosperous business. An equal success is likely to follow in a larger town.

ATTICA, IND.—Manager Cheak, of the Attica Florists' Co., a comparatively new concern, says everything promises prosperity. There are two houses, with a general stock in good condition.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—A fire at the greenhouses of Fred L. Lainson, Sunday, October 27, destroyed property worth between $2,000 and $3,000. Only $300 of the loss was covered by insurance. The fire was caused, it is said, by overheating of the boiler, which set fire to some mats which were piled on top of it. The house will be immediately rebuilt.

Current Comment.

Trade is about as usual, with a fairly good supply of flowers on hand. Carnations are doing finely and are throwing up lots of buds for future bloom. They are bringing from 35 to 50 cents per dozen retail. Some nice Winsor carnations are now coming in. This is a grand variety.

Alice Byron and other midseason varieties of mums are now in full bloom. They are bringing from $1 to $2 per dozen retail. There will be quite a few Jeanne Nonin and other late varieties for Thanksgiving day. Nonin is a great favorite in this section.

Roses are now coming in of good quality. They bring $1.50 per dozen retail. Violets are going rather slowly just now; 50 cents to $1 per hundred retail is the price asked.

All flowers outdoors are now practically gone, and steady firing at nights is now the rule.

Fred Reynolds, formerly with Nofftz, the William street florist, has started a flower store on Water street, at the south end.

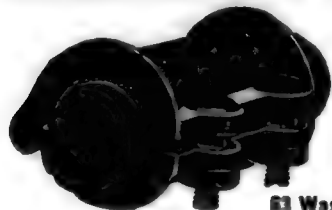

R. H. Woodhouse will have some nice mums for Thanksgiving. His carnations are doing finely.

William Mosher, on North street, is operating the greenhouses formerly owned by William Kroeber, who is now somewhere in Virginia.

Bulb potting is now the order of the day. W. L.

Fred Reynolds, formerly with Nofftz, the William street florist, has started a flower store on Water street, at the south end.

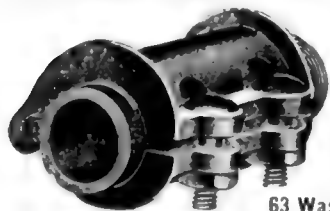

R. H. Woodhouse will have some nice mums for Thanksgiving. His carnations are doing finely.

William Mosher, on North street, is operating the greenhouses formerly owned by William Kroeber, who is now somewhere in Virginia.

Bulb potting is now the order of the day. W. L.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

All Saints' day for this year is over, but we can hardly give yet a sure opinion of what has happened in the general business among florists. Still we may say that the quantity of good flowers produced here has been large. Prices were from $2 to $4 for good stock. Medium, fancy under-glass stock brought as much as $5 and $6, and extra fancy was retailed as high as $8 and $10. Carnations were sold from $1.25 to $2. The quantity of mums and roses received from Chicago must have been less than in other years.

Designs of any kind are not the style any more. Loose bunches only are in demand. Artificial designs are almost a thing of the past. Still, Jos. Schindler & Co. report a good business, saying that their sale of artificial designs has been large.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. had the best flowers they have ever grown. Their sales compared favorably with other seasons.

Chas. Eble is not able to say much yet about the result of his sales, but he disposed of all his stock.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., seems to have sold a larger quantity of flowers than any other florist in town. Besides his nursery on the ridge, and his store on Carondelet street, he has a stand at the half-way house, in front of all the cemeteries. These, with one stand at the St. Charles hotel, and one at the largest department house on Canal street, put him in a position to offer his stock to more advantage than any of the other large florists of the city. Besides, he is growing the largest part of his stock, receiving very little from any other source. Mr. Papworth says that his cash receipts were twice as much as last year. M. M. L.

THE AUTUMN

EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

The Review printed in its issue of November 7 a full description of the arrangements and special features, together with the first day's awards, of the exhibition which opened November 6.

Favored by a week of ideal weather, the sixteenth annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago ran its brilliant course and came to a successful close at midnight November 12. It was, all things considered, the best show Chicago ever has held and that means it was the greatest exhibition ever held in America. Indeed, T. Mellstrom, of Sander & Co., London and Bruges, said at the banquet: "For many years it has been my duty and pleasure to attend each year the principal exhibitions held in the principal cities of England, France and Germany, and nowhere in the world have I seen under one roof so great a display of plants and cut flowers, and nowhere so uniformly high quality. The Chicago show is a revelation to the European."

The management was especially efficient this year. It is the third time the show has been held in the same place and handled by the same people. Manager Asmus was serene for all of the multitudinous calls upon him and pleased everybody. E. A. Kanst, in charge of the secretary's office, had every detail down and the records up to the minute; P. J. Hauswirth handled the admissions with ease. The paid attendance was greater than a year ago, but not quite up to that of the first show in the Coliseum, when it had an element of novelty the best efforts of the efficient press agent, James Burdett, can not hope to supply short of the national show next year.

The Coliseum, which looked so big only a couple of years ago, is now too small. Even without the usual number of retail booths, the floor space was crowded and the cut flowers did not have as good a position as the management would have liked. Aside from the four retail displays, which were excellent and attracted much attention from the thousands of visitors, retailers were given turns at sections in which they staged table decorations not for competition. Wienhoeber, Wittbold, Schnapp, Schiller and others availed themselves of this privilege and the tables are always a popular feature of the show.

Rose Day.

The roses were staged Thursday, November 7, and it may safely be said that never has so fine a showing been made in this country, either at this date or a later one. The quality of all the roses was superb, not only in advance of the showing made last year, but so good as to bring out comment from those in the trade who know all about the high quality which marks the rose products of the Chicago market. Such splendid Richmond and Killarney, Maids and Beauties made discrimination difficult for the judges. The awards were as follows:

Twenty-five Beauty, Poehlmann Bros.

Co. first, Peter Reinberg second, H. W. Buckbee third.

Forty Richmond or Liberty, H. W. Buckbee first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Forty Chatenay, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Peter Reinberg second.

Forty Bride, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, Ind., second.

Forty Maid, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Weiland & Olinger second.

Forty Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Peter Reinberg second.

Forty any other variety, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, with Cardinal; Peter Reinberg second, with Kate Moulton.

One hundred Beauty, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Peter Reinberg second, Bassett & Washburn third.

One hundred Richmond or Liberty, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Peter Reinberg second, Wieter Bros. third.

Prize Vase of Golden Chadwick Exhibited at Chicago by Wieter Bros.

One hundred Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Bassett & Washburn second, Peter Reinberg third.

One hundred Bride, Weiland & Olinger first, Wieter Bros. second.

One hundred Maid, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Wieter Bros. second.

One hundred Chatenay, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Wieter Bros. second.

One hundred any other variety, Peter Reinberg first, with Mrs. Marshall Field; Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, with Mrs. Potter Palmer; Wieter Bros. third.

In this class a vase of Kaiserin entered by Poehlmann Bros. Co. was disqualified, but the quality was so superb that the judges awarded it a special premium.

Twelve blooms of a new rose not exhibited in this country previous to this season, E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., on Princess.

Twenty-five blooms any variety not in commerce, E. G. Hill Co. first, on Rhea Reid.

New Roses.

Classes 66 and 67 brought out a remarkable competition for new roses. The first class called for twelve blooms of a rose never exhibited in this country previous to the present season. Conspicuous among these was Princess, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., which was an easy winner of first premium, a silver cup. It is a seedling of Testout, of Testout color, of enormous size, Killarney shape and splendid substance. In the bud state it is one of the finest things imaginable and Fred Lemon says they expect it to prove a splendid forcing variety. They have had it two years. Mrs. Jardine, by Robt. Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., was closely examined by the growers, for fine things are said of it by those who have seen it at Scott's. Emil Glauber, of Montclair, Colo., sent Alice Roosevelt, dark pink, and Wm. Laisle, Keokuk, Ia., staged a vase of a pink named Mme. Laisle. The E. G. Hill Co. also staged its new rose Rhea Reid and No. 83, pink, the former taking first premium in Class 67, for varieties not yet in commerce.

In addition there were about the hall grand vases for exhibition only of Mrs. Field, Mrs. Palmer, Princess, Mrs. Jardine and Cardinal.

Carnations.

Carnations were staged November 8 and made a particularly fine showing when it is considered that the carnations generally are not as far forward as they usually are at this date. Some splendid vases were shown, not only of the new varieties, but of the standard sorts, but it is worth noting that there was neither a crimson nor a yellow entry and that there was only one entry of variegated. The awards were as follows:

Fifty White Lawson, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Anton Then second.

Fifty White Enchantress, E. G. Hill Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second.

Fifty White Perfection, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second.

Fifty Lady Bountiful, Jensen & Dekema first, H. W. Buckbee second.

Fifty Victory, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, H. W. Buckbee second.

Fifty Craig, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first. Fifty Cardinal, Weiland & Olinger first, H. W. Buckbee second.

Fifty Red Lawson, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, H. W. Buckbee second.

Fifty any other red, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, with Beacon.

Fifty Winsor, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second.

Fifty Enchantress, Fritz Bahr first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Fifty Lawson, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Anton Then second.

Fifty Rose-pink Enchantress, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, E. G. Hill Co. second.

Fifty any other flesh pink, H. W. Buckbee first, with Melody.

Fifty any other dark pink, Chicago Carnation Co. first, Sol Garland second, both with Aristocrat.

Fifty Mrs. Patten, Weiland & Olinger first.

Fifty white introduced 1907, Chicago Carnation Co. first with White Enchantress.

Fifty light pink introduced 1907, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second, both with Winsor.

Fifty dark pink introduced 1907, Chicago Carnation Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, both with Aristocrat.

Fifty red introduced 1907, Chicago Carnation Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, both with Beacon.

One hundred white, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second, Weiland & Olinger third, each with White Perfection.

One hundred flesh pink, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, H. W. Buckbee second, each with Enchantress.

One hundred light pink, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, with Rose-pink Enchantress; Jensen & Dekema second, with Winsor; H. W. Buckbee third, with Rose-pink Enchantress.

One hundred dark pink, Chicago Carnation Co. first, with Aristocrat; E. G. Hill Co. second, with Afterglow; H. W. Buckbee third, with Lawson.

One hundred red, Bassett & Washburn first, with Orland P. Bassett; Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, with Beacon; Jensen & Dekema third, with Defiance.

Among the new carnations the B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., staged a fine vase of its new white, Sarah Hill, which seems a splendid thing. It is a good keeper and Richmond florists who have watched it say it is a splendid producer. Lawson Enchantress also was exhibited by this firm, neither exhibit being for competition.

It was the practically unanimous opinion that the finest vase in the show was Bassett & Washburn's new red, Orland P. Bassett. In the dark pink class Afterglow showed up splendidly, but was beaten by Aristocrat, sent out last year, and from the same originator. Defiance, shown by Jensen & Dekema, was well liked by the growers. White Perfection is hard to beat, but White Enchantress, exhibited by several, is what its name implies and sure to be grown largely next year. Beacon and Winsor were shown in splendid shape.

Among seedling carnations exhibited November 9 was Snowdrift, a fine white from R. Witterstaetter; Red Fisher, from A. C. Canfield; Lucille, from F. Bahr; an unnamed white from the Wanoka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y.; Winona, from Dorner & Sons Co.; Defiance and Sincerity, by W. N. Rudd and Jensen & Dekema, and several seedlings under number from Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association. No. 1605a, among the latter, scored 89 points and the judges pronounced it the best thing in the seedling line at this show.

Seedlings.

For twenty carnation blooms, white, Lucille, exhibited by Fritz Bahr, scored 83 points; No. 1605a, exhibited by Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, scored 89 points.

For twenty red, Defiance, exhibited by Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, scored 82 points.

For twenty flesh-pink, Mrs. Charles Knopf, exhibited by B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., scored 85 points; Sincerity, exhibited by Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, scored 78 points; No. 28103a, exhibited by Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, scored 83 points.

For twenty light pink, Winona, exhibited by F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., scored 67 points.

For twenty any other color, No. 1604c, exhibited by Mount Greenwood Association, scored 87 points.

Sweepstakes were awarded to No. 1605a, which scored 89 points.

The chrysanthemum seedlings were not as numerous as in some other years.

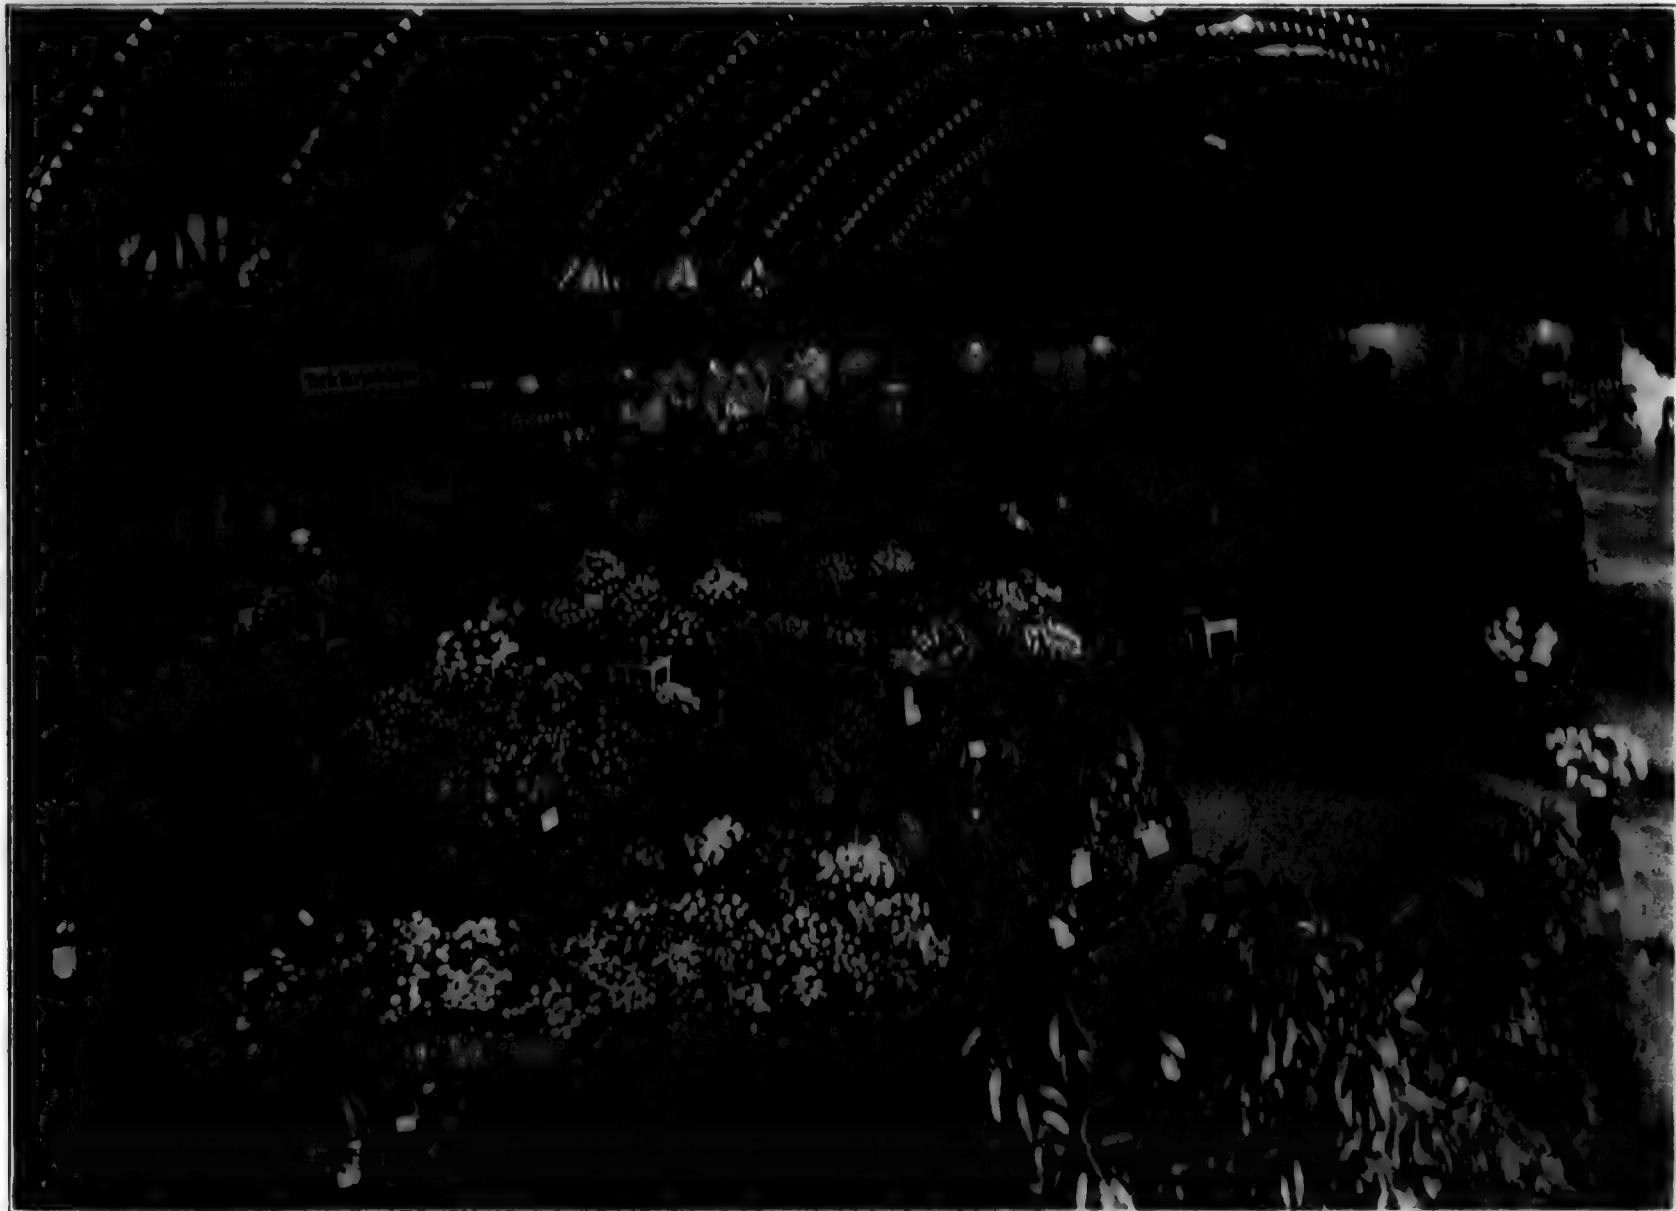

For six white, Leon Truelle, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., scored 85 commercial scale and 84 exhibition scale.

For six yellow, No. 24-03, exhibited by F. Dorner & Sons Co., scored 86 commercial scale and 81 exhibition scale; Polyphone, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., scored 84 commercial scale and 82 exhibition scale.

For six dark yellow, Golden Eagle, exhibited by the Chicago Carnation Co.,

Peter Reinberg's New Rose, Mrs. Marshall Field, as Exhibited at Chicago scored 81 commercial scale, 75 exhibition scale; No. 95-3-06, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, scored 86 commercial scale, 85 exhibition scale; N. Bey, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co., scored 82 commercial scale and 82 exhibition scale.

For six light pink, Bessie Lamberton, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, scored 71 exhibition scale, 72 commercial scale.

For six any other color, John Lemon, exhibited by E. G. Hill Co., scored 84 exhibition scale and 89 commercial scale; Bussett scored 74 on each scale; Petite Renee scored 83 exhibition scale and 78 commercial scale.

The sweepstakes were awarded to John Lemon, which scored 89 points.

Orchids.

November 7 there was a class for a collection of cut orchid blooms, in which C. W. McKellar, Chicago, was awarded first on a display of a large number of varieties, grown by Lager & Hurrell. E. G. Uihlein was second.

Mr. Uihlein staged his usual fine display not for competition, the plants in their large glass case occupying a conspicuous position near the entrance. Lincoln park put up a splendid group from the H. G. Selfridge collection. Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., also was a later arrival with an exhibit.

Floral Arrangements.

For 100 American Beauties arranged for effect, Julius Schnapp was first and C. Frauenfelder & Co. second.

Basket of carnations, R. Jahn first, Butler Floral Co. second.

Basket of chrysanthemums, Butler Floral Co. first, R. Jahn second, Julius Schnapp third.

Basket of orchids, E. G. Uihlein first.

Basket of roses, R. Jahn first, Butler Floral Co. second.

Basket of other flowers, Butler Floral Co. first, R. Jahn second, Julius Schnapp third.

The Banquet.

Nearly 200 persons, a large majority of them trade visitors, attended the annual banquet of the Florists' Club at the Auditorium hotel Saturday evening. At the right hand of President Bruns sat F. H. Traendly, of New York, president-elect of the S. A. F., and W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, chairman of the committee on national flower show. These gentlemen were unfortunately compelled to take an early train, but those present were given an opportunity to hear them between courses of the banquet. Both Mr. Traendly and Mr. Kasting spoke for united support of the S. A. F. and its big show next year. Mr. Traendly invited co-operation also for the August convention at Niagara Falls. Mr. Kasting outlined the national show arrangements as so far completed.

as toastmaster, who called upon Dean Davenport, of the Illinois College of Agriculture, as the first speaker. Mr. Davenport traced the history of agricultural education at state expense in Illinois and said that Illinois now has the largest college of agriculture and state experiment station in the world. Other speakers confined themselves generally to the two topics discussed by the first gentlemen called upon and there was unanimity in support of the national flower show and state aid to the florists' business in the form of educational effort. Prof. Blair, who has direct responsibility for the work in horticulture at Champaign, says it is contemplated to eventually have at the State University a thorough course in practical floriculture adapted to the needs of the sons of florists who will follow in their fathers' footsteps. Among the speakers were: J. A. Valentine, Denver; A. T. Hey, Springfield, Ill.; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; J. T. Temple, Davenport; Ed Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; W. P. Craig, Philadelphia; Thomas Mellstrom, Bruges, Belgium; J. A. Smith, Lake Geneva; J. C. Vaughan, P. J. Hauswirth, P. J. Foley, George Asmus and C. W. McKellar, Chicago. National Flower Show.

The committee of fifty in charge of the national exhibition of the Society of American Florists was in session in Chicago November 8 and voted unanimously to proceed with the first national flower show at Chicago, November 6 to 15, 1908, which gives two Sundays.

Those present at the initial session of the committee were: William F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman; P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago, secretary; W. F. Gude and A. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis; Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit; Frank H. Traendly, president-elect of the S. A. F., New York; Otto Koenig, St. Louis; H. H. Ritter, Dayton, O.; George M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; J. A. Valentine, Denver; W. P. Craig, Philadelphia; Prof. A. C. Beal, Champaign, Ill.; Leonard Kill, J. C. Vaughan, W. N. Rudd, of Chicago, and a representative of the REVIEW.

Chairman Kasting reported that the guarantee fund now aggregates $11,060. A call for twenty per cent of the subscriptions was ordered, Irwin Bertermann, of Indianapolis, being elected treasurer. Committee chairmen were appointed as follows: Executive and finance, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo; American exhibits, Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit; foreign exhibits, E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; premium list, W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood, Ill.; advertising, P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; local management, J. C. Vaughan, Chicago; special features, O. J. Koenig, St. Louis; reception, August Poehlmann, Chicago; auditing, J. A. Valentine, Denver. These nine chairmen were constituted the executive committee, with full power.

It was ordered that an invitation be sent to all horticultural bodies to participate and that the Carnation, Rose and Chrysanthemum societies be asked to co-operate and nominate judges for their respective sections.

The Visitors.

No previous Chicago show has attracted so great a number of visitors as that of the last week. A portion of the names appeared last week. The following were those who registered:

The Exhibition.

The exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York November 6 to 8, in conjunction with the American Institute, brought out flowers that will live long in the memories of some of us. The vase of ten Chrysanthemum Monagny set up by Thomas Proctor, gardener to R. W. Patterson, of Lenox, Mass., were, I venture to say, the finest flowers ever set up in America and probably anywhere else. They averaged twenty-six and one-half inches in circumference, with a finish as fine as satin and stem and foliage just as perfect as the flower. Mr. Proctor richly deserved the C. S. A. silver cup awarded to him. Either one of the other vases set up in this class would have won in other company, W. Turner's Mrs. John E. Dunne and Mrs. Kleinheinz's Mrs. W. Duckham being wonders of their kind.

Mr. Proctor also showed his skill in the class for twenty-five flowers of one variety, putting up twenty-five Merza that were perfect in every way. This variety with ninety-nine men in every hundred will wilt after being cut, but these flowers kept in perfect shape throughout the show.

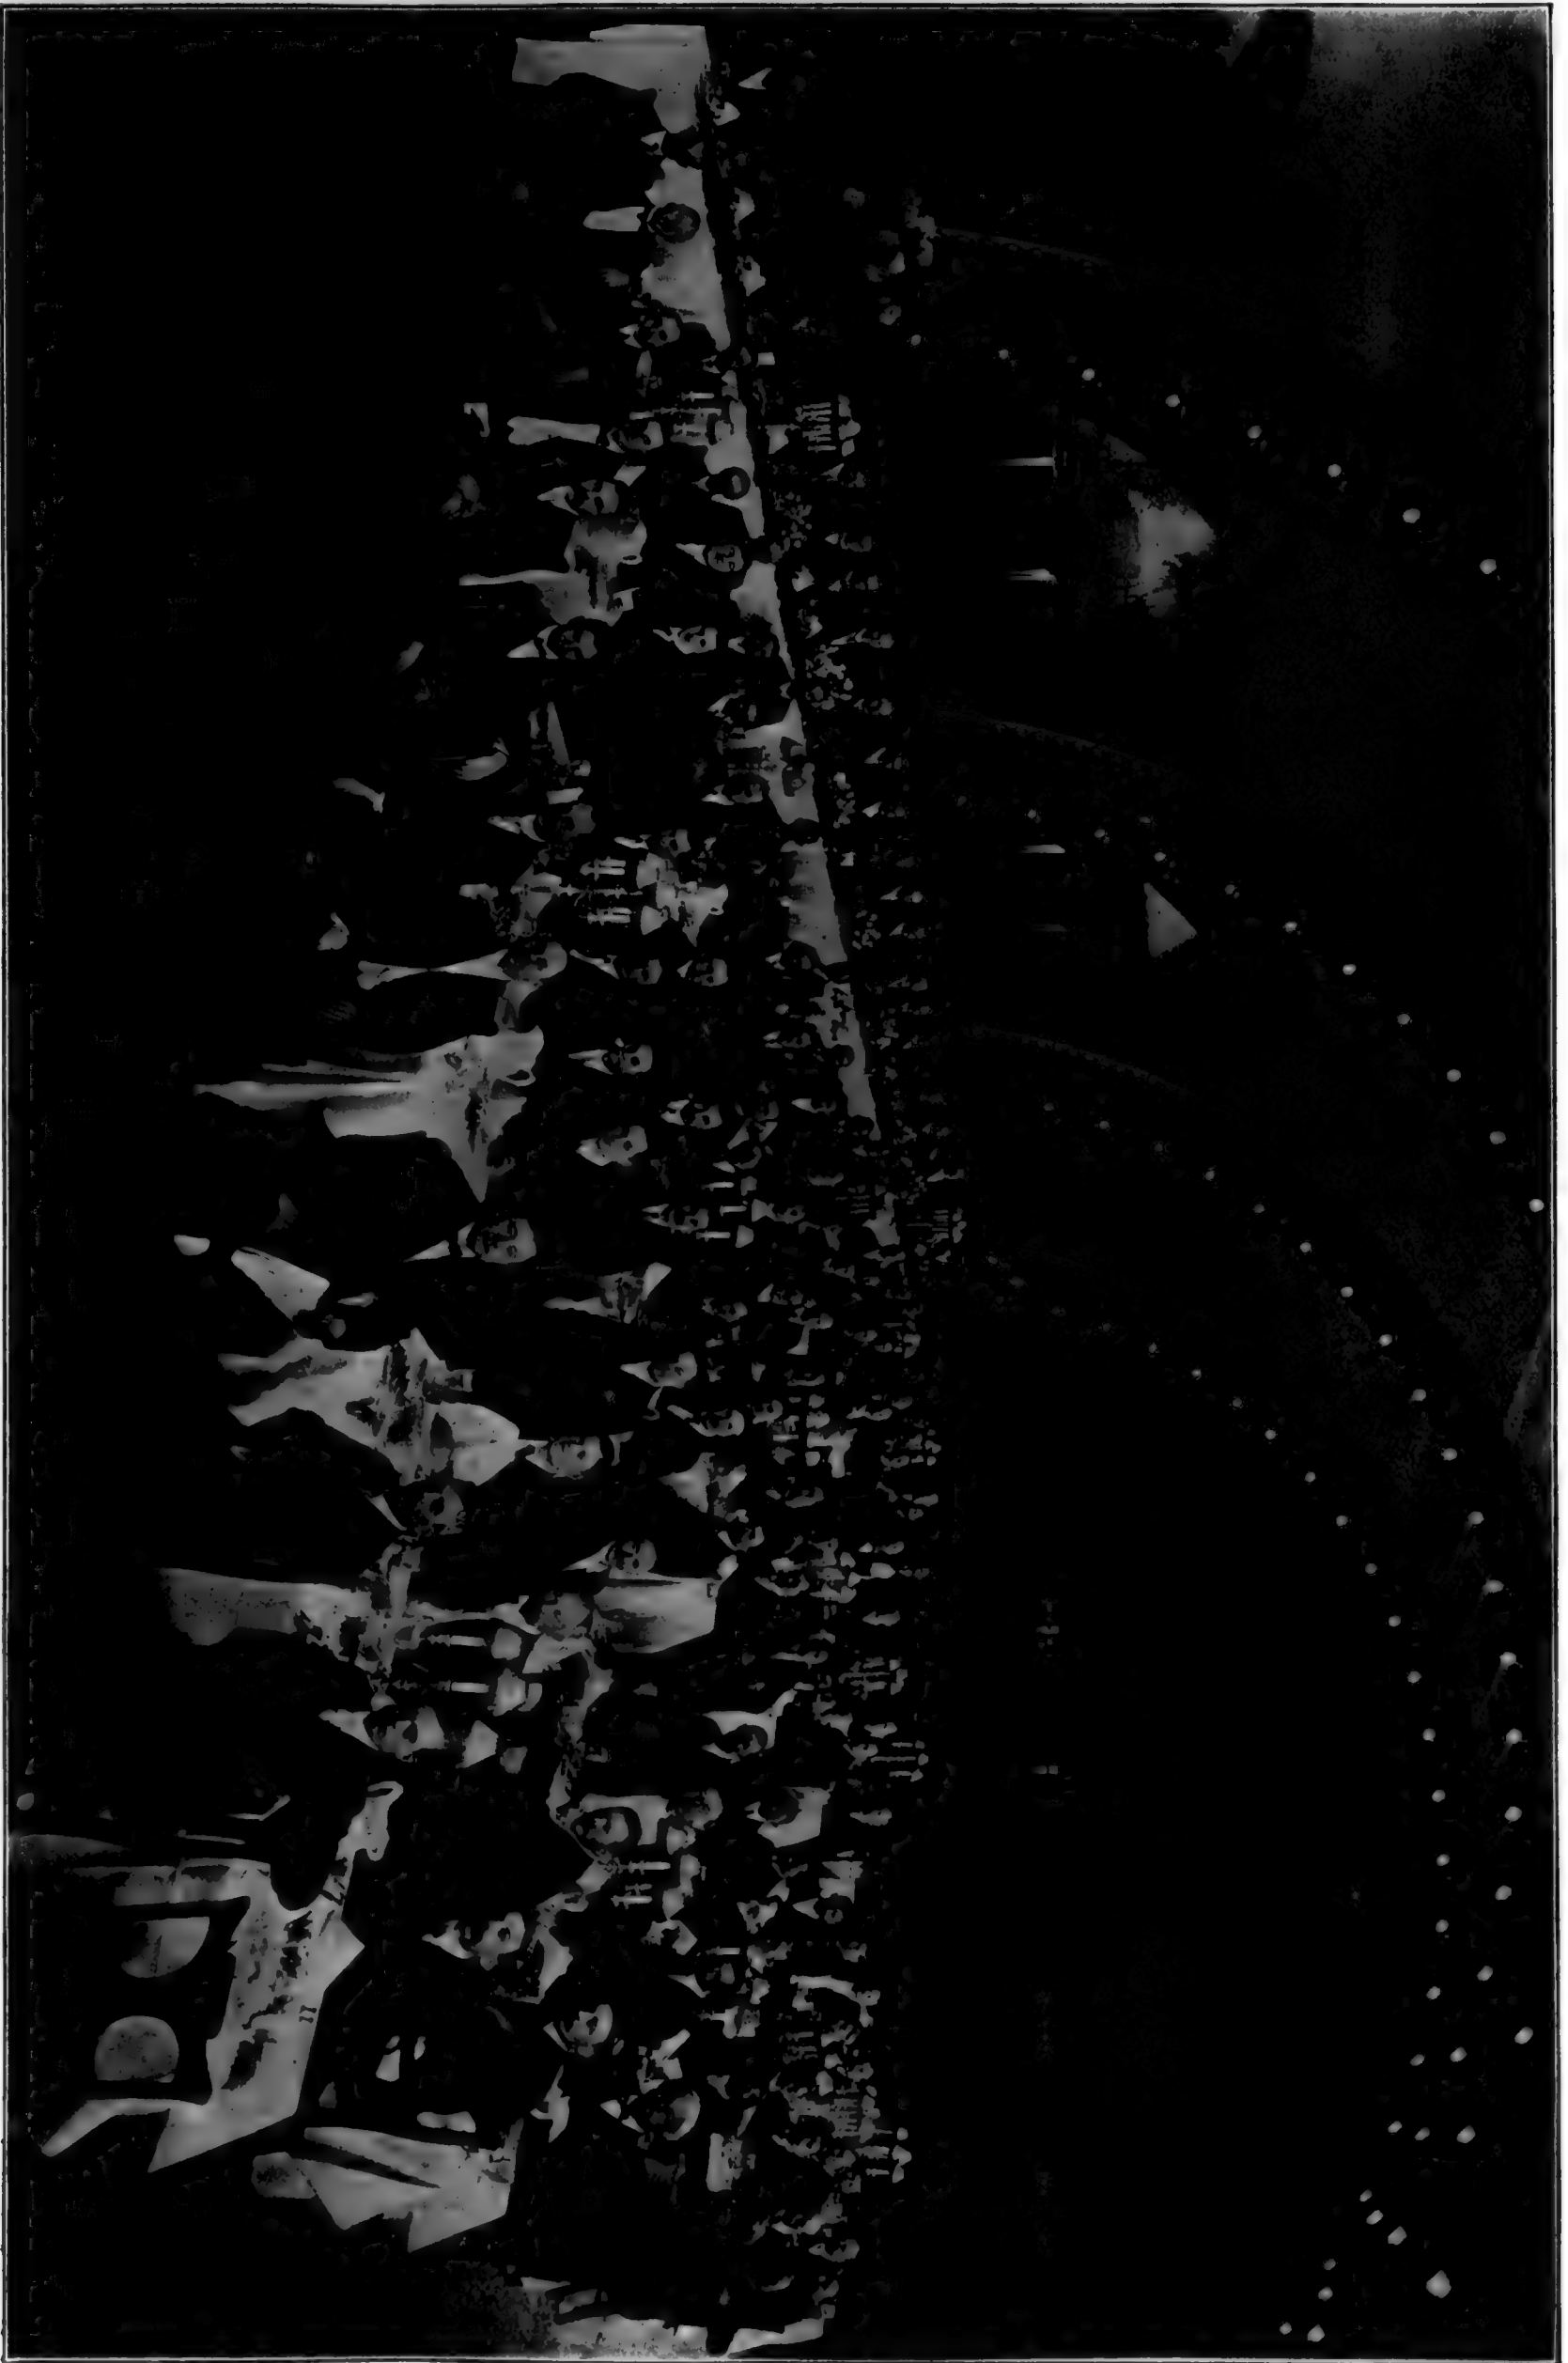

The Frick silver cup for Miss Clay Frick was won by Wm. Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, Pa., with fine blooms, and the same grower took the Nathan Smith prize with Lynnwood Hall, a new white variety almost a duplicate of Convention Hall, W. Hastings running second in this class, with Ialene.

The Dreer special was won by Harry Turner, gardener to Howard Gould, Port Washington, L. I., as was also the Pierson silver cup for ten white, ten yellow and ten pink. Mr. Turner is an exhibitor who will have to be reckoned with in future, his Duckham in the twenty-five flowers of one variety and in ten pink being splendid stock.

The gold medal of W. Wells for six M. Hankey was won by C. H. Totty, with W. H. Waite, Yonkers, N. Y., close behind for the silver medal and Thomas W. Head the bronze.

The Boddington prize for ten Beatrice May was won by John Downing, Morris Plains, N. J., and the Totty prize by Nathan Smith & Son.

The Lord & Burnham gold medal was won by C. H. Totty, with W. W. Moir, a grand new Australian white.

For the largest blooms in the show Thomas Proctor won first for yellow and any other color with F. S. Vallis and Mrs. John E. Dunne, Jas. Fraser, Cedar Court, Morristown, N. J., taking the white with Mrs. D. V. West, and A. H. Wingett the pink, with Lady Hopetoun.

I am not attempting to enumerate all the classes in the exhibition, but merely to pick out the chief points of interest. The Vaughan cup for best specimen plants was won by Peter Duff, who got five first prizes in these classes. William Turner, Oceanic, N. J., averaged a high was first on yellow, with Mary Donnellan, and in pink with O. H. Broomhead.

The standard varieties that scored most in the winning classes were W. Duckham, Morton F. Plant and M. Hankey, in pink; Clay Frick, Merza, Mrs. D. V. West, Nellie Pockett, Beatrice May, whites; C. Montigny, Appleton, Mrs. W. Duckham, F. S. Vallis, in yellows; Mrs. John E. Dunne, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Mrs. Partridge and Mrs. G. Heaume, in the any other colors.

W. Wells, of Merstham, England, had on exhibition some twenty varieties. These showed the effects of their journey across the Atlantic somewhat and did not do the exhibitor justice. Pockett's Surprise will surprise many, I have no doubt, later. Mrs. L. Thorne, as a yellow, showed promise. Modesty compels me to forego at this time describing the two kinds Mr. Wells has named after your humble servant and his spouse, but we will hope they will do in our climate. These imported flowers are always interesting to the public and many are skeptical of the fact that they really have traveled 3,000 miles.

The plants staged were beautiful specimens, W. H. Waite taking several premiums in these classes, as well as Peter Duff. John McNicol, Lawrence, L. I., got first of twelve plants, twelve varieties, and for the class for market plants. James Bell, gardener to Prof. Osborn, should have been, but the tone of the speakers' remarks was hopeful and we may see a boom in the society during 1908, with the reelection of President Loveless. His remarks at the opening showed careful study of the conditions confronting the society and the best ways and means for enlarging the scope of, and increasing the interest in the society. If the committee on affiliation can evolve a plan to get the other societies interested by certificates or medals at the fall shows, it might be productive of good results. As President Loveless very truly said, the work is localized and confined largely to the particular territory where the society happens to hold its meetings, as it is at present conducted. The same holds good, unfortunately, in other societies of a like character and the C. S. A. need not feel discouraged on that account.

The C. S. A. will doubtless join hands with the S. A. F. at Chicago in 1908 and will make that show a splendid success. The meeting place was left in the hands of the executive committee with power and the election of August Poehlmann for vice-president seems to point to Chicago in 1908. The appointing of a committee to draft a scale for judging pompons and singles is a good thing and this broadening out of the society, while it may entail lots of work on the officers, will bear fruit at a later date. The secretary and treasurer also were reelected.

PHILADELPHIA.

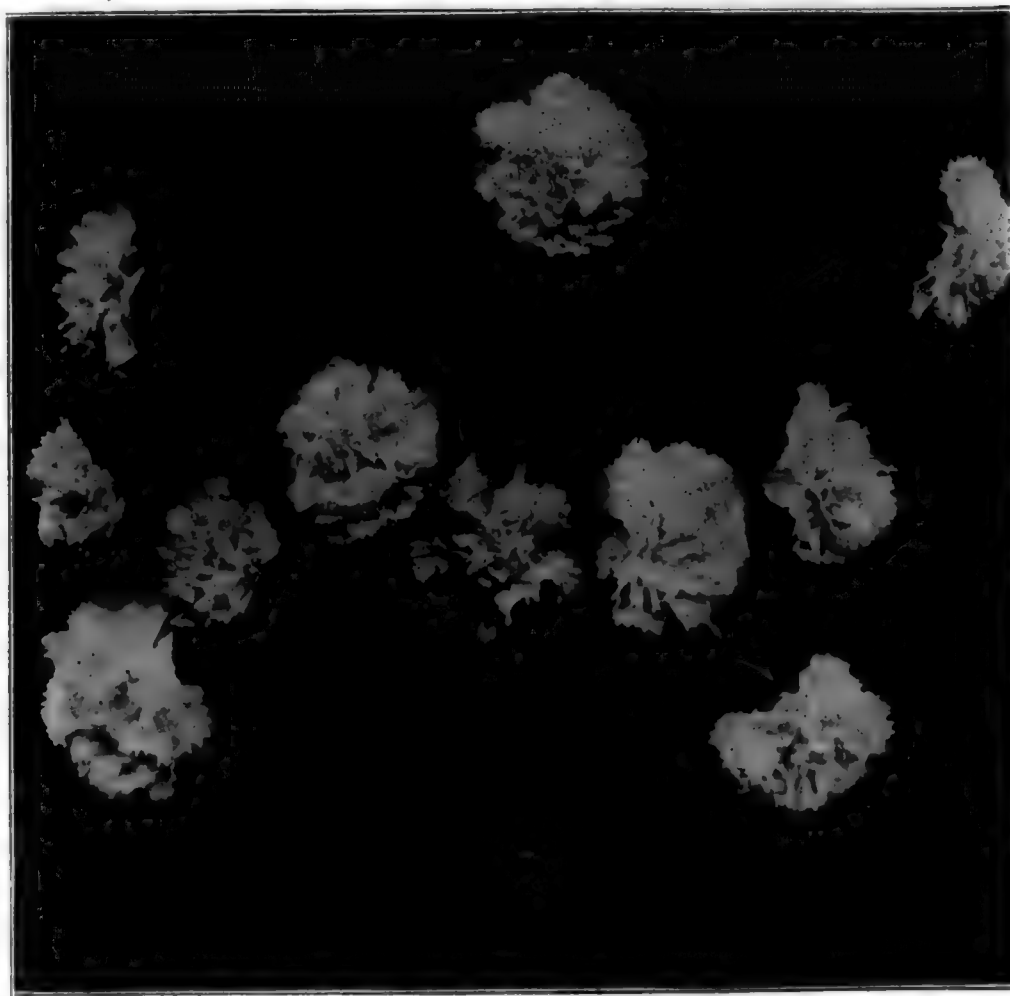

The fall exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was opened in Horticultural hall Tuesday evening, November 12. The center of the main hall was filled with well-grown specimen chrysanthemums in large pots, the plants being taller than usual, averaging fully four and one-half feet in height. They were well furnished with good flowers and foliage. There were few new varieties, most of the exhibitors pinning their faith on well-known, standard sorts. The sides of the hall were adorned by six groups of foliage plants of choice quality, competitors for the new Walker prize. Between them were the 6-inch chrysanthemums grown to single stem. Most of these exhibits showed high cultural skill.

The stage was filled by the Henry A. Dreer Co. collection of foliage plants, new and standard varieties. To the right again was a dainty table of orchids in bloom, with foliage plants arranged for effect. Next to this was a great display of pompon chrysanthemums in good variety. These pompons, with the singles, formed a larger proportion of the flowers in the exhibition than in past seasons.

The foyer was filled with well-grown ferns, specimens from private collections, and rare stove plants. Between these and the main hall were the cut chrysanthemums; not so large a collection as in former years, but of high quality and showing to great advantage. In these classes the Walker prize again proved popular, bringing out four splendid entries of sixty flowers each, in twelve varieties.

Three seedlings of unusual promise are on trial. Next to them is perhaps the finest pair of vases of white in the hall. Both are Nellie Pockett.

In the lower hall evergreens, ferns, begonias, vegetables, seeds, bulbs and implements are being arranged for judging as these notes are written. PHIL.

quality of stock all through, running first in twenty varieties, ten white, ten yellow and others in the classes for sixes.

C. H. Totty won the thirty varieties, one flower of each, with Thomas Proctor a close second. For the ten in variety, long stems, conditions were reversed and Mr. Proctor got first to Totty's second. The classes of six were won mostly by George Hale, Seabright, N. J.; Thomas W. Head, Groton, Conn., and A. H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.

In the new varieties Chas. H. Totty

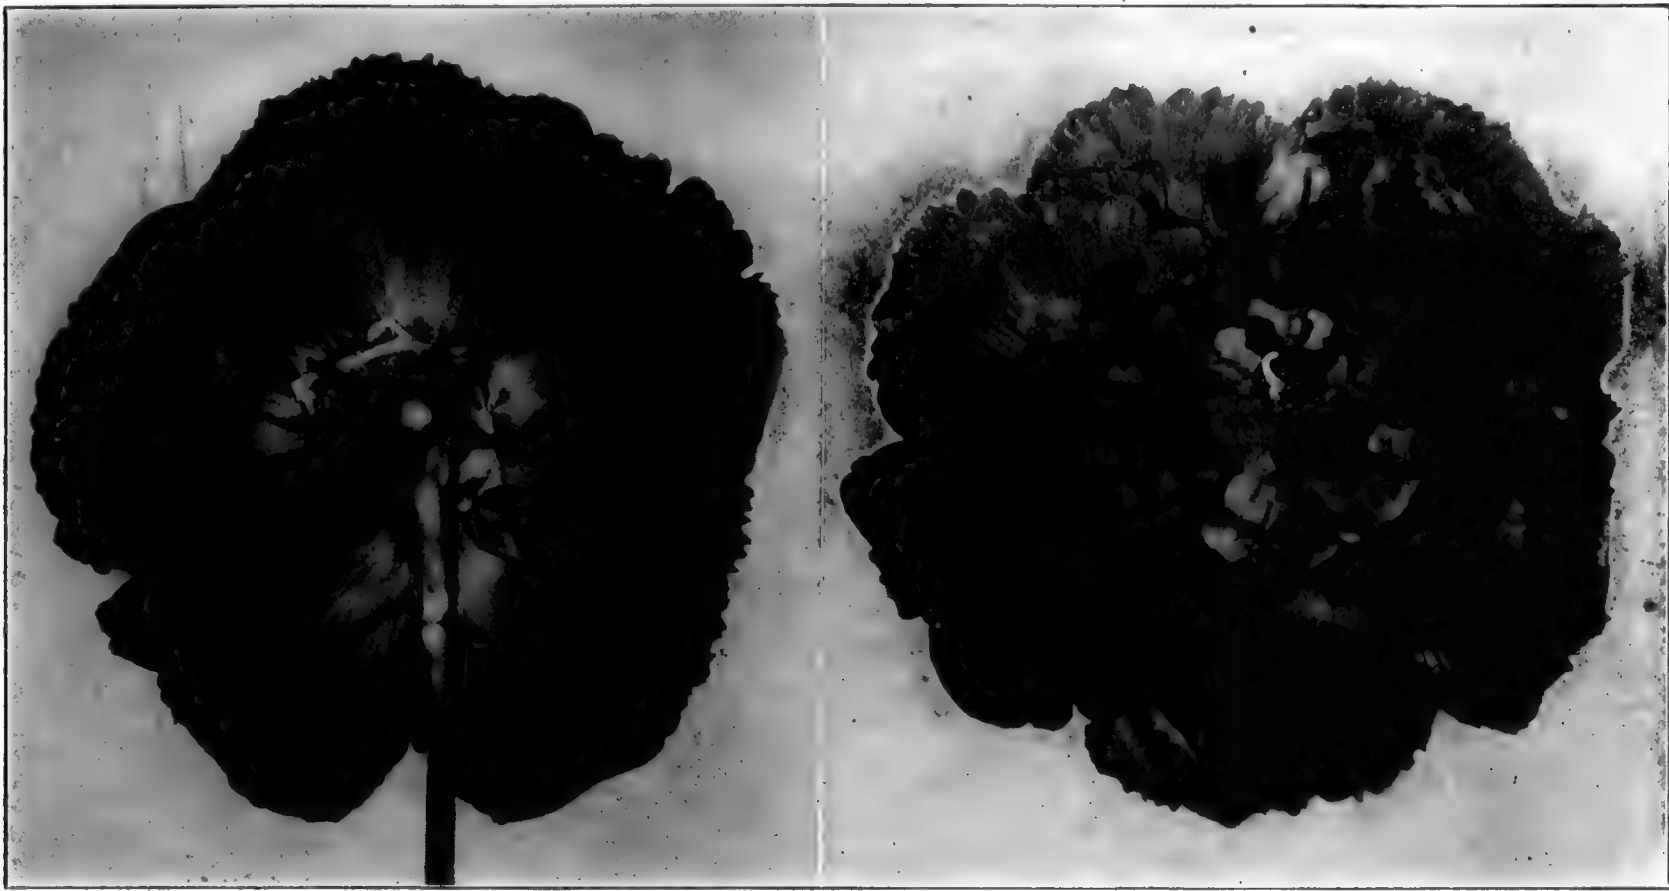

Garrison, N. Y., also was a prize winner in the 6-inch classes.

W. W. Kennedy, Red Bank, N. J., received certificates for several singles, as did also Charles H. Totty and George Hale.

The judges were Eugene Dailedouze, W. N. Craig and Robert Cameron, and their work was done promptly and well.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was one of the most successful yet given by this organization. The exhibits were numerous and the quality superb, the entries being practically all from the private gardeners on the splendid estates of the neighborhood. Among the principal exhibitors were William C. Roberts, gardener for Frederick Potter; W. H. Waite, gardener for Samuel Untermeyer; David MacFarlane, gardener for Emil Berolsheimer; George Middleton, gardener for William Rockefeller; Robert Angus, gardener for Joseph Eastman; Oscar Carlson, gardener for Mrs. O. B. Jennings; Francis Milne, gardener for E. H. Weatherbee; Thomas Aitchison, gardener for Mrs. Henry Siegel; Edward Jenkins, gardener for Giraud Foster; Thomas A. Lee, gardener for Mrs. M. E. Sands; H. J. Thompson, gardener for Alfred Marshall; Howard Nicols, gardener for Mrs. J. B. Trevor; William J. Buckley, gardener for Stuyvesant Fish; James Stuart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable; William Inglis, gardener for John J. Riker; E. Lundberg, gardener for Henry Coon; William Lyons, gardener at Spring Brook Farm, and others.

The F. R. Pierson Co. was given a silver medal for Nephrolepis Superbissima. Lager & Hurrell received a certificate of merit for a display of orchids. Honorable mention was given H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, for an exhibit of ferns, palms, etc., and F. R. Pierson Co. received certificates for a group of chrysanthemums and ferns and for carnations.

CHESTNUT HILL, PA.

The eighth annual exhibition of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society opened in Joslin hall, Thursday evening, November 7, continuing throughout the week until Friday. The exhibits, coming principally from the private gardeners on the Hill, were varied and of excellent quality. In the class for cut chrysanthemums Eaton led in the whites, Colonel Appleton in the yellows, and William Duckham in the pinks. The pompons were a feature of the exhibition, both cut and in pots, being varied and of excellent quality. There were a number of exceptionally well-grown flowering plants of the usual high quality shown in the foliage plants, a specimen of Boston fern being noteworthy. A good table of vegetables was shown. Music, lovely ladies and meeting of old friends made the occasion memorable.

ORANGE, N. J.

The thirteenth annual exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in the hall of the Woman's Club in East Orange, November 7 and 8. The principal exhibitors were D. Kindsgrab, gardener to Wm. Runkle; Peter Duff, gardener to J. C. Brown; A. T. Capaarn, gardener to Stewart Hartshorne; Max Schneider, gardener to Charles Hathaway; William Reid, gardener to S. M. & A. Colgate; Albert F. Larsen, gardener to Stewart Dickson; George Von Qualen, gardener to A. B. Jenkins; J. J. Dervan, gardener to A. C. Van Gaasbeek; George Oakley, gardener to T. A. Gillespie, and other private gardeners. George Smith and Popken & Collins also were among the prize winners.

Trade exhibits not for competition included a fine table of orchids from Lager & Hurrell; a group of orchids, Phoenix Roebelenii and Ficus pandurata from Joseph A. Manda; conifers in pots, variegated privet and the new nephrolepis, South Orange, from W. A. Manda; Enchantress carnations from Henry Hornacker and group of chrysanthemums from Popken & Collins.

The judges were John N. May, Charles H. Atkins and Anthony J. Manda.

BOSTON.

The annual exhibition just closed strikingly showed the changing conditions in and around Boston. For many years the big specimen plants have been a striking feature. Gradually their culture has been discontinued until this year not a solitary plant of this class was shown. Plants of more moderate size are now more popular and some years may elapse before we have an era of the huge specimens which used to be the wonder of visitors to our shows. Nor are the specimen blooms as much in favor as they were a few years ago; flowers of medium size are preferred, while the anemone and single varieties are coming rapidly to the fore. In spite of the altered conditions there was a fine and interesting show.

For twenty-five cut blooms, distinct, first prize went to Peter B. Robb for the following: Nellie Pockett, President Viger, Mrs. Felton, Yellow Eaton, Dr. Enguehard, F. A. Cobbold, Mrs. H. Partridge, W. R. Church, Mrs. W. Duckham, Guy Hamilton, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Mrs. Swinburne, Yellow Jerome Jones, Souv. de la Comtesse Reillé, Lady Hopetoun, Fidelity, M. F. Plant, General Hutton, Mrs. J. E. Dunne, Timothy Eaton and Mrs. G. A. Miller. Second went to E. D. Jordan, W. Abraham gardener; third to Edwin Jenkins.

For six vases, ten blooms each, W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, won with Mrs. H. Partridge, Enguehard, Merza, John Shrimpton, Appleton and Mrs. J. E. Dunne. For twelve Japanese incurved, E. O. Jordan was in the lead with fine flowers of Mrs. J. Jones, Merza, Miss M. Hankey, Millicent Richardson, Mrs. H. Barnes, Princess, Souci, Mrs. Peabody, Duckham, Miss Clay Frick, Appleton and Peter Kay. The best twelve, reflexed, from Mrs. Lester Leland, were Beatrice May, Nellie Pockett, Mrs. G. Heaume, Mrs. W. R. Etherington, Brighthurst, Bessie Godfrey, Cheltoni, May Seddon, F. S. Vallis, Souv. de la Comtesse Reillé, Reginald Vallis and Valerie Greenham. W. Whitman was both first and second for six new varieties of 1907 introduction.

For ten blooms, pink, W. A. Riggs won, with Enguehard; W. Whitman second, with the same variety, and third,

The Dreer special was won by Harry Turner, gardener to Howard Gould, hort Washington, L. I., as was also the Pier-son silver cup for ten white, ten yellow and ten pink. Mr. Turner is an exhibitor who will have to be reckoned with in future, his Duckham in the twenty five flowers of one variety and in ten pink being splendid stock.

The gold medal of W. Wells for six M. Haukey was won by C. H. Totty, with W. H. Waite, Yonkers, N. Y., close behind for the silver medal and Thomas W. Head the bronze.

The Boddington prize for ten Beatrice May was won by John Downing, Morris Plains, N. J., and the Totty prize by Nathan Smith & Son.

The center of the main hall was filled with well-grown specimen chrysanthemums in large pots, the plants being taller than usual, averaging fully four and one-half feet in height. They were well furnished with good flowers and foliage. There were few new varieties, most of the exhibitors pinning their faith on well-known, standard sorts. The sides of the hall were adorned by six groups of foliage plants of choice quality, competitors for the new Walker prize. Between them were the 6-inch chrysanthemums grown to single stem. Most of these exhibits showed high cultural skill.

The stage was filled by the Henry A. Dreer Co. collection of foliage plants, new and standard varieties. To the right again was a dainty table of orchids in bloom, with foliage plants arranged for effect. Next to this was a great display of pompon chrysanthemums in good variety. These pompons, with the singles, formed a larger proportion of the flowers in the exhibition than in past seasons.

The foyer was filled with well-grown ferns, specimens from private collections, and rare stove plants. Between these and the main hall were the cut chrysanthemums; not so large a collection as in former years, but of high quality and showing to great advantage. In these classes the Walker prize again proved popular, bringing out four splendid entries of sixty flowers each, in twelve varieties.

Three seedlings of unusual promise are on trial. Next to them is perhaps the finest pair of vases of white in the hall. Both are Nellie Pockett.

In the lower hall evergreens, ferns, begonias, vegetables, seeds, bulbs and implements are being arranged for judging as these notes are written. PHIL.

quality of stock all through, running first in twenty varieties, ten white, ten yellow and others in the classes for sixes.

C. H. Totty won the thirty varieties, one flower of each, with Thomas Proctor a close second. For the ten in variety, long stems, conditions were reversed and Mr. Proctor got first to Totty's second. The classes of six were won mostly by George Hale, Seabright, N. J.; Thomas W. Head, Groton, Conn., and A. H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.

In the new varieties Chas. H. Totty

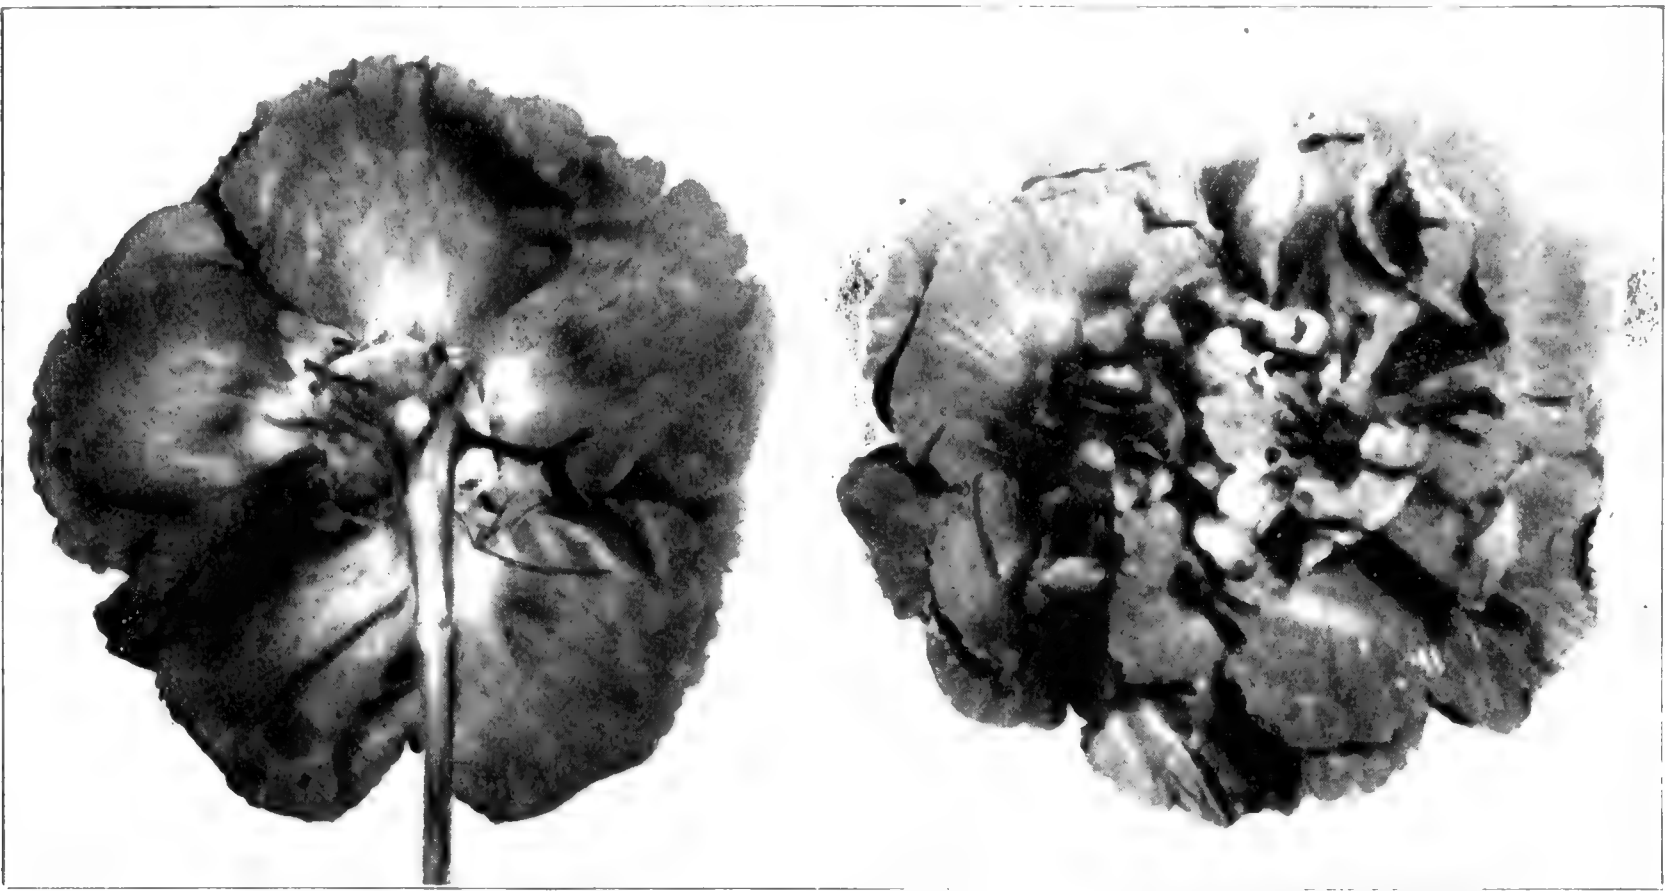

Garrison, N. Y., also was a prize winner in the 6-inch classes.

W. W. Kennedy, Red Bank, N. J., received certificates for several singles, as did also Charles H. Totty and George Hale.

The judges were Eugene Dailledouze, W. N. Craig and Robert Cameron, and their work was done promptly and well.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was one of the most successful yet given by this organization. The exhibits were numerous and the quality superb, the entries being practically all from the private gardeners on the splendid estates of the neighborhood. Among the principal exhibitors were William C. Roberts, gardener for Frederick Potter; W. H. Waite, gardener for Samuel Untermyer; David MacFarlane, gardener for Emil Berolsheimer; George Middleton, gardener for William Rockefeller; Robert Angus, gardener for Joseph Eastman; Oscar Carlson, gardener for Mrs. O. B. Jennings; Francis Milne, gardener for E. H. Weatherbee; Thomas Aitchison, gardener for Mrs. Henry Siegel; Edward Jenkins, gardener for Giraud Foster; Thomas A. Lee, gardener for Mrs. M. E. Sands; H. J. Thompson, gardener for Alfred Marshall; Howard Nicols, gardener for Mrs. J. B. Trevor; William J. Buckley, gardener for Stuyvesant Fish; James Stuart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable; William Inglis, gardener for John J. Riker; E. Lundberg, gardener for Henry Coon; William Lyons, gardener at Spring Brook Farm, and others.

The F. R. Pierson Co. was given a silver medal for Nephrolepis Superbissima. Lager & Hurrell received a certificate of merit for a display of orchids. Honorable mention was given H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, for an exhibit of ferns, palms, etc., and F. R. Pierson Co. received certificates for a group of chrysanthemums and ferns and for carnations.

CHESTNUT HILL, PA.

The eighth annual exhibition of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society opened in Joslin hall, Thursday evening, November 7, continuing throughout the week until Friday. The exhibits, coming principally from the private gardeners on the Hill, were varied and of excellent quality. In the class for cut chrysanthemums

Eaton led in the whites, Colonel Appleton in the yellows, and William Duckham in the pinks. The pompons were a feature of the exhibition, both cut and in pots, being varied and of excellent quality. There were a number of exceptionally well-grown flowering plants of the usual high quality shown in the foliage plants, a specimen of Boston fern being noteworthy. A good table of vegetables was shown. Music, lovely ladies and meeting of old friends made the occasion memorable.

ORANGE, N. J.

The thirteenth annual exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in the hall of the Woman's Club in East Orange, November 7 and 8. The principal exhibitors were D. Kindsgrab, gardener to Wm. Runkle; Peter Duff, gardener to J. C. Brown; A. T. Capaarn, gardener to Stewart Hartshorne; Max Schneider, gardener to Charles Hathaway; William Reid, gardener to S. M. & A. Colgate; Albert F. Larsen, gardener to Stewart Dickson; George Von Qualen, gardener to A. B. Jenkins; J. J. Dervan, gardener to A. C. Van Gaasbeek; George Oakley, gardener to T. A. Gillespie, and other private gardeners. George Smith and Popken & Collins also were among the prize winners.

Trade exhibits not for competition included a fine table of orchids from Lager & Hurrell; a group of orchids, Phoenix Robelenii and Ficus pandurata from Joseph A. Manda; conifers in pots, variegated privet and the new nephrolepis, South Orange, from W. A. Manda; Eucharist carnations from Henry Hornacker and group of chrysanthemums from Popken & Collins.

The judges were John N. May, Charles H. Atkins and Anthony J. Manda.

BOSTON.

The annual exhibition just closed strikingly showed the changing conditions in and around Boston. For many years the big specimen plants have been a striking feature. Gradually their culture has been discontinued until this year not a solitary plant of this class was shown. Plants of more moderate size are now more popular and some years may elapse before we have an era of the huge specimens which used to be the wonder of visitors to our shows. Nor are the specimen blooms as much in favor as they were a few years ago; flowers of medium size are preferred, while the anemone and single varieties are coming rapidly to the fore. In spite of the altered conditions there was a fine and interesting show.

For twenty-five cut blooms, distinct, first prize went to Peter B. Robb for the following: Nellie Pockett, President Viger, Mrs. Felton, Yellow Eaton, Dr. Enguehard, F. A. Cobbold, Mrs. H. Partridge, W. R. Church, Mrs. W. Duckham, Guy Hamilton, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Mrs. Swinburne, Yellow Jerome Jones, Souv. de la Comtesse Reillé, Lady Hopetoun, Fidelity, M. F. Plant, General Hutton, Mrs. J. E. Dunne, Timothy Eaton and Mrs. G. A. Miller. Second went to E. D. Jordan, W. Abraham gardener; third to Edwin Jenkins.

For six vases, ten blooms each, W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, won with Mrs. H. Partridge, Enguehard, Merza, John Shrimpton, Appleton and Mrs. J. E. Dunne. For twelve Japanese incurved, E. O. Jordan was in the lead with fine flowers of Mrs. J. Jones, Merza, Miss M. Hankey, Millicent Richardson, Mrs. H. Barnes, Princess, Souci, Mrs. Penbody, Duckham, Miss Clay, Erick, Appleton and Peter Kay. The best twelve, reflexed, from Mrs. Lester Leland, were Beatrice May, Nellie Pockett, Mrs. G. Heaume, Mrs. W. R. Etherington, Brighthurst, Bessie Godfrey, Cheltoni, May Seddon, F. S. Vallis, Souv. de la Comtesse Reillé, Reginald Vallis and Valerie Greenham. W. Whitman was both first and second for six new varieties of 1907 introduction.

For ten blooms, pink, W. A. Riggs won, with Enguehard; W. Whitman second, with the same variety, and third, with Miss M. Hankey. W. Whitman won in reds, with John Shrimpton; James Nicol second, with Shrimpton; W. A. Riggs third, with Mrs. H. Partridge. For white, W. A. Riggs led with splendid Merza; James Nicol second, with Merza; W. Whitman third, with Fidelity. In the yellow class W. A. Riggs was first, with Mrs. W. Duckham, and second with Appleton; A. F. Whitin third, with Appleton. For any other color, A. F. Whitin was first, with W. R. Church; E. Jenkins second, with Glenview; J. Nicol, third with Dakoma.

R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co. had the best display of pompons. James Nicol won for the best large vase of Mrs. Jerome Jones. For the special prizes for 100 blooms in one vase, W. W. Edgar took first and second with excellent Bonaffon and W. Duckham; E. MacMulkin third, with Bonaffon.

For the specials, for retailers only, for table of chrysanthemums arranged with autumn foliage, Sidney Hoffman was first and E. MacMulkin, second. For similar table for commercial growers, Mr. Hoffman again led, using Garza entirely; Mrs. E. M. Gill, second; E. MacMulkin, third.

Waban Conservatories took the special prize for fifty roses, with grand American Beauties; Carl Juergens second, with Beauty; W. H. Elliott third, with fine Kaiserin.

For six vases carnations, fifty blooms in each, Peter Fisher captured the premier position and $40 with superb flowers of White Perfection, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Beacon and Mrs. Ian Harvey. S. J. Goddard took second, $30. Included in his collection were fine Helen Goddard, Octaroon and White Perfection. Third prize went to Backer & Co. and fourth to F. R. Pierson Co.

For display of cut orchids, J. E. Rothwell, E. Johansson gardener, was first and Colonel Charles Pfaff, Geo. Melvin gardener, second.

For display coniferous trees, J. Breck & Sons won. For group of flowering plants covering 300 square feet, E. MacMulkin led, followed by W. Whitman and Sidney Hoffman. E. MacMulkin also won for group of orchids, Cattleya labiata and Farleyense fern being chiefly used. W. H. Elliott had the best twenty-five commercial grown pot chrysanthemums. A new class for six plants in 6-inch pots, grown six flowers to a plant, proved satisfactory and much better than the usual one flower to a plant. Mrs. Lester Leland took first and second and W. Whitman third. For twelve plants, single-flowered varieties, Mrs. Frederick Ayers was first and third and W. Whitman second. For the Gardeners' and Florists' Club prizes for table centerpieces the winners were S. Hoffman, F. Heeremans and E. MacMulkin.

Probably the most attractive feature of the show was the decorated table of fruit for the special prizes. E. MacMulkin won, Isaac Locke & Co. second, Irwin Ricker & Co. third, and F. Heeremans fourth. For collection of vegetables, fifteen varieties, E. Jenkins staged a splendid lot, winning the cup offered by Farquhar & Co.; W. F. Clemens second and Mrs. O. B. Jennings third.

Among the miscellaneous exhibits, C.

H. Totty had a large collection of single chrysanthemums. Mrs. J. M. Sears, W. C. Ritchie, gardener, had forty varieties of singles and anemones. Philip Dexter, James Salter gardener, had fine seedling anemone varieties and carnations. M. A. Patten, C. S. Stuart, Mrs. Marian Pierce, Robert Rust and S. J. Goddard had displays of carnations. A. Roper showed a fine vase of Bay State. His fine new variegated Priscilla, another variegated from S. J. Goddard, showed up well, also White Fair Maid. H. A. Jahn had some fine white, crimson and pink seedlings. W. Nicholson had Afterglow; Wanoka Greenhouses had Apple Blossom; M. A. Patten, a good seedling No. 133.

Mrs. H. D. Underwood had six standard chrysanthemums; R. & J. Farquhar & Co. a handsome group of bays, palms and Lorraine begonias. Groups of the latter flower also came from S. Hoffman, A. M. Davenport and Robert Rust; Geo. M. Haile had fine seedling single chrysanthemums. R. Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co. received a certificate of merit for a large collection of pompons; Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, a cultural certificate for Odontoglossum grande with nine flowers to a spike; W. A. Manda, a certificate of merit for Dracena Mandarina; Robert Scott & Son, a certificate for new rose, Mrs. Jardine, which was much admired. F. R. Pierson Co. also received a certificate for their new nephrolepis, Superbissima. Lager & Hurrell had a nice group of orchids; Julius Roehrs Co. foliage plants and orchids. Ludovia crenifolia and Cyclanthus bipartitus received honorable mention in their group.

There were, as usual, many visitors from a distance. The attendance was large, although the weather was unfavorable on the closing day. The committee of arrangements worked hard and deserves much credit for its efficient labors.

BULBOUS PLANTS.

Anemones and ranunculi are not so much grown as their beauty merits. They sell well in early spring, when people are tiring of carnations, roses, violets and the ordinary run of bulbous plants. A good way to grow them is to plant them between the rows of double violets, the temperature exactly suiting them. If violets are not grown, they may be successfully grown in flats in a cold house. Anemones fulgens and coronaria, single, and St. Brigid, semi-double, are the best sorts. The turban ranunculi are the largest and showiest, but the French and Persian are both pretty.

Polyanthus narcissi of the Grand Monarque type are useful in pans. Their odor is rather heavy, but they are an attractive plant. Place in a frame on a bed of ashes and cover with the same material. Do not place outdoors.

Allium Neapolitanum, with large heads of pure white flowers, is an excellent florists' flower. Grow in pots or pans and treat in the same way as iris and gladioli. A little more heat may be given than to the two other bulbs named, when forcing.

Babianas are not much seen now. They resemble the spiræas. Their colors vary from lavender and pink to crimson and violet. They do well in rather small pans, 6-inch being a suitable size.

Oxalises are lovely little bulbs for hanging pots and baskets and may be sold to almost anyone with an assurance that they will grow well. The flowers are white, yellow, red and crimson and are produced for a long time. Plant an inch deep and allow eight or ten bulbs to a 6-inch pan. Give full sunshine all the time.

There are few more beautiful bulbous flowers than ixia and spiraxis. Their graceful habit, with slender, gladiolus-like leaves and spikes of star-shaped flowers in a wide range of colors, is very attractive to critical flower buyers. They succeed well in 6-inch pots or pans, which should be well drained. Keep them in a coldframe until November; then place them in a cool, airy house, well up to the light, where the night temperature does not exceed 50 degrees. Water sparingly until growth is well advanced, then more freely. The best ixias are I. craterioides major and I. rosea plena Wonder. Tritomas want similar treatment to ixias. C. W.

ROSE MRS. POTTER PALMER.

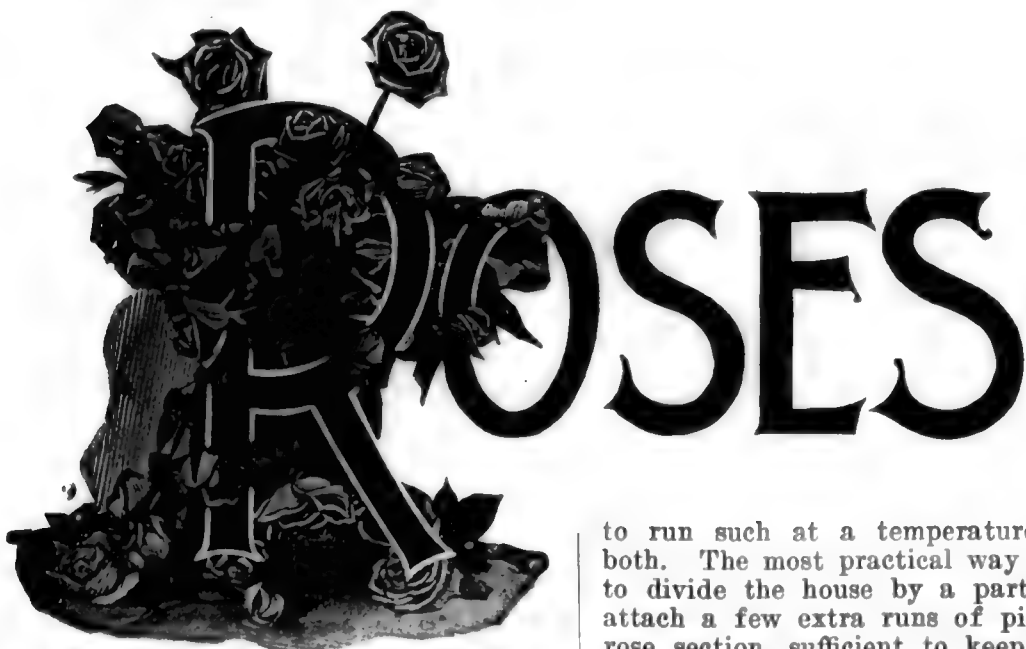

In this week's REVIEW there appears an illustration of the new rose, Mrs. Potter Palmer, the photograph having been made from a vase exhibited by the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, during the autumn opening, the last days of October. This rose is to be introduced next season by the Poehlmann Bros. Co. It is a sport of Chatenay and has the characteristics of that variety, save that the color is a much deeper pink. The general public, as well as the trade, considers the color a distinct improvement on Chatenay, so that it is likely that in a few years the old variety will have largely given place to its deeper-colored sport. The naming of the rose for Chicago's society leader was an excellent business stroke. The better class of flower buyers in Chicago have been asking for the variety to such an extent that the Poehlmann Bros. Co. has been unable to supply the demand for the cut flowers since the flower show exploitation of the Mrs. Palmer rose began.

MILDEW.

I enclose several leaves of Maman Cochet rose which you will note are diseased. Please tell us what it is and what to do for it. We have been treating it as mildew. E. M. R.

You are quite correct; the trouble is mildew and if you had carried out instructions as recently given fully in the REVIEW you could not possibly have this pest in your houses. It does not matter what variety of roses you grow; if you treat them right in all respects you can, by the sulphur remedy, soon clear your houses of mildew.

This pest is the ordinary corollary of keeping the stock coddled. By this I mean all kinds of treatment approaching greenhouse treatment—shading the glass, moist atmosphere, want of ventila-

IN CARNATION HOUSE.

Can a house be built 22x150 feet and heated with hot water so that there will be a difference of 10 degrees in the length of the house? If this can be done, would it be practical to grow a variety of stock in it? I am thinking of roses at one end and carnations at the other. J. A. F.

It is neither satisfactory nor profitable to grow carnations and roses in the same house and practically impossible to run such at a temperature to suit both. The most practical way would be to divide the house by a partition and attach a few extra runs of pipe in the rose section, sufficient to keep the temperature up to the normal, 58 degrees during zero weather.

Some varieties of carnations can be grown successfully at 45 to 48 degrees, but we have no roses at present under glass culture that can be grown profitably lower than 56 to 58 degrees, and as the amount of moisture in the atmosphere for roses is in excess of that required for carnations it will easily be seen that the sections should be separated, both on account of temperature and condition of atmosphere. RIBES.

tion and carelessness in the application of ventilation, causing draughts. To remedy this condition, apply the sulphur mixture to pipes twice a week and shut the ventilators during the coldest hours of the morning for a couple of hours; and apply the sulphur in the powder form once a week. RIBES.

RAMBLERS FOR CHRISTMAS.

I have about twenty-five strong plants of Baby Rambler rose in 8-inch pots, where they have been growing all summer. The wood is pretty well ripened.

How should these be treated so as to be in bloom at Christmas? J. R.

It is now too late to start your plants and have them flowering at Christmas. I have seen a few of these roses at the holidays, but they were merely a ghost of what they ought to be. These roses will sell much better toward Easter and it would be better for you to lay your plants on their sides and start them early in February for an Easter crop. The latter holiday comes April 19 next season. C. W.

overwater those in pots and keep any in flats or sand just moist enough to prevent shriveling. These latter make grand fibrous roots and grow rapidly when potted up and kept in warmth.

Lilies.

The buds on lilies wanted for Christmas should now be plainly seen. The sunlight is decreasing each day and only 70 degrees at night will make your lilies come on in season if at all backward. If the buds are beginning to droop you are all right and need not force too hard. Look out for aphids. Dropping a little tobacco dust over the tops of the plants is quite effective, but fumigating each week is the best preventive.

Probably the bulk of your plants intended for next Easter are potted and these should now be pushing above ground. Be careful not to water too freely until the pots are full of roots. As the mums retire from the field, the lilies can be brought into some of the benches vacated.

Dutch Bulbs.

The late arrivals of Dutch bulbs are now at hand and no time should be lost in getting them into the soil. Earlier potted batches of tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, etc., should be looked over and they will probably be found somewhat on the dry side. Let them have a good soaking, for there is no more fertile cause of Dutch bulbs failing than dry conditions at the root. Cover with loam, ashes or some other material after this watering, to prevent the roots from throwing the soil out of the pots. Do not make the mistake of trying to force these when just above the ground.

Rambler Roses.

The canes of Rambler roses should now be getting well ripened if the plants have been laid on their sides as previously recommended. Leave them outdoors

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

If the stock of that brilliant and ever popular Christmas plant, the poinsettia, has been given a temperature of 60 degrees at night, the bracts will now be starting to develop. The present is a critical time with them, as a little neglect will spoil your chances of securing good flower-heads. Liquid manure may be applied every fourth or fifth day, taking care not to give it in too strong doses. Use a little soot or nitrate of soda with it to keep the foliage a dark green color. This applies more especially to plants in pans or pots, which are well rooted. Those in the benches may also need a little stimulant. Try to keep good foliage on your plants, which means a neither too wet nor too dry state at the root.

It is now getting late to make up pans unless you happen to have a few in small pots. Even in this latter case it will be better to let them develop their bracts before placing in pans. Use some small nephrolepis, pteris or Cyperus alternifolius in making up the late pans, to cover up any nakedness and give the plants a more furnished appearance.

Gardenias.

Gardenias continue to grow in popularity and there is scarcely a day in the year when they are not obtainable at some of the better-class flower stores and commission houses. Plants in pots which were rooted last spring or early summer, should give some nice flowers from Christmas onward. A temperature of 65 degrees at night is about right, and a spray nozzle should be attached to the hose at least once a week to keep mealy bug in check. Pinching ought to be discontinued on pot plants, but may still be necessary on bench plants where a heavy spring crop is wanted. Use care in watering the benches. Too much moisture will cause a loss of flower buds more quickly than dry conditions. The leaves should always be of a dark green color. Keep the soil well stirred. Let it dry well before watering and if any signs of yellow foliage appear apply soot water to counteract it.

Crotons and Dracaenas.

Crotons and dracaenas are being used a little more each year, although the majority of florists never handle them. They need more heat to do them well than the average trade grower can usually afford them. As firing increases, thus ensuring more heat for the propagating bed, both plants can be rooted easily. It is no use trying to do this in a house kept any lower than 60 degrees at night, 70 degrees being better. Keep them moist and well shaded and they will root surprisingly fast. When nicely rooted, pot off and keep in a warm, moist house until well established. While tops make the best plants, if you are anxious to increase your stock of any of the colored dracaenas, you can also cut the stems in small lengths and lay in the propagating bed until the little shoots appear above ground.

Pandanus.

The side shoots or suckers from Pandanus Veitchii and the newer but less attractive P. Sanderi, taken off now and inserted in the propagating bench of a warm house, will soon root and make fine stuff for sales a year hence. Keep them well soaked with water and, if your drainage is good, they will not be long in making roots. The old plants will prove useful for supplying further cuttings a year hence.

Bedding Geraniums.

As the mum season is already on the wane, you will soon have additional room to spread out your little geraniums, which will now be growing well. Do not as long as possible, but put them in a cool pit or light shed or cellar, where there will be no possibility of frost breaking the pots. Similar treatment will answer well for hydrangeas, the foliage on which is now almost gone. Finish potting up any stock you want to force for Easter. It will not be so good as plants grown in pots all summer, but still many growers adopt this plan and have quite good success.

Brief Reminders.

Get hardy lilies in the ground before winter, even if you have to use a bar to break up the surfacing of frost.

Get some protecting material ready to use on outdoor subjects. It should not go on until the ground is well frozen.

Have you booked the names of all mums you would like to try another year? Discard all superseded sorts and save only such as are up-to-date.

Sponge kentias and other palms on wet days and give any other foliage plants a similar cleaning.

Let your early Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi open in a cool house. Hard forcing, especially after the flowers start to open, is hurtful.

Finish planting violas, daisies, aubrietias, myosotis and other spring bedding stock in frames, unless you are located in a milder climate and can winter them outdoors.

NEW DAHLIA CHARLES LANIER

One of the finest of the new dahlias is the yellow, Charles Lanier, of which A. H. Wingett says as follows in the Dahlia News: "Some five years ago I made several crosses and obtained quite a few seeds, from which I raised nearly 100 seedlings. I did not record these crosses, but after flowering reserved the seven best varieties. These in turn were further weeded out until now I have only this one variety, which showed merit superior to any variety known to me. I first exhibited it in Lenox, in 1906. Its record is well known. As an example of its shipping and staying qualities, I may say that the flowers sent to New York were cut on Monday, shipped on Tuesday, and I was advised by the man who staged it for me that no fresh flowers were necessary to keep the vase in good order until Thursday evening. It is the most prolific variety I have and every growth produces long-stemmed flowers of about five and one-half to seven inches in diameter, and it is seldom a deformed flower is seen. It may interest to know that the majority of my plants were rooted cuttings, planted about the middle of June from 2½-inch and 3-inch pots. Some of the flowers shown in New York were from plants rooted after May 1 and not planted out until July. As an exhibition variety it is excellent, on account of its beautiful color, foliage and stem. But to my mind its greatest value is due to its prolific flowering and easy culture."

Mr. Wingett is gardener for Charles Lanier on the latter's estate at Lenox, Mass.

NOTES FROM MERSTHAM.

Varieties Sent to New York.

We have much pleasure in sending a few notes for the benefit of readers who are interested in mums in England, as the season is now in its glory.

The new Australian varieties will no doubt interest your growers most, for these are the plants that are most likely to be popular next season, and as a rule do exceptionally well with the American growers.

Up to the time of writing we have not seen all of the new sorts that will be sent out this year, and comment only on those that were sent to Mr. Duckham, who so kindly stages them for us at the New York exhibition November 6. The varieties sent are the undermentioned:

Pockett's Surprise is as the name implies, and will be an agreeable surprise to thousands of other mum lovers who will have the patience to allow the plant to make a second break and secure second crowns. (On your side, you do not experience the objection we have in timing the buds or breaks.) If the first crowns are secured here, the first two or three rows of petals are quilled, although they have an enormous spread. The later buds have the first rows of florets quilled half way only, and all others flat. The petals are thick, and the flower is a good keeper. The color is a rosy crimson, which does not burn. The habit is fine and the stems props in themselves.

Another variety is Charles Beckett, a bronze terra cotta flower with a big spread. The petals hang over to an enormous extent, and unless I am greatly mistaken this name will be a household word among growers. The habit of the plant is as stiff as a cane.

Rose Pockett is an old-gold flower with a shade of salmon, a beautiful spread and superb habit. The name alone is sufficient guarantee to warrant something above the average.

Leslie Morrison is a broad-petaled rosy crimson, the habit of which will be hard to beat.

George W. Pook is a variety similar to the last named in style and shape, but of a salmon terra cotta shade.

Charles H. Totty is a bright chestnut with old-gold reverse. It is full seven and one-half inches across, with broad, gracefully drooping petals and a splendid habit.

Mrs. C. H. Totty is a beautiful pink, a most telling color. The flowers are not fully out on our second crown buds, but we can see enough to insure we have not misnamed the variety.

Clara Wells is an incurved variety, a ball of rich cream, a stiff, dwarf habit.

Merstham Blush is an immense blush flower, a color that is rarely seen among chrysanthemums; an enormous and beautiful bloom.

Another variety we have sent over, not an Australian, is Mrs. L. Thorn. This is almost an exact counterpart of Mrs. A. T. Miller, but canary yellow in color.

Lilian Coppard is from Australian seed, a bright crimson with drooping florets, similar in make to old Vivian-Morel. The flower is one of the prettiest, seven inches across, and a magnificent keeper.

Other Novelties.

The varieties described above are those sent over for the New York show, but a word or two on other varieties will perhaps be welcomed. The notes are taken from our own flowers, for up to the present, exhibitions have not started in earnest here.

W. Luxford is a grand, buttery yellow, a real beauty, seven inches across and very deep.

Dorothy Gouldsmith is not quite at its best, but already hangs down eleven inches from the top of the flower.

Harold Wells is as white as snow, and easily spreads nine inches across.

W. M. Moir is only half out, but reminds one of a swan's back, both in shape and color.

Mrs. Norman Davis is a beauty, almost pure white. On a plant only two feet high in a small pot, this variety has a flower nine inches across.

W. Beadle is a rosy purple, a pretty flower nine inches deep.

Mrs. A. T. Miller is, as usual, one of the best and purest whites among mums.

Lady Talbot is a great improvement on Mrs. Mease, and Lottie is a really good rich yellow. The two last varieties are from Australian sources, as well as two or three of the others, but most likely your growers have them and will no doubt exhibit them to the best advantage.

The Season.

The season here has not been a good one for chrysanthemums by any means. We have not been treated with our usual share of sunshine, and the year has been damp and cold throughout. Blooms are damping wholesale where attention has not been given the flowers that are half out, although we have been fortunate enough in our nurseries to keep the flowers dry so far.

The early flowering, or outdoor kinds, have done remarkably well in the south of England. Up to the time of writing, October 24, we have not experienced a frost hard enough to cut the blooms, although there has been just enough to upset many other flowers. Market growers have had a good harvest of bloom.

Reverting to the Australian varieties of the big late blooms, Mr. Pockett tells us some of next season's will be better than the varieties this year. We have not seen the flowers yet. We told you last season we could safely rely upon what this raiser said when he stated this season's varieties were to prove the best he had ever raised, and without a doubt he was correct in every detail. I have never had the pleasure of seeing such a lovely lot of novelties, and it is most gratifying to know that each year the varieties raised by Mr. Pockett and sent out by myself will uphold our reputation for many years to come.

TREATMENT FOR CUTWORMS.

Would you kindly inform us if it would be safe to use hydrocyanic acid gas for the purpose of destroying caterpillars on mums and carnations? They are found in the bud of the mums, are about half an inch long and are of a brown color. In the carnations the caterpillars are an inch and a quarter in length, dark brown in color and appear only at night, eating a hole in the stem just below the bud.

We noticed in the REVIEW of October 24, page 48, that O. E. P. used this acid gas, with damage to his lettuce; therefore we should like to know if it would injure the blooms on mums and carnations.

W. F. C.

The worm is the cutworm, I would say, by the description of it. I cannot say whether the gas has any bad effect on the flowers of the mum, never having tried any to see; nor would I care to take the risk, except with a few flowers. If the worm is the cutworm, it will be found in a hole just beneath the surface of the soil, at the base of the plant. Cutworms were very bad with me this year, but a little patience cleaned them all out. Flowers are sensitive to gases, much more so than the foliage, it seems to me, and W. F. C. had better experiment on a small scale first.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

BEST VARIETIES OF MUMS.

I intend to grow some new chrysanthemums next year, as the old ones I have are not very good. Would you be so kind as to tell me what the best varieties are to grow in Virginia for early white, pink and yellow; then white, pink and yellow to follow the early ones, and then the best late white, pink and yellow? Also name three good kinds to grow outside for small flowers to bunch up and sell for 25 cents and 50 cents per bunch, a dozen in a bunch.

NORFOLK.

A selection of colors to grow commercially is given herewith. I have placed the kinds in the order in which they will flower to give a succession throughout the season. These kinds have given me the best returns financially and none of them is now in the untried novelty class:

White—Polly Rose, Mrs. A. T. Miller, White Coombes, Beatrice May, Clay Frick, W. H. Chadwick, Jeanne Nonin, Mrs. Swinburne.

Pink—Pacific, William Duckham, Morton F. Plant, Winter Cheer, Mrs. Mary Mann, Miriam Hankey.

Yellow—Monrovia, Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, Col. Appleton, Mrs. Geo. Beech, Yellow Chadwick.

This will give a selection of color from September 25 to Thanksgiving. There may be local varieties that would possibly do better in some localities than these, but they seem generally reliable. I have omitted the Eatons, because with me they are rapidly going back, coming hollow-eyed and very poor this year.

In pompons for growing outside the following are good: Queen of Whites; Bohemia, yellow; Rose Trevenna and Eynsford Gem, pink, I would suppose also that some of the singles would produce gloriously outside in Virginia.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

[The address of President Loveless before the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York November 6.]

When you chose me for your president at the Chicago meeting, it was with some reluctance that I assumed the responsibilities of the office, knowing the importance of the work undertaken by this society, and the reputation which had to be maintained: but with the cheerful assistance of all the officers, I look back with pleasure on the efforts of the past year.

United Effort Needed.

Discouragements we have had, but I think I can with confidence say, that we are in a better and more promising condition than we were a year ago, but there is still need for a more general combined effort to place the society where it should be, and make it what it stands for, and professes to be—a really national society in every sense of the word. Individual responsibility can alone accomplish this, but the right spirit is still lacking among our membership, and if the society ever expects to maintain its position, every member must be up and doing, and make the growth of the society a personal obligation.

While we have steadily increased our membership, there are hundreds who should come in and help by their influence, to give impetus to the work of the society. It has been previously impressed upon the society the importance of personal solicitation. I emphasize that recommendation, and would also suggest the advisability of making an effort to put our society upon a more national basis.

Work on Broad Lines.

I do not believe the best interests of the society can be served by merely holding an annual exhibition in the autumn, as it has a tendency to localize the work in the immediate vicinity where the exhibition happens to be held.

A national society should have broader lines, and reach out so as to embrace every town in this country, where an exhibition of chrysanthemums is held, but this phase of the work can only be undertaken when the society has a regular standard membership, to insure sufficient funds to cover any expenses incurred. To this end I would suggest that the various horticultural societies throughout the country be invited to join the Chrysanthemum Society of America as auxiliaries, paying the national society an amount to be determined by the membership of each individual society, pro rata. By this means every horticultural society in the country can become a part of the national society and be enabled to compete for its special premiums, within its own jurisdiction.

Work of the Committees.

Every lover of the chrysanthemum should belong to the national society, for when we consider the gradual improvement which has taken place in the quality of the flower, and the excellent blooms we see on our exhibition tables today, it inspires us with greater zeal for the further development of these gorgeous flowers, along the lines of superior quality, and nothing has done greater service in bringing about the results which we have witnessed today, in developing and encouraging the growth of superior varieties, than the splendid work of the various committees appointed in the different sections of the country for this purpose.

And here I would add that this society is indebted to these various committees for their untiring, unselfish devotion to the aims and purposes for which they are appointed, and which they so faithfully fill, for when we look through the various reports of exhibitions, we invariably see the prize winners are those varieties that have passed the censorship of these committees. Their work prevents anyone, private or commercial, from needlessly occupying valuable space with worthless or doubtful varieties.

Cultural Matters.

It is true that some varieties do not turn out as well as one might expect, but this fact is unavoidable and cannot be foreseen, and while we get some marvelous flowers from varieties originating in England, France and Australia, I feel sure the United States is capable of producing something even more phenomenal in size, and with a constitution suited to our climatic conditions, and while the whole world looks to us for the latest developments, let us be equal to the occasion, and by careful and systematic hybridization produce varieties which will be sought after the world over for their excellence.

We must work out our own problems in matters of cultivation, for no cultural methods successfully practiced in foreign countries can be adopted and carried out here with any degree of success, our climatic conditions being entirely different, this also being true of different sections of our own country.

Changing Tactics.

A new era seems to have commenced by the introduction of the large flowered, early varieties. These I feel sure will be very welcome, as in some localities the season for chrysanthemums is all too short, and as we are fairly well supplied with late varieties, excepting perhaps a red variety that would come in for Christmas, the improvement seems to be in the right direction. The single varieties are also becoming more popular year by year and as these are improved in quality and color, the general public will accept them as desirable plants for the home, and also for decorative purposes.

These are being grown more generally than is supposed, almost every house of chrysanthemums containing a few singles, and as we become acquainted with them, our love for this class of blooms increases and we find a little more space devoted to them each year. The improvement of these varieties should be the work of our society, every encouragement being given to exhibits as opportunity offers.

The importance of the Chrysanthemum Society of America as a factor in the chrysanthemum world can be appreciated when we learn that information is being sought after from northern India by an admirer of our society who is trying, as he says, to enlighten his ignorant countrymen and requests his name put upon our mailing list, that our publication may be forwarded. I cite this as only an instance, which goes to show how the world is watching our progress and it behooves every interested member of our society to consider the importance of a steady improvement in our work in keeping with the national character of our society.

Elaborating the Report.

A word regarding our annual report. I think it would be of the greatest importance could we arrange to include in its pages the reports of the various exhibitions held throughout the country, classifying the exhibits, naming the winning varieties in every case, and compiling these into a reference list, so that anyone could see at a glance which varieties had been most successful in the exhibitions of the year, making valuable memoranda for the future.

I wish to thank the horticultural press for their courtesy in printing our notices, and also for their interest in the work of the society, and I hope in the future a column can be devoted to items of interest to chrysanthemum growers and be contributed to by members of the society.

I also wish to thank the various committees, who have so readily performed the duties of their office; to the donors of special premiums we also extend our thanks, and to the American Institute which has so kindly taken care of us during this convention, and to all those who have contributed in any way to the advancement of the interests of the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

it somewhat resembles in color. The latter, however, never throws such superb scapes of blooms. C. Bowringiana is a robust-growing sort. It does well treated similarly to C. labiata and grown in either pots or pans in a compost or fern fiber. It is not by any means a plentiful, cattleya and few imported plants are offered.

Oncidium Ornithorhynchum Album.

Oncidium ornithorhynchum is one of the most popular of the genus, being free flowering, of a pleasing color, with a delightful odor and flowering in November and December. The form shown in the illustration has pure white flowers and is much more beautiful than the colored type.

This oncidium is of easy culture, doing well in pans or baskets, which should be hung well up to the light and grown in a north house during the summer. Snails have a particular partiality for the tender flower spikes and it may be necessary to protect them with wrappings of cotton wool. The use of sphagnum moss is liable to bring in these destructive pests and it is better to use pure fern fiber and thus keep them away from the plants. W. N. C.

ORNAMENTAL PLANTS.

[A paper by Wm. H. Taplin, of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., read before the Congress of Horticulture at the Jamestown exposition, September 23, 1907.]

The last decade has witnessed great advances in the production of ornamental plants for commercial purposes in the United States, the trade having in some instances attained to the dignity of being specialized. It is true that there are but few specialists in this department of the trade as yet, the majority of plant-growing establishments being divided into various sections, rather than confined to a single specialty. However, there are a few such places, and these are al-

SOME SEASONABLE ORCHIDS.

Laelia Gouldiana.

That handsome winter-blooming laelia, Gouldiana, is a natural hybrid between L. anceps and L. autumnalis. The flowers rather more closely resemble the latter than the former, being of a rich rose color and having a pleasing odor. The scapes are one to two feet high and carry, as a rule, four to six flowers each. With the other Mexican laelias, this variety needs abundant light in summer. If grown in a heavily shaded house it will flower poorly. It requires a good deal of sun, as do each of its parents. It succeeds well in baskets or pans hung well up to the light. For compost, pure osmunda fern fiber is the best potting medium. The flowering period is December and January.

Odontoglossum Crispum Amesoe.

Odontoglossums are the most difficult of all orchids to grow satisfactorily in America. Coming, as they do, from mountain highlands, where the shade temperature rarely exceeds 60 degrees and not infrequently falls to near freezing, they deteriorate rapidly during our tropical summers. In Europe cut odontoglossums have a great sale in all the leading flower markets, but they are hardly ever seen in America. One or two commercial firms are at present making an effort to grow and flower them, but I question if they will make a financial success of it. On some few private estates they are now grown moderately well and if we could only be assured of an absence of summer humidity they could be done finely.

O. crispum is the most popular of the genus and highly spotted forms have for years commanded almost fabulous prices in Great Britain. The illustration is of a small spike on one of our plants last season. The sepals and petals, while lacking somewhat in breadth, are prettily spotted. A sunken north house is needed for summering these Alpine orchids, but they benefit from exposure to our winter sun, from December until the middle of March. Fern fiber with a little sphagnum is a good growing medium.

Cattleya Bowringiana.

That beautiful fall-flowering cattleya, Bowringiana, introduced in 1886, from Central America, makes a glorious show in the orchid houses during October and November. The flowers vary considerably in color, but are usually rosy purple, with a maroon band, and two and one-half to three inches in diameter, although even larger on vigorous specimens. As a rule the corymbose racemes carry from six to fifteen flowers, but in many cases more. The illustration shows one with twenty-eight flowers. Even this number is occasionally exceeded. One raceme bore forty-seven flowers two years ago.

C. Bowringiana is allied to the popular summer-blooming C. Skinneri, which most entirely confined to the eastern states, the specialists of the west devoting themselves in most cases to the cut flower industry, in which many of them are remarkable examples of success.

Use of European Methods.

Broadly speaking, our cultural methods are adaptations of the methods long in vogue in Europe. By adaptations is meant that climatic differences have had to be observed, and some of our methods adapted to those differences. For example, the intense sunlight of our summer season makes necessary rather more shading on the glass than is required in some parts of Europe, and, again, the longer period of hot weather in the central and southern portions of our country gives us an advantage in the rapid growth of heat-loving subjects.

As a rule American plant-growers are impatient of delays in the production of marketable stock, the consequence being that the slower growing plants are not handled to any great extent, such subjects being imported from Europe, where labor is a little cheaper and where time seems to be less of an object. As a result of these conditions, such plants as bay trees, box bushes, aspidistras, azaleas and various other plants that require much time and labor in their culture are imported from Europe.

Palms.

The palm industry has made wonderful advances of late years, but up to the present time there have not been enough palms of all sizes to supply the demand, this condition causing the importation of large quantities of these beautiful plants from Belgium each season. It is true that a few small palms have been occasionally exported from this country to Europe, but these exports do not approach the imports in value.

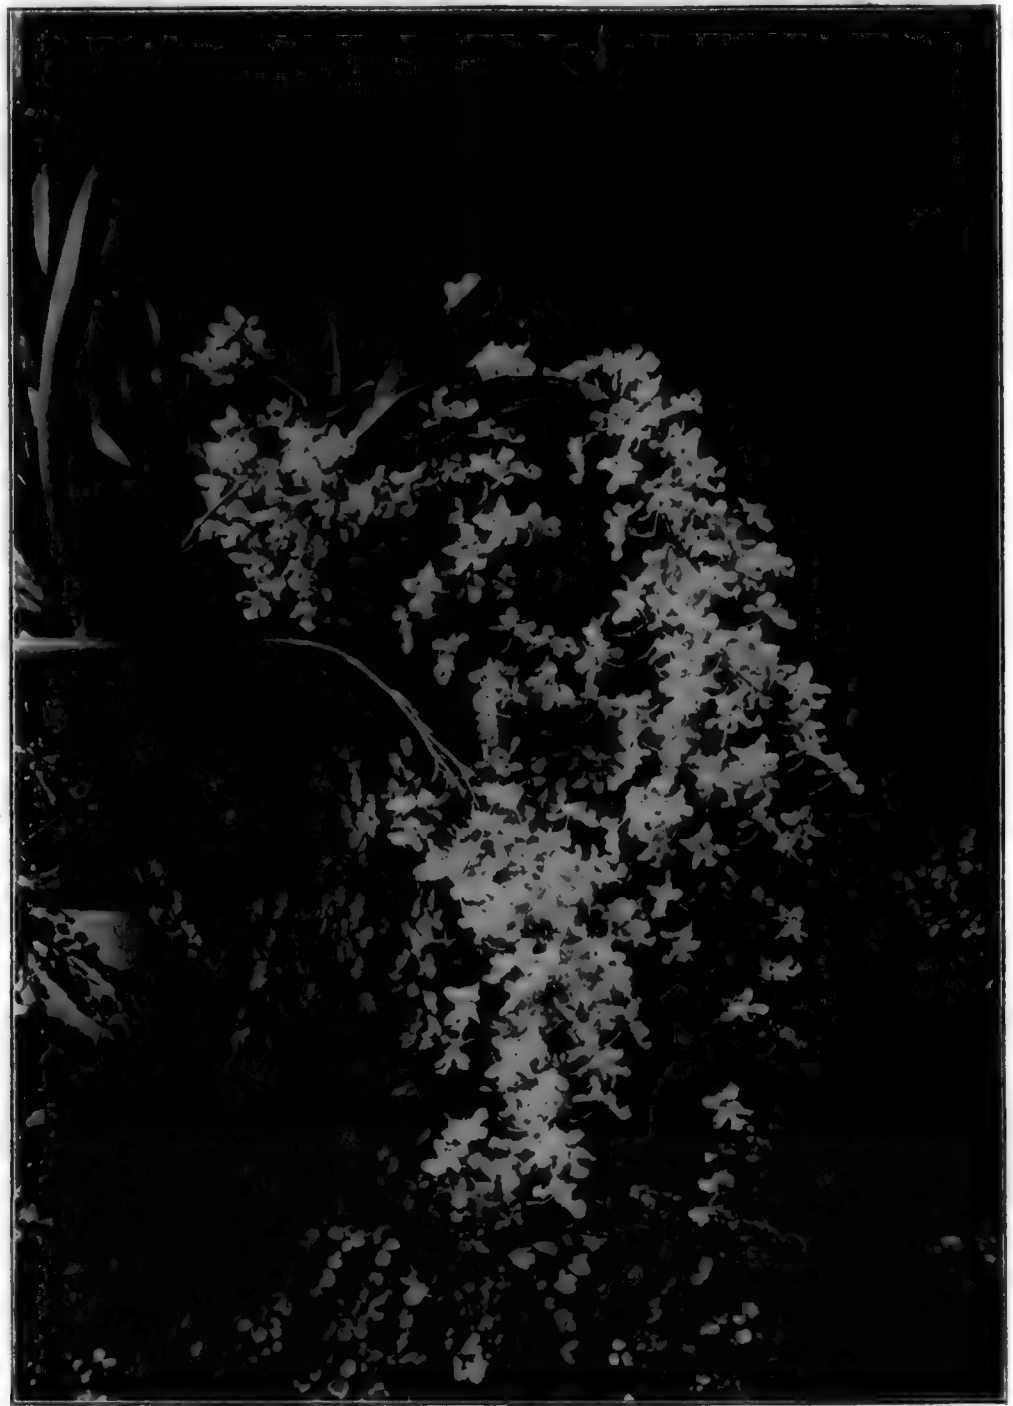

The centers of commercial palm growing in this country at the present time are New York, Philadelphia and Boston, the neighborhood of these three cities doubtless producing more palms than all the rest of the country together, and from these cities is shipped the choicest stock of this description that is offered in the interior cities and towns, even out to the Pacific coast.

Palms from Seed.

By far the larger part of the palms that are annually sold in the United States are grown here from seed, the imported stock being chiefly in the larger sizes, such as are used for decorating. The species thus used are few, and but little change will be noted in the catalogues from year to year, as the qualifications of a useful commercial plant are somewhat exacting.

To fulfill the requirements of a plant for this purpose, it must needs be a species that is readily obtainable, so that a regular supply of seeds may be had each season, and it must also be of reasonably quick growth, of considerable grace and beauty, and having foliage of an enduring character. Thus we find that out of a possible hundred of new species of palms that have been introduced to cultivation in the last thirty years, there are less than a dozen to be found in the average trade lists.

The most popular palms of the present day are the howeas (otherwise and more generally known as kentias), the seeds of which are imported by the million each season from a certain small island in the South Pacific ocean.

Oncidium Ornithorhynchum Album.

Temperature for Palms.

The howeas, or kentias, are grown best in a night temperature of about 60 degrees, and this may be considered as the low average temperature for palm growing, in comparison with the high average palm temperature of 68 degrees that is ordinarily given to Areca lutescens. There are more pinnate-leaved palms in the florists' list than there are of the fan-leaved section, the latter finding less favor with the general public, about the only representatives of the fan-leaved section of palms that are grown in quantity being a few species of livistonas and chamærops.

Some of the date palms, or phoenix, are used for decorating, and these are also used quite extensively for outdoor planting in the extreme south and southwest. As already hinted, there is a dearth of novelties of real value in the palm trade, but among the few of recent introduction there is one phoenix that is being taken up extensively, namely, P. Roebelenii, a very charming dwarf species from Siam, this palm now being procurable in quantity, owing to the more liberal supply of seeds received in this country during the last three years.

Ferns.

Next in importance to the palms among the commercial ornamental plants are the ferns, and to one unfamiliar with the trade the numbers of these plants that are annually distributed in our large cities would seem marvelous.

The fern trade may properly be divided into two sections, the first comprising those that are grown into specimens in pots of 5-inch size and upward and the second including the various ferns that are grown for the purpose of filling table ferneries and making other decorations.

These latter ferns for small ferneries are grown by the million in small pots, 2-inch to 3-inch being the sizes most used, and while the wholesale prices are not high, yet the crop is grown in a reasonable time and is fairly remunerative. The species most in demand are various species of the pteris and nephrodium groups, the chief essentials for a plant that is to be thus used being rapidity of growth, compactness of habit and distinctiveness of foliage.

Among the ferns that are grown into larger-sized plants for house and store decoration we find a greater variety, there being some of the maidenhairs or *adiantum*s, a number of nephrolepis, some pterises and an occasional representative of the tree ferns, among the most notable and satisfactory of the latter being Cibotium Schiedei.

[To be concluded.]

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Disbudding.

Several years ago, when carnations were grown for quantity rather than quality, it was frequently the practice to remove the main bud and allow the side ones to develop, thus obtaining from three to five small, short-stemmed blooms on each flower shoot.

As the purpose for which they were intended did not require long stems, this method answered very well, but under present day demands we must not only produce long stems but stiff ones and blooms large enough to sit up and be noticed; so the plan now is to encourage growth of the main bud.

Advantages.

Of the latter method we shall treat here as having advantages over the custom of not disbudding at all or doing it on the tri-weekly (?) plan—working at it one week and trying to the next. The term disbudding, as understood among growers, includes the removal of surplus side shoots as well as buds, and aside from tending to increase size of bloom and the length and rigidity of stem, the timely removal of such growths conserves the plant's energies. You will take particular note of the word timely, as used above, for the longer the operation is delayed after the growths can be easily caught hold of, the more plant tissue must be disposed of, with proportionate waste of energy.

Although this waste may not be noticeable, you will be sure to observe a more important condition—no increase in size of bloom if this delay is carried to the point where the main bud is about to show color, and, in fact, the whole object of the operation is defeated.

It may be that similar circumstances exist with those growers who are rather lukewarm on the merits of disbudding.

Rash or Severe Disbudding.

Beginners, in their determination to leave no stone unturned in their efforts to secure large blooms, sometimes begin operations too soon, causing injury to leaves. Or perhaps they remove the bud close under the main one, before it is sufficiently advanced to come away without wounding the stem, resulting in the bloom turning at an angle.

Make it a point to go over the beds weekly, thereby keeping up with the work.

Let no one influence you to discontinue the operation, taking refuge under the excuse that people will not pay more than a certain price anyway; they certainly will not if given no opportunity and if you persist in growing to meet that price.

WORMS ON CARNATION BUDS.

Enclosed you will find some carnation buds. Can you tell me what is eating them? Its work seems to be done mostly at night, as I have been unable to detect what it is. D. L. V.

If you will look closely you will find that a worm is eating your carnation buds. There are several varieties of these and all of them do most of their feeding at night. Some of them are of a light green color and are not easily distinguished from the carnation foliage, while others are of various shades of light brown. Look over your plants at every opportunity and destroy all you can by hand. Mix up some of the bran, molasses and Paris green preparation, as was recommended in the REVIEW some weeks ago. You will find it as effective as any thing you can do. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE ON CARNATIONS.

Please tell me what is the matter with the enclosed carnation slips and what to do for them. They have had plenty of air. C. A. M.

The spots on the carnation growth you sent are caused by the disease called stigmonose. We treated this subject at considerable length in an article in the REVIEW of October 3, page 9, and in it you will find all the information I can give you. Careful selection of cuttings, careful watering, feeding and ventilating will do all you can do to rid your stock of it. It will require several years of time and you will have to determine for yourself whether it will pay you to nurse that variety out of it. A. F. J. B.

RED SPIDER ON ARAUCARIAS.

Enclosed you will find a piece of Norfolk Island pine. We never had any trouble with plants of this sort until lately, when a lady told us her pine was dying. We brought it to the greenhouses, repotted it and put it with ours, and every leaf that touched ours started them to turn yellow and die. D. L. V.

The cause of the trouble with the araucaria is a severe attack of red spider, the specimen forwarded having been severely punished by these pests. Strong spraying with either pure water, or a solution of Ivory soap or of whale oil soap, should soon dispose of these insects.

This pest is encouraged on araucarias by lack of syringing and too high temperature, these plants enjoying a moist atmosphere and a temperature of 50 degrees at night. W. H. TAPLIN.

RHODODENDRONS FOR XMAS.

I have a few rhododendrons recently imported from Belgium. Could they be gotten into bloom for Christmas? J. R.

While such varieties as Cunningham's White are sometimes forced for Christmas, I hardly think it will pay you to try to force the newly arrived Belgian plants for that holiday. Better hold them for Easter, when they will sell better. In forcing them, treat similarly to azaleas. C. W.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Pansies in a Cold House.

The advice given by C. W. to H. E. R. in the REVIEW of October 31, page 7, is good only if the winter is warm enough to thaw the beds out two or three times and thus permit copious watering. If the beds are frozen solid for even a month, they will become so thoroughly dry that the pansies must die. They must have moisture, and frost will make the beds dust-dry if severe. As I lost a fine lot of pansies that way four years ago, I paid for my knowledge. M. P.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The Debutante Bunch.

This week's illustration, of the series now appearing showing the work of Charles Henry Fox, appears upon the cover. It is a debutante bunch sent out at this season last year, from the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. It is a combination of Bonnaffon chrysanthemums with autumn foliage, and the arrangement displays the highest class of work by the floral artist.

THE ELKS' WREATH.

The accompanying illustration, and the purpose for which the design is used, suggests an idea which can be employed with profit by a great many retail florists, and especially by those who are what are technically known as "joiners."

This illustration is from a photograph of the design used by Lodge Number 474 of the Benevolent and Patriotic Order of Elks, located at Auburn, N. Y. Whenever an Elk is buried the lodge sends this design and it has come to be recognized in the town as the funeral emblem of the order. This was made by E. H. Dobbs, of Dobbs & Son, who is a patriotic member of the order.

It is the practice in many lodges to send flowers to the funerals of deceased members, but in the majority of cases the pieces vary as do the whims of the moment, in some cases the observance being overlooked altogether. The florist member usually can secure the adoption of some standard piece, with instructions that it be sent in every case where there is a death in the lodge.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Exceedingly dull trade has been the rule and signs of betterment are not yet in sight. Perhaps with the passing of the mums conditions may improve; it is certainly a consummation devoutly to be wished. Roses have fallen in value and many of the smaller grades are almost given away. Some grand Beauty, Richmond and Kaiserin were noted last week, but prices are not commensurate with their quality. Carnations are fine in quality and becoming too abundant for the market needs. Top-notch price is $3 per hundred and some have been cleared as low as 50 cents; of course, these latter were small flowers.

Chrysanthemums still rule the market but will be less abundant after a few days. Bonnaffon and Appleton are predominant yellows. Some nice Duckham, Cheltoni and other seasonable sorts are also seen, while Eaton and its yellow sport are arriving. Violets are good but not selling so well. Other flowers do not cut much figure at present in the market. There is no change in asparagus, smilax or adiantum. Pot plants continue to sell rather slowly as compared with last year.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott has been at Madbury, N. H., for some time, pushing ahead work on his big, new house, of which three sections are completed and planted.

Visitors at the recent show included D. McRorie, Orange, N. J.; Thomas Knight, Rutherford, N. J.; G. F. Struck, Summit, N. J.; F. Heeremans and Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; A. McLellan and John Marshall, Newport, R. I.; James Stewart, Mamaroneck, L. I.; John Ash, R. Marshall and Robert Rust, Pomfret, Conn.; George E. Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J.

Remember the club meeting November 19. The annual election of officers is one of the main attractions, but there will be others. The December meeting will be ladies' night.

We are glad to report that the two wholesale markets have arranged to hold an exhibition. It should be held in Horticultural hall, as neither of the markets is suitable. We are sure the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be pleased to show all possible courtesies.

A few Paper White narcissi have made their appearance in the market. Some dahlias also were seen, showing that frost has not visited every section even yet.

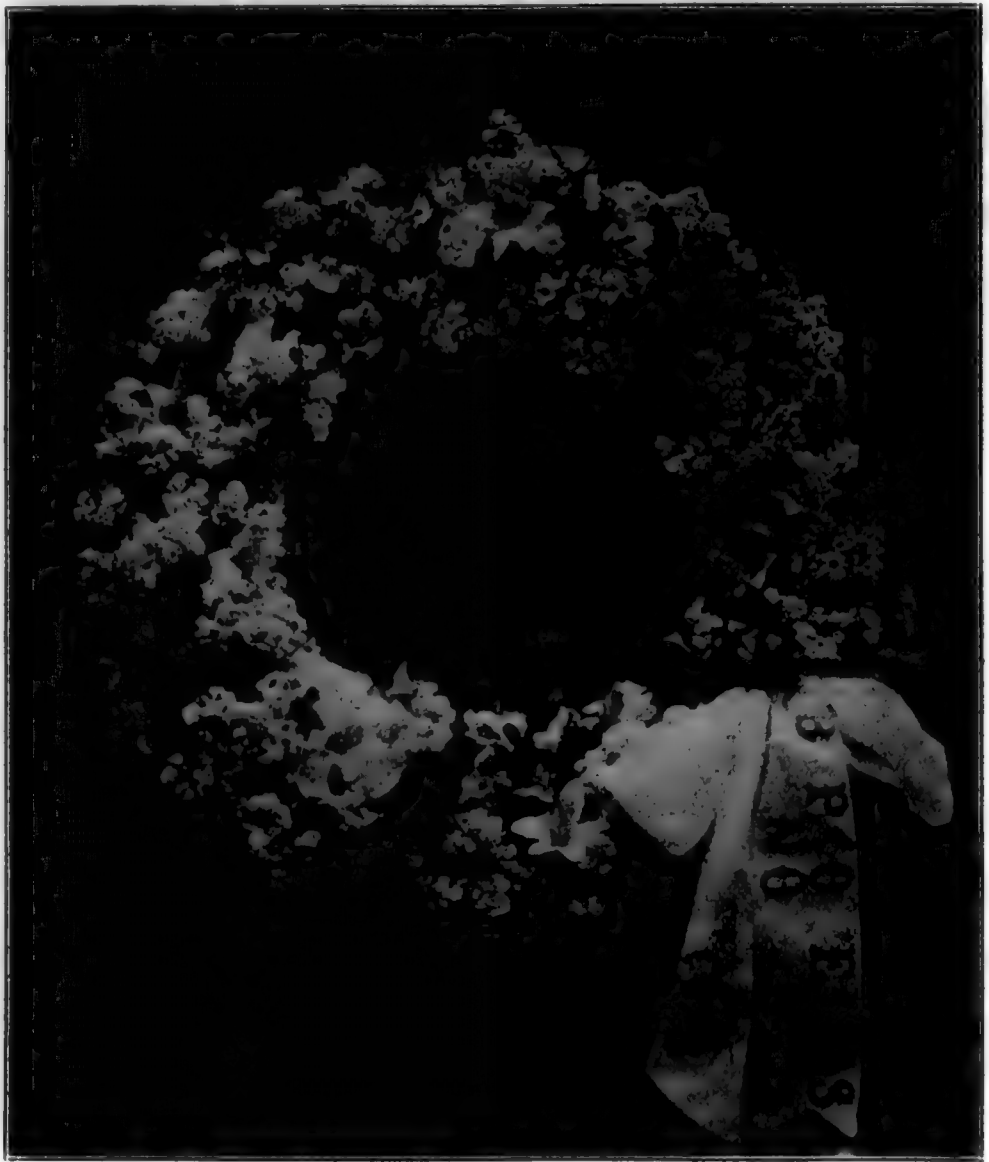

The football game November 9 between Harvard and the Carlisle Indians caused a run on red chrysanthemums and carnations which made prices ascend.

S. J. Goddard is having good success again with Helen Goddard carnation. His variegated seedling, Priscilla, is promising, as are a white sport from Fair Maid and a fine dark pink variety.

William Nicholson, as usual, has some fine Pennsylvania chrysanthemums, which variety he always grows well, also Nagoya, Appleton, Yellow Eaton and other sorts.

Welch Bros. are handling superb Beauty roses from Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I. Their valley from this grower also is fine.

W. W. Edgar is still on the sick list. His vases of Bonnaffon and Duckham chrysanthemums at the show were well grown and netted him $70.

Design Adopted by the Elks of Auburn, N. Y.

H. H. Barrows & Son report an active demand for nephrolepis, the varieties Bostoniensis and Whitmani being in most request.

R. T. McGorum is cutting some excellent Bride and Bridesmaid roses, some of which were staged at the show.

E. J. Shaylor has recently secured some more choice, new peonies from Europe and means to keep his collection in the front rank.

W. N. CRAIG.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market was overloaded with stock and demand was dull last week, but after all, history is only repeating itself. It is always a flood in chrysanthemum time. This year it is a torrent and as a natural result of swollen stream, prices have been wrecked and grand flowers that last year sold at $4 to $5 a dozen actually have been cleared as low as $2. And so it has been through every grade of this wonderful flower, until for the lower strata there is no price at all. But if wonderful exhibitions and glorious retail windows and wedding and dinner decorations have any effect the profuse shipments have not been in vain.

Roses suffered as well as mums. Few Beauties went above 20 cents and 15 cents would be a fairer quotation. Bride, Maid, Chatenay and Richmond all joined the procession of retrograding values and with $4 per hundred as top for a small selection, the cleaning up process would often include in its sweep roses of every grade and $10 per thousand looked good to some before the week was over. So was it with carnations and valley and violets and, in fact, everything.

The weather continues perfect; too fine so far for trade. We need a killing frost. The suburbs are demonstrating Mr. Vincent's faith in the value and beauty of the pompon. Few gardens in and around New York are without them.

Monday's prices showed no improvement over last week. Shipments are enormous; the wholesale houses are full. November weddings, operas, society features innumerable, do not seem to make any impression on the supply, and there is not five per cent of inferior stock to be seen anywhere.

A year ago almost similar conditions prevailed, but the weather was clear and cold, orchid prices were hardening and retailers were making special arrangements for Thanksgiving.

Club Meeting.

It was ladies' night November 11 at the New York Florists' Club and the fair sex were as numerous as the members. About 100 celebrated the final dual gathering of the year. President Totty was in the chair. E. G. Hill was a visitor and gave an eloquent address, especially emphasizing the importance of the great national flower show of 1908, and urging New York to do its utmost to interest the east in its success. Mr. Hill had fine exhibits of Rhea Reid and Princess roses. Of the former 40,000 he says are already sold. It won the premium at Chicago as the best new rose and the silver cup at Washington. Princess won the silver cup at Chicago as the best new rose never before exhibited. Both received the club's preliminary certificates, the former with at night, as I have been unable to detect what it is. D. L. V.

If you will look closely you will find that a worm is eating your carnation buds. There are several varieties of these and all of them do most of their feeding at night. Some of them are of a light green color and are not easily distinguished from the carnation foliage, while others are of various shades of light brown. Look over your plants at every opportunity and destroy all you can by hand. Mix up some of the bran, molasses and Paris green preparation, as was recommended in the REVIEW some weeks ago. You will find it as effective as any thing you can do. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE ON CARNATIONS.

Please tell me what is the matter with the enclosed carnation slips and what to do for them. They have had plenty of air. C. A. M.

The spots on the carnation growth you sent are caused by the disease called stigmonose. We treated this subject at considerable length in an article in the REVIEW of October 3, page 9, and in it you will find all the information I can give you. Careful selection of cuttings, careful watering, feeding and ventilating will do all you can do to rid your stock of it. It will require several years of time and you will have to determine for yourself whether it will pay you to nurse that variety out of it. A. F. J. B.

RED SPIDER ON ARAUCARIAS.

Enclosed you will find a piece of Norfolk Island pine. We never had any trouble with plants of this sort until lately, when a lady told us her pine was dying. We brought it to the greenhouses, repotted it and put it with ours, and every leaf that touched ours started them to turn yellow and die. D. L. V.

The cause of the trouble with the araucaria is a severe attack of red spider, the specimen forwarded having been severely punished by these pests. Strong spraying with either pure water, or a solution of Ivory soap or of whale oil soap, should soon dispose of these insects.

This pest is encouraged on araucarias by lack of syringing and too high temperature, these plants enjoying a moist atmosphere and a temperature of 50 degrees at night. W. H. TAPLIN.

RHODODENDRONS FOR XMAS.

I have a few rhododendrons recently imported from Belgium. Could they be gotten into bloom for Christmas? J. R.

While such varieties as Cunningham's White are sometimes forced for Christmas, I hardly think it will pay you to try to force the newly arrived Belgian plants for that holiday. Better hold them for Easter, when they will sell better. In forcing them, treat similarly to azaleas. C. W.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Pansies in a Cold House.

The advice given by C. W. to H. E. R. in the REVIEW of October 31, page 7, is good only if the winter is warm enough to thaw the beds out two or three times and thus permit copious watering. If the beds are frozen solid for even a month, they will become so thoroughly dry that the pansies must die. They must have moisture, and frost will make the beds dust-dry if severe. As I lost a fine lot of pansies that way four years ago, I paid for my knowledge. M. P.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The Debutante Bunch.

This week's illustration, of the series now appearing showing the work of Charles Henry Fox, appears upon the cover. It is a debutante bunch sent out at this season last year, from the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. It is a combination of Bonnaillon chrysanthemums with autumn foliage, and the arrangement displays the highest class of work by the floral artist.

THE ELKS' WREATH.

The accompanying illustration, and the purpose for which the design is used, suggests an idea which can be employed with profit by a great many retail florists, and especially by those who are what are technically known as "joiners."

This illustration is from a photograph of the design used by Lodge Number 474 of the Benevolent and Patriotic Order of Elks, located at Auburn, N. Y. When ever an Elk is buried the lodge sends this design and it has come to be recognized in the town as the funeral emblem of the order. This was made by E. H. Dobbs, of Dobbs & Son, who is a patriotic member of the order.

It is the practice in many lodges to send flowers to the funerals of deceased members, but in the majority of cases the pieces vary as do the whims of the moment, in some cases the observance being overlooked altogether. The florist member usually can secure the adoption of some standard piece, with instructions that it be sent in every case where there is a death in the lodge.

BOSTON.The Market.

Exceedingly dull trade has been the rule and signs of betterment are not yet in sight. Perhaps with the passing of the mums conditions may improve; it is certainly a consummation devoutly to be wished. Roses have fallen in value and many of the smaller grades are almost given away. Some grand Beauty, Richmond and Kaiserin were noted last week, but prices are not commensurate with their quality. Carnations are fine in quality and becoming too abundant for the market needs. Top-notch price is $3 per hundred and some have been cleared as low as 50 cents; of course, these latter were small flowers.

Chrysanthemums still rule the market but will be less abundant after a few days. Bonnafton and Appleton are predominant yellows. Some nice Duckham, Cheltoni and other seasonable sorts are also seen, while Eaton and its yellow sport are arriving. Violets are good but not selling so well. Other flowers do not cut much figure at present in the market. There is no change in asparagus, smilax or adiantum. Pot plants continue to sell rather slowly as compared with last year.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott has been at Madbury, N. H., for some time, pushing ahead work on his big, new house, of which three sections are completed and planted.

Visitors at the recent show included D. McRorie, Orange, N. J.; Thomas Knight, Rutherford, N. J.; G. F. Struck, Summit, N. J.; F. Heeremans and Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; A. McLellan and John Marshall, Newport, R. I.; James Stewart, Mamaroneck, L. I.; John Ash, R. Marshall and Robert Rust, Pomfret, Conn.; George E. Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J.

Remember the club meeting November 19. The annual election of officers is one of the main attractions, but there will be others. The December meeting will be ladies' night.

We are glad to report that the two wholesale markets have arranged to hold an exhibition. It should be held in Horticultural hall, as neither of the markets is suitable. We are sure the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be pleased to show all possible courtesies.

A few Paper White narcissi have made their appearance in the market. Some dahlias also were seen, showing that frost has not visited every section even yet.

The football game November 9 between Harvard and the Carlisle Indians caused a run on red chrysanthemums and carnations which made prices ascend.

S. J. Goddard is having good success again with Helen Goddard carnation. His variegated seedling, Priscilla, is promising, as are a white sport from Fair Maid and a fine dark pink variety.

William Nicholson, as usual, has some fine Pennsylvania chrysanthemums, which variety he always grows well, also Nagoya, Appleton, Yellow Eaton and other sorts.

Welch Bros. are handling superb Beauty roses from Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I. Their valley from this grower also is fine.

W. W. Edgar is still on the sick list. His vases of Bonnafton and Duckham chrysanthemums at the show were well grown and netted him $70.

Design Adopted by the Elks of Auburn, N. Y.

H. H. Barrows & Son report an active demand for nephrolepis, the varieties Bostoniensis and Whitmani being in most request.

R. T. McGorum is cutting some excellent Bride and Bridesmaid roses, some of which were staged at the show.

E. J. Shaylor has recently secured some more choice, new peonies from Europe and means to keep his collection in the front rank.

W. N. CRAIG.

NEW YORK.The Market.

The market was overloaded with stock and demand was dull last week, but after all, history is only repeating itself. It is always a flood in chrysanthemum time. This year it is a torrent and as a natural result of swollen stream, prices have been wrecked and grand flowers that last year sold at $4 to $5 a dozen actually have been cleared as low as $2. And so it has been through every grade of this wonderful flower, until for the lower strata there is no price at all. But if wonderful exhibitions and glorious retail windows and wedding and dinner decorations have any effect the profuse shipments have not been in vain.

Roses suffered as well as mums. Few Beauties went above 20 cents and 15 cents would be a fairer quotation. Bride, Maid, Chatenay and Richmond all joined the procession of retrograding values and with $4 per hundred as top for a small selection, the cleaning up process would often include in its sweep roses of every grade and $10 per thousand looked good to some before the week was over. So was it with carnations and valley and violets and, in fact, everything.

The weather continues perfect; too fine so far for trade. We need a killing frost. The suburbs are demonstrating Mr. Vincent's faith in the value and beauty of the pompon. Few gardens in and around New York are without them.

Monday's prices showed no improvement over last week. Shipments are enormous; the wholesale houses are full. November weddings, operas, society features innumerable, do not seem to make any impression on the supply, and there is not five per cent of inferior stock to be seen anywhere.

A year ago almost similar conditions prevailed, but the weather was clear and cold, orchid prices were hardening and retailers were making special arrangements for Thanksgiving.

Club Meeting.

It was ladies' night November 11 at the New York Florists' Club and the fair sex were as numerous as the members. About 100 celebrated the final dual gathering of the year. President Totty was in the chair. E. G. Hill was a visitor and gave an eloquent address, especially emphasizing the importance of the great national flower show of 1908, and urging New York to do its utmost to interest the east in its success. Mr. Hill had fine exhibits of Rhea Reid and Princess roses. Of the former 40,000 he says are already sold. It won the premium at Chicago as the best new rose and the silver cup at Washington. Princess won the silver cup at Chicago as the best new rose never before exhibited. Both received the club's preliminary certificates, the former with 94 points and Princess with 85. Chas. Weber, of Lynbrook, showed three splendid vases of Imperial, Pink Imperial and Aristocrat carnations.

It has been announced that at the next meeting of the club only those members will be entitled to vote for the new officers whose dues are paid to date. The nominating committee placed the following members in preliminary competition for the honors: For president, Chas. H. Totty, Charles Weathered, Wm. Duckham; vice-president, W. Marshall, H. Weston, A. Jaenecke; treasurer, Walter Sheridan, J. K. Allen, A. L. Miller; secretary, John Young, J. Austin Shaw, S. S. Butterfield; trustees, E. V. Hallock, W. B. Durie, Peter Wagner, Chas. Lenker, A. J. Guttman, A. M. Henshaw, A. Rickards, Robert Simpson.

Conrad Schafer was elected to membership. Messrs. Simpson, A. J. Manda and Langjahr were added to the award committee for the evening.

Henry S. Adams, of Wellesley, Mass., gave an interesting lecture on "School Gardens," illustrated by many photos, which were distributed to his hearers during the discourse. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered him and Mr. O'Mara gave an eloquent address, in which he dwelt upon "The wealth which out of the land must come."

J. B. Nugent, chairman of the house committee, took charge of the evening's developments at the close of the regular business, and ably assisted by Messrs. Rickards and Fenrich, dispensed intellectual and gastronomic feasts to all. The ladies enjoyed a luxurious spread in the club's parlors. The rooms were made homelike for the occasion, and the tables were nicely decorated with handsome roses and carnations of the exhibitions.

The artists who helped to make the evening memorable until midnight were Messrs. Woodell, the Rickards brothers, the Burnett brothers, Mrs. Bevins and Miss Reiff, in vocal and instrumental music, the ladies especially delighting all, society's membership next year from eighty to 800. The one regret of all present was the small membership of the year and the unresponsiveness of the trade to the secretary's solicitations.

Robert Rutter, the president of the American Institute, made an eloquent address of welcome to the society.

The papers by Messrs. Duckham and Totty were practical, brief and interesting and the discussion was participated in by Messrs. Herrington, Stewart, Vincent and other prominent horticulturists.

W. N. Craig, of Boston, as chairman of the committee on closer relations, will do effective work in its behalf.

President Totty made a great display of new varieties, and carried off many of the honors, including the gold medal.

Elmer D. Smith and wife came all the way from Michigan to the mum show and continued their trip easterly to Bunker Hill.

R. Vincent and son were especially jubilant because the pompon has at last come into its own and its value has been officially recognized. Mr. Vincent made a stirring address in his behalf.

The master gardeners were much in evidence at the mum show and their handiwork was the real foundation of the society's triumph. Harry Turner's new celosia, Pride of Castle Gould, was a center of interest. So were Cook's new roses and Pierson's fine display of his carnations.

Arthur Boddington's cosmos is winning its widening way wherever it is exhibited.

Various Notes.

The flower shows are over and the records they have made exceed all accomplishments of the past. At Madison and Tarrytown, and in fact wherever these annual exhibitions have been held, the verdict has been that quality and variety has never been excelled. Of the Chicago show, F. H. Traendly, who reof the world. A fine conservatory adds to its attractiveness. The interior decorations are rich and massive and the locality is teeming with millionaires.

Charles Millang is doing his share this week in dissipating the financial clouds with his Sunshine mums and worry killing music.

Good crowds now attend the auctions and splendid stocks in palms and retinosporas, boxwood and fruit trees and ornamentals are going at reasonable prices.

Le Moul, on the Bowery, is again a grandpa, as his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Fenrich, entertained the stork November 8 with a 12-pound boy.

Mrs. A. M. Henshaw is recovering.

Large crowds attended the Central park mum show November 10. The exhibit is free and will continue until December. The arrangement and variety of bloom is most creditable to the management.

L. Wertheimer & Co. have some fine Japanese novelties this year in vases, that appeal to florists, and their usual specialties in bells for Christmas.

The Wholesale Florists' Protective Association may safely be announced as a permanent institution. The few not yet enrolled will doubtless come in out of the cold before November 15, which is the date that determines the scheme's efficiency. The majority of the retailers approve of it. Some refuse to purchase from the wholesalers who stay outside. One of the leading retailers gave this as his ultimatum last week and made the declaration practical. A few of the retail men express a decided opposition to the plan, largely because of its arbitrariness, forgetting that the rules apply to all, and that the ultimate result can only be the elimination of the undesirable competition in the business, and the placing of the trade at last upon a stable basis.

George M. Geraghty has been seriously ill for a month, but has recovered.

M. A. Bowe changes his window display daily. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is the latest plant to be effectively utilized for brilliant effects. In the very heart of the city, he finds it to his advantage to keep his exhibit always up-to-date.

Of the retailers whose artistic ability is continually demonstrated in modern and unique effects in window and store decoration in New York, none draw more interested attention than those of Alex McConnell, John King Duer, W. H. Donohoe, A. Warendorff, David Clarke's Sons, Leikens and Myer, while over in Brooklyn Robert G. Wilson and S. Masur show the city of churches how to make it also the city beautiful. These all predict and are preparing for an old-time Thanksgiving.

The ribbon houses which cater to florists' needs have no complaint of hard times; in fact, they say there is more business than they can attend to without working into the night. It is an inspiration to hear them dilate upon the trade's prosperity.

The collection department is not so serious a consideration as it was two weeks ago.

The new firm of Spaulding & Hodgson has been incorporated, with $10,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are Sarah F. Spaulding and A. W. Spaulding, of New York, and Charles F. Hodgson, of East Orange, N. J. The firm will do business both in New York city and at Newport, R. I.,

In the Land of the Big Grain Fields.

while Chairman Nugent was at his best and kept all in good humor by his wit and facetiousness until the wee sma' hours. Everybody declared it one of the best nights in the club's history. More and more the need of a home of its own is indicated.

Echoes of the Flower Show.

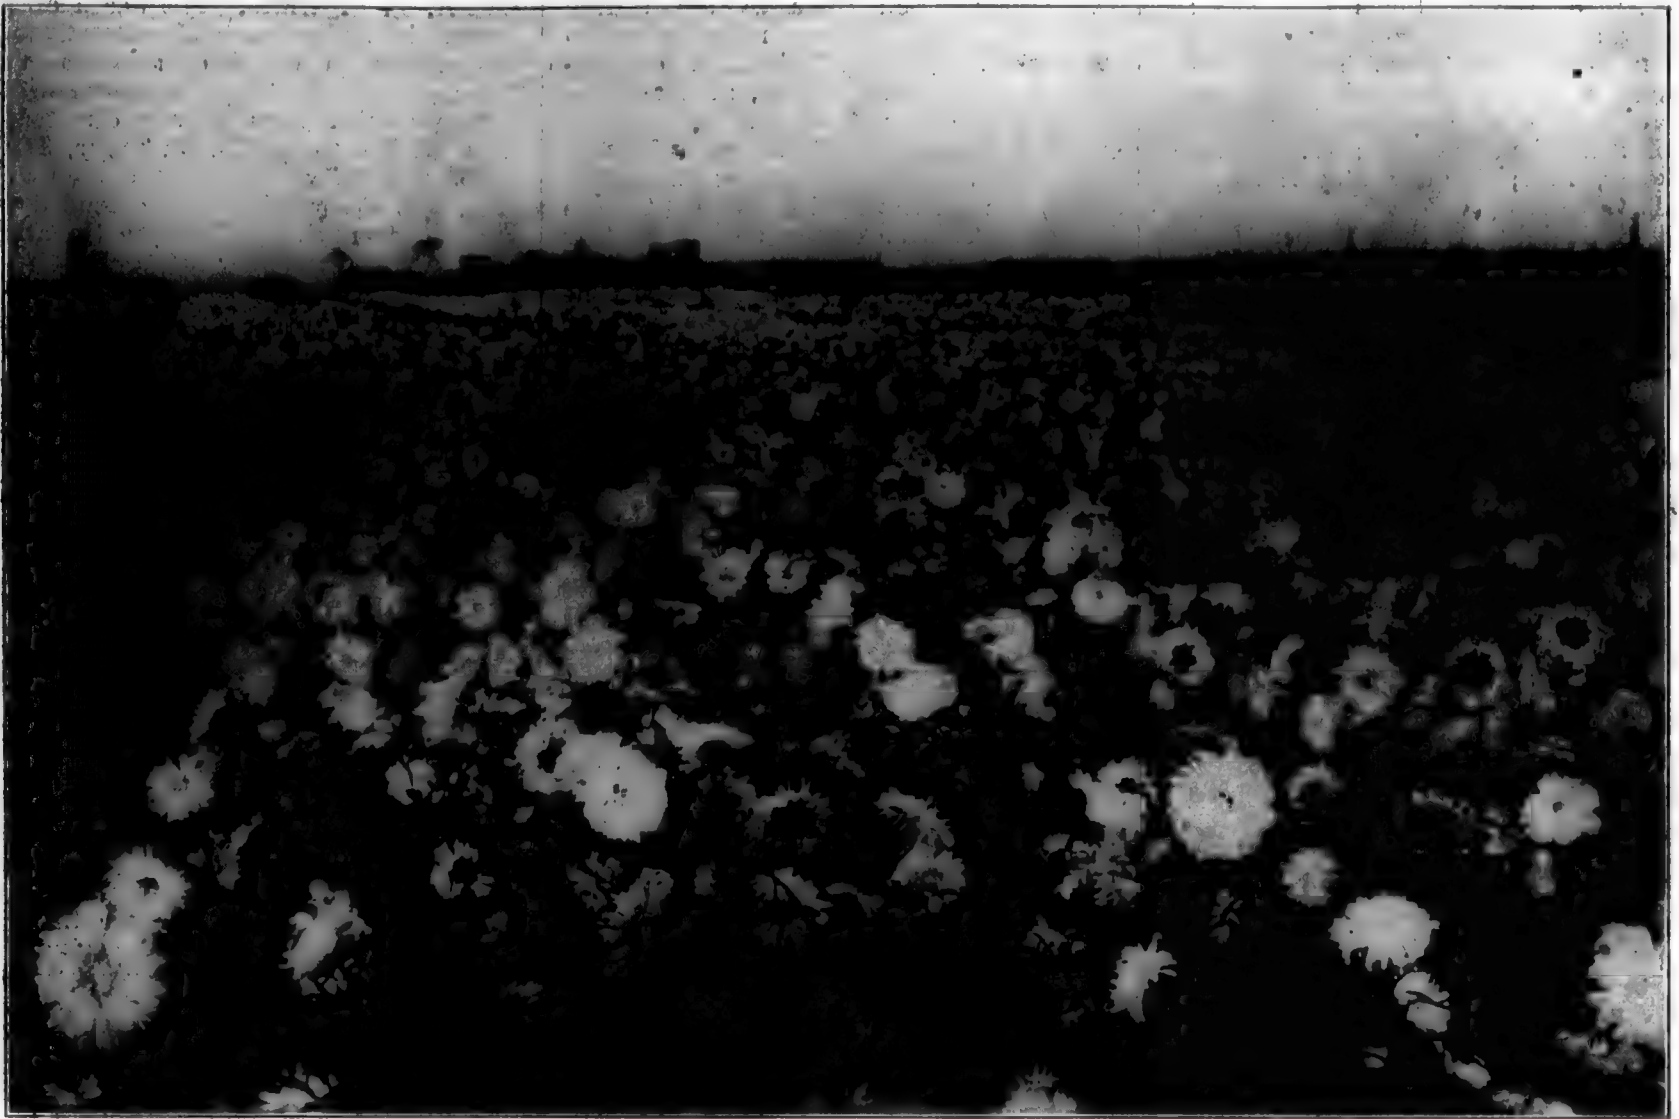

President Loveless deserved the honor of reelection. He is an ideal presiding officer. Those who know him best, say Lovemore should be his name.

Vice-President Poehlmann, of Chicago, will have an opportunity to increase the turned to New York Monday, has only the most glowing account to give. Never, he says, in beauty, quality, variety and management has he seen its equal.

The Begerow Floral Co., the bon ton flower shop of Newark, N. J., opened its new store last week to a crowded house, distributing free many thousands of roses. A. J. Guttman, who was a visitor, says it is one of the handsomest stores in the country.

C. W. Dards opened his beautiful store on Seventy-second street November 11. There are many unique features that place it among the tip top flower stores

Charles F. Hodgson having been head of the old Hodgson firm now in bankruptcy.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

IN THE LAND OF GRAIN.

The illustration opposite shows the establishment of A. N. Kinsman, at Austin, Minn. There are in all seven greenhouses of up-to-date construction, with a boiler-room and chimney capable of taking care of a big growth in the range. The plant at present comprises practically 32,000 square feet of glass. As instancing the proportionate demand in such towns, it is interesting to note that Mr. Kinsman grows 7,000 rose plants and 11,000 carnations. Of course he also has a line of general stock, such as is required for a retail trade in a small city. He forces bulbs in spring and does a large business in bedding plants at the opening of summer.

Mr. Kinsman makes no doubt of the continued prosperity of the northwest. The farmers in his region, the south tier of counties in Minnesota, grow two great staples, corn and wheat, and while the yield this year has not been so great as in the two preceding seasons, the price at the time of marketing the crop was so much higher than usual that the farmers have more money than ever before. All business men in Austin will get their share of it as the winter progresses.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—The New York Central is building a new station and will have several stores to rent, one on the State street side having been leased by John C. Hatcher, of Amsterdam, who will open a branch flower store in it about January 1.

THE CREGO ASTER.

Our illustration shows a portion of a field of this new aster as grown by the originator near Maywood, Ill. It had its origin in a chance seedling ten years ago and has been in process of selection and improvement ever since. Like many other hybrids, it is a shy seeder, many of the largest and finest blossoms producing no seed at all. It has been offered to the Chicago trade as a cut flower for three seasons and has had a remarkable success, selling readily at good prices even when the market has been badly overloaded with older varieties. The stock at present is made up of three colors, light pink (Enchantress shade), white and rose-pink. Two other colors, purple and lavender, are being worked up and will probably be offered for the approval of the trade within the next two or three years.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade last week did not show much improvement over the week previous. Society is still dull, as only small affairs are being reported by the uptown florists who do most of this work. The florists in the downtown district say that while there has been plenty of funeral work, other work was dull and even transient trade dragged, which should be good at this time of the year.

The wholesale market was lively enough. There is plenty of good stock. Violets have taken a brace in price and quality. The demand, too, is much better. Only Californias are in the market. Chrysanthemums of extra fancy grades will be scarce this week, as the growers will save them for the show this week. Still there are enough for the demand. Ivory is a great seller and so is Eaton. Beauties have been quite plentiful in all grades. Richmond and Chateaufort are extra fine and other sorts are plentiful and of good quality. Paper Whites and Romans, though, are looked for daily.

Carnations are in great demand. Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress, Lawson, White Perfection and Cardinal are classed among the fancy grades. Lady Bountiful is fine, but the buyers fight shy of it for its sleepy habits. There is plenty of valley of good quality, but the demand is not extra. Smilax and asparagus sell clean.

Various Notes.

Visitors last week were Henry Johann, Collinsville, Ill.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; R. H. Mandeville, New York; R. S. Halstead and E. W. Guy, Belleville, Ill. Mr. Guy reports that he has just returned from a two weeks' fishing trip and that he will be judge at the flower show at Marissa, Ill., November 20 and 21.

Quite a number of our retail stores are displaying Gothia berry globes, which are sent out by Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass. This is something new and seems to be a great window attraction for the passing public.

George Kessler, of Kansas City, has been engaged to lay out the new Yeatman park. Commissioner Scanlan and Mr. Kessler left November 4 for a trip to Kansas City, Chicago and Detroit to look over park improvements in these places. Superintendent George Ostertag will be in charge of the department during Mr. Scanlan's absence.

At this writing, November 11, the members of the St. Louis Horticultural Society are hard at work arranging the hall for the flower show. The hall decorations are very attractive. The judges as announced by the secretary will be P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.; Andrew Meyer, Sr., St. Louis.

F. H. Meinhardt, Fred Weber, Jr., O. G. Koenig and Theo. Miller were in Chicago last week, attending the flower show.

The public chrysanthemum exhibition given by the Missouri Botanic Garden excelled all others in point of attendance and displays. A number of members of the St. Louis Florists' Club visited the show November 6, were met by Superintendent Irish and were introduced to Max Schiller, the grower of the plants on exhibition.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club attended the funeral of Mrs. H. C. Ostertag, November 5, to express the sympathy of the members. The club sent a large wreath made up of Lady Bountiful carnations and Chateaux roses. John Burke and Robert Meinhardt were pallbearers.

Mr. Keller, of Reed & Keller, New York, has taken the place of A. L. Barnett, who is still missing in Chicago.

William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanic Garden, addressed a meeting of the members of the Public Enterprise organization at the residence of Mrs. A. R. Morgan, on "What Shaw's Garden Means to St. Louis." He said it belongs to the whole world and showed stereopticon slides and charts of the garden.

Adolph Brix's free flower show, November 7 to 9, was given in the Y. M. C. A. hall, Nineteenth and St. Louis avenue, and the north end public packed the hall day and night. The hall was beautifully decorated with wild smilax and extra fine specimens of Whitmanii, Amerpohlii and Boston ferns. The floral designs, baskets of flowers, bridal bouquets and table decorations were artistic. Concerts were given each night. The orchid and the artificial fruit displays attracted a great deal of attention. On Friday night the members of the Florists' Club attended in a body.

J. J. B.

THE DEATH ROLL.

James C. Luitweiler.

James C. Luitweiler died November 4, at his home in York, Pa., after several months' illness. He was born in Flushing, Holland, in 1830, and came to America when 7 years of age. He made his home in Rochester, N. Y., where in later years he was associated with two of the largest nurseries in the country. In Rochester he married Bertha A. Andrews, who died in 1872. In 1861 he removed to York, where he entered into the nursery business in company with Edward J. Evans. During the latter part of his life he gave up the nursery business and devoted his time to the cultivation of flowers. He is survived by his second wife, who was Miss Martha Fletcher. He also leaves five children.

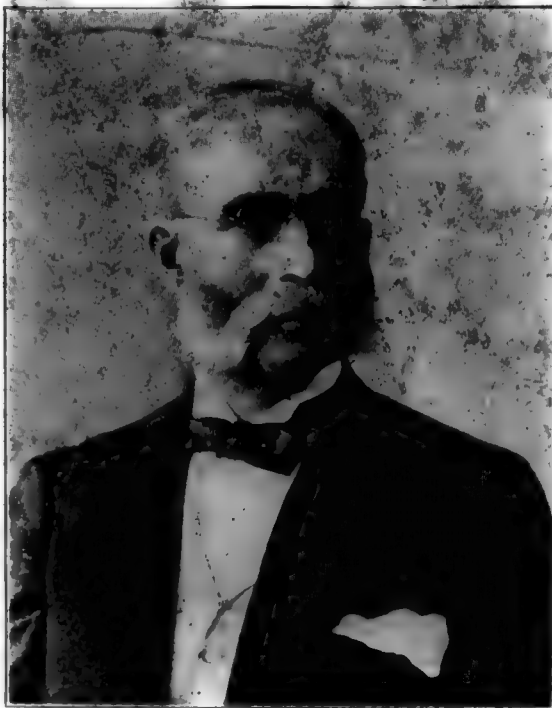

Frank Lichtefeld.

After a constant illness of almost three years, Frank Lichtefeld, the oldest florist in Louisville, Ky., died November 7 of the infirmities of age. Mr. Lichtefeld was 85 years old, and is survived by one son, Henry. His wife died two years ago. Mr. Lichtefeld was born in Germany and came to the United States in 1848, coming immediately to Louisville. He first obtained employment with Edward Wilson, at Woodbine street and Crescent avenue, and during the war became a partner with Wilson, and later bought the business and established a partnership with George Walker. This he disposed of to Walker and established his business on Gray street, which he continued until the time of his death. Two brothers survive him, Fred Lichtefeld, of Evansville, and Henry Lichtefeld, of Louisville.

Dexter Mason Ferry.

Dexter M. Ferry, president of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, was found dead in his bed in his home Monday morning, November 11. He had been in somewhat impaired health during the last year, but had attended to business as usual and was at his office on Saturday.

The family of D. M. Ferry was of French origin, but Mr. Ferry was born August 8, 1833, at Lowville, N. Y. The boy was thrown upon his own resources when 16 years of age. In 1852 he moved from Rochester to Detroit, becoming errand boy in a bookstore. Since then his rise in wealth and position has been steady, until years ago he was recognized as Detroit's merchant prince. The seed business which he built up has become possibly the largest in America.

In 1879 Mr. Ferry participated in the organization of the firm of M. T. Gardner & Co., to deal in seeds. By 1879 the business had so increased that it was incorporated with a paid-up capital of $750,000. The first year the sales were only about $6,000, but the increase was such that in 1901 an authorized sketch of Mr. Ferry stated that in a single year their sales had been more than $1,500,000. It was in 1865 that Mr. Gardner retired from the firm and, after several minor changes, in 1867 the name became as at present. Mr. Ferry assumed control on Mr. Gardner's retirement and was the only person at the time of his death who had connection with the house in its early days of struggle and doubt. The firm of D. M. Ferry & Co. was originally composed of D. M. Ferry, H. K. White, C. C. Bowen and A. E. F. White. The death of Mr. Bowen in the summer of 1900 was the first break in the long association of these gentlemen. The business now for some years has been actively directed by Lem W. Bowen and D. M. Ferry, Jr.

As prosperity came to the seed business, Mr. Ferry's interests extended and diversified until he became identified with a large number of Detroit's industries. At the time of his death he was president of the First National Bank and president of the Union Trust Co. He also was active in the management of the Wayne County Savings Bank, president of the Standard Life and Accident Insurance Co., the American Harrow Co. and a director in several other important companies. His benefactions to charity, church and art have been large. He was a lifelong Republican and served for years as chairman of the state central committee. He also was once the Republicans' candidate for governor and later was a candidate for United States senator.

August Loeber.

August Loeber, late traveling salesman for Arthur T. Boddington through the southern and New England states, died November 8 at the New York hospital after an illness covering more than six months. He caught cold last spring, this developed into rheumatic fever, pneumonia, pleurisy and endocarditis of the heart, from which last he never really recovered and which was the ultimate cause of his demise.

Mr. Loeber was born in Holland twenty-six years ago and first traveled in this country for the Continental Bulb Co., Hillegom, and was most successful as a traveling representative. He was a thoroughly lovable man and was popular with all with whom he came in contact, bright, alert and a good friend, generous to a fault. He had no relatives in this country, but many friends who will mourn his loss and bear with his parents in their sad bereavement. He was laid away in Kensico cemetery.

Mrs. C. Held.

Mrs. C. Held, Baltimore, died suddenly Monday evening, November 11. Last summer an operation was performed and she was able to be about again until a few days ago. Mrs. Held was well known by the trade, having carried on business for twenty years and conducted her affairs on a large scale. The trade in Baltimore has lost one who will no doubt be long remembered.

EAST HAVEN, CONN.—The contract has been let for the building of a residence on Dodge avenue, for J. A. Long. It will be a two-story frame structure, arranged for two families. The interior will be modern in design and will be finished in hard woods.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—C. C. Warburton opened a city store November 2, at the Monument Square corner. Heretofore Mr. Warburton has conducted all his business at the greenhouses, but the growing demand necessitated the establishing of a downtown store.

NEW CASTLE, IND.—Weiland & Olinger have recently acquired a farm of fifty-seven acres located on the Pennsylvania line on the other side of New Castle from their present plant. The property is an ideal one for greenhouse purposes, and will eventually be the location of a range of glass.

Florists' Publishing Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:-

Your kind invitation to be present at the celebration of your tenth anniversary, to be held in the columns of the Florists' Review November 14, received with thanks.

Although we do not find our name among a list of speakers for that occasion, we trust you will pardon us for taking up your valuable time in offering you our most hearty congratulations upon this your tenth anniversary.

The writer has noticed with great pleasure your gradual and substantial development, which is the just reward of untiring energy combined with intelligent and conscientious work.

The dignified and modest, yet persistent manner in which you have ever pursued your course, has won for you many friends. It is true you have often pushed for business, but have never burdened us; for you never left us with our order well tucked away in your inside pocket without first having thoroughly convinced us that your persistent solicitations for the "special ad" (preferably a full page) were mainly out of kindness of heart towards us and solely in the interest of the advertiser.

Were I to end here, I could imagine your representative saying in his slow, deliberate and serious manner so well known to his many patrons: "Thanks - awfully - that's - all - very - nice - indeed - Mr. Kroe-schell - but, (here increases tempo slightly) how about that page 'ad'?"

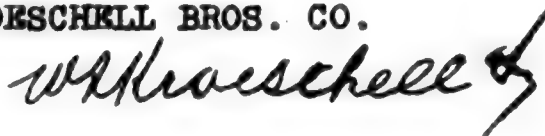

I'll just fool you this time, and talk "turkey" (due credit to your clever announcement for this thought) by enclosing herewith our copy in evidence of the fact that we shall be pleased and proud to be with you November 14.

Once more, with our heartiest congratulations and good wishes, we are

Sincerely yours,

To print this issue of the REVIEW 6,140 pounds of white paper were required, or more than three tons.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday, or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01.

Officers for 1907: President, William J. Stewart, Boston; vice-president, John Westcott, Philadelphia; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.

First National Flower Show, Chicago, November, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

SOME men's work drives them because they do not drive the work.

JOHN T. TEMPLE, of Davenport, Ia., says the pompon chrysanthemum is the one that will be bringing in the money five years from now.

At St. Louis November 12 the show gold medal for new American plant was awarded to W. A. Manda, for Dracena Mandaiana.

THE scarcity of help of some experience is not so great as a month ago, for the season is at hand when many large growers lay off men who have been employed since spring.

W. J. GODFREY, the sweet pea grower at Exmouth, England, says that the American variety Phenomenal seems to be unnoticed in England, although it is "a most beautiful variety and well worth a trial, for it is distinct."

WM. F. KASTING was candidate for city treasurer at the election in Buffalo November 5. He ran 6,000 votes ahead of the Democratic ticket, but failed of election. To win in Buffalo, it looks as though the Democrats needed a florist at the head of the ticket.

By hundreds the florists, who do prosperous local business in country towns, are finding that they can make more money by using their space for other crops and depending on the nearest wholesale grower for their supplies of roses.

PRESENT indications are that in that part of the country west of the Alleghenies, the approaching season will break all records in the matter of greenhouse building. Not only will the local plants be added to, but the big establishments will be largely increased, for all are prosperous.

OUR TENTH ANNIVERSARY.

It had been our intention to felicitate ourselves a bit upon this occasion, the present issue completing the tenth year of the publication of the REVIEW, but several patrons have arisen nobly to the occasion and patted us on the back much more gracefully than we could perform the operation for ourselves. Not having space in this issue for all the letters, that of William L. Kroeschell, on page 35, is offered as an evidence, if any were needed, that the REVIEW has not been idle during its first decade. If we have failed of taking full advantage of our opportunities we only can say, in the words of the story as told of the cowboy's epitaph inscribed by admiring friends: "He done his damndest; angels couldn't a did no more."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market was quiet last week and a clearance on Friday and Saturday was only effected by cheap offers of the our selection grade. This week started off better, Monday producing its usual run of shipping and local buying being better than at any time last week. Receipts also were reduced by weather conditions, which, though bright, have become cold.

The chrysanthemum still dominates. Receipts continue large, but quality has improved, for the good late sorts are now being cut. However, prices are not high. In fact, the growers called them low, and there is little prospect of anything much better being realized this season. It may have the effect of reducing the quantity grown next year, this year's supply of the catch-crop grade having been considerably greater than that of last season.

There are some superb roses to be had. Long Beauties are equal to all requirements and shorts are more abundant, but medium lengths, as usual, are scarce and command a premium. Fancy long Richmond and Killarney seem possibly more abundant than they really are because the buyers are not anxious to pay the price for the special grades. Bride, Maid, Kaiserin, Chatenay and the specialty roses also are fine and equal to market requirements.

The receipts of carnations do not increase as rapidly as usual at this season. There is some fine stock and it brings good returns, but even with the short supply, bargain sales to clear out the lower grades have been necessary.

There is variety in the reports on violets. Some houses speak well of the demand and prices received, but others say these must be easily satisfied, as their own supply exceeds the demand and prices realized are less than a year ago. Quality is fine. Easter lilies, valley, etc., are abundant. A few short sweet peas have arrived. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful.

Thanksgiving Prospects.

The wholesalers are mindful of last year's experience at Thanksgiving and are not advancing quotations to any special degree in their search for advance orders for Thanksgiving. Last year we had a brisk market in the middle of November and Thanksgiving rates were run up to a point where they shut off buying. We shall have a large supply in Chicago around November 25 and 26 and the effort will be to make prices so attractive that big orders will be the result. The re-

LET US GET TOGETHER FOR THANKSGIVING

You, Mr. Buyer, need our good stock.

We need your orders to continue the steady increase in our business. :: :: :: :: :: ::

All buyers can call on us for Thanksgiving with the certainty that they are drawing upon the largest supply of uniformly good stock in the west. This is not a specialty house—we have everything—but we have only one idea, and that is to handle every flower received as it should be handled, and so keep on gaining new support while retaining the old. If you are not a customer, let's get together.

sult will be far better than with such a slump as occurred last year.

Visit to Joliet.

Forty of the trade visitors accepted the invitation of the Chicago Carnation Co. for a trip to Joliet November 9. The establishment was found in exceptionally good shape, the stock in all the houses being of uniform good quality. Aristocrat is grown in largest quantity, there being 20,000 plants. There are 10,000 each of White Perfection and a white sport of Enchantress. Other varieties grown in considerable quantity are Winsor, Beacon, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Victory, Cardinal, Lady Bountiful, White Lawson and Red Chief. There are 10,000 plants of Andrew Carnegie, the new scarlet which the firm is disseminating this season. It is a sport from Harlowarden.

State Greenhouses.

November 9 there was a meeting between Dean Davenport, Prof. Blair and Prof. Beal, of the State College of Agriculture, and the advisory committee of the State Florists' Association, to which a number of the local growers were summoned. The plans for the state greenhouses at Champaign are on paper and construction work will begin in the spring. Dean Davenport said he was particularly pleased with the suggestion that this first state appropriation is only a step toward a practical school of floriculture. Growers expressed themselves anxious to have a solution for such practical problems as their battle with thrips.

Various Notes.

Bassett & Washburn have decided not to send out their new red carnation, Orland P. Bassett, this season. The present plan is to grow three houses of it next year, especially for propagating.

Among the Chicagoans at St. Louis this week are Leonard Kill, P. J. Hauswirth, August Poehlmann and C. L. Washburn, the latter having gone by way of Indianapolis, where there also is a show on.

The A. L. Randall Co. decorated its supply department for flower show week and made a most attractive display. The effort was rewarded by the presence of a large number of visitors from out of town. The company is this week installing a new telephone switchboard, with three trunk lines and stations in all departments.

C. W. McKellar received red berries November 8 and calls attention to the fact that quality is much better this year than last.

H. N. Bruns was the most cheerful loser at the show. Incidentally it is worth recording that in the wholesale market buyers do not want dark green foliage on their valley; they want light green, the same as in plumosus and Sprengerii.

N. J. Wieter says that Golden Chadwick is one of the best commercial chrysanthemums in the large list they are growing. He says that for all the splendid novelties sent out year by year the demand for cut flowers still is for a few sorts, Bonaffon and Chadwick being most popular.

There are two men in the market who attend to business under difficulty.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is ill of indigestion and E. F. Winterson is combating his old enemy, rheumatism.

Philipp & Opitz have purchased the retail business of Chas. E. Morton, at 3626 Cottage Grove avenue.

C. Brethauer has been located at 1198 Lincoln avenue for twenty-six years and has seen the locality grow from an open prairie to a solidly built up district. The opening of the elevated station within a few doors of his place has helped business with him this fall. Years ago he had greenhouses at this location, but he now finds that he can buy cheaper than he can grow.

E. C. Amling has begun to receive sweet peas. He did a fine business with them last winter.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, has gone to Little Rock, Ark., to judge the show there this week.

Mrs. Frank Beu, who sells in the Flower Growers' market, is again disposing of a crop of pompon chrysanthemums and says they are the best selling stock at present and that a bench of these pays better than a bench of big mums.

Peter Risch, of Weiland & Risch, has been ill for a week or more and Miss Furlong, who presides in the office, wears her face in a bandage as a result of a visit to a dentist.

Andrew McAdams has had an experience of the cattleya fly in his house of orchids and he says the cattleyas hardly will be this season as they were last, the most profitable thing on the place.

C. M. Dickinson says that E. H. Hunt is now disposing of so great a quantity of To-bak-ine products that he is confidest they are the most widely used of any insecticide sold in the United States, and that they are invading Europe.

J. A. Budlong's people report a brisk demand this week.

George Reinberg's first crop of orchids is off.

The Benthay-Coatsworth Co. figures on an especially good crop of roses for the next few weeks.

J. J. Kruchten is increasing his receipts and is going out after his share of the shipping business.

Scheiden & Schoos are steadily increasing their business, according to E. Fransen, and are well pleased.

W. E. Lynch, vice-president and manager of the cut flower end of the E. H. Hunt corporation, is especially well pleased with the success which H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, scored at the flower show. Mr. Buckbee is one of the principal consignors of chrysanthemums to E. H. Hunt and leads on exhibition sorts at the show.

Anna Grace Sawyer, who has succeeded Mrs. Warder at 2020 West Madison street, is a daughter of A. A. Sawyer at Oak Park and calls the store the Pansy Garden Flower Shop. She sends out an announcement of the change tied to a business card, with a pressed spray of adiantum and a pansy tied on top with violet silk.

Zech & Mann say there will be no shortage of mums for Thanksgiving.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports that more visitors inspected its place since the opening of the flower show than in any other week of the history of the concern.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is pleased that Fritz Bahr, one of its old-time consignors, captured a first premium for Enchantress carnation at the show last week.

NORTH MANCHESTER, IND.—J. J. Martin is the successor of Harry White as proprietor of the Riverside Greenhouses.

OSAGE, IA.—Walter S. Hall had his annual chrysanthemum show November 12 to 14, with a band concert each evening. He had a large attendance, although 10 cents admission was charged.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The fact that all the larger business concerns are paying their employees with clearing house checks is causing much talk, for the reason that it is not understood. Many persons fear that it will affect trade. However, as long as there is work enough for all, the people will have just as much to spend and will soon understand this method of receiving their pay, if it has not gone out of existence as quickly as it came in. So far trade has not suffered much, although there is no great demand along any line, and each one is able to take care of all the business he can get without working overtime. The wholesale houses seem to have more than plenty of everything, and as long as that is the fact they are not expecting any fancy prices.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' Club met November 5 with the largest and most enthusiastic attendance in some time. The subject for discussion was chrysanthemums, of which there was a grand display, so great that the hall was overcrowded and there was hardly room to display them to advantage.

Among the exhibitors of cut blooms, E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., took first place with a grand display. The twenty or more varieties were all good, and while all were not considered just the thing by those growing cut flowers, the balance were accepted as the correct thing by the park and private gardeners and all will be grown somewhere in Pittsburgh next year.

The Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. showed a vase of Detroyat, which was considered the best appearing pink under artificial light; Morton F. Plant, Golden Wedding, Appleton, Beatrice May, Mrs. Duckham, Buckley, Alice Byron, Chadwick and Balfour. This was a most creditable display and some one remarked that they must all be money makers or Fred Burki would not grow them.

Schenley park had an exceptionally fine lot of pot plants.

Walter James, gardener of the Western Penitentiary, showed a bunch of blooms grown inside the walls of the penitentiary, in the smokiest part of the city, and they were a credit. Mr. Falconer says Walter is one of his old boys and deserved credit for being able to grow stock, handicapped as he is.

Goodwin & Sons, Bridgeville, showed Mrs. Robinson and Ivory, both good. Mr. Jenkins, Mr. Peacock's gardener, had a fine display of cut blooms. Jas. B. Laughlin's gardener was there with his collection and it was creditable. Mr. Frazer, gardener for H. C. Frick, had quite a display, among them Miss Clay Frick, which was well received. H. Baggs, of Sewickley, had a vase of mixed chrysanthemums and a vase of roses. Mr. Westhoff, of Allison park, had a vase of mums and a vase of Robt. Craig carnations with stems about sixteen inches long, which were considered fine for this time of year.

A visitor from the east who was present made a few remarks and expressed astonishment that a club such as ours, in a city as rich as Pittsburgh, did not have enough enterprise to secure prizes and get up a chrysanthemum show, and said he had made it a rule to attend the eastern shows and would guarantee that if our people would send such flowers as were shown at the club along with such a bunch of carnations to the Philadelphia show they would bring home prizes. It sounded good to the members and tickled a weak spot all right and is a safe thing to say in a strange city. However, it is hoped all Pittsburgh readers will take note of these remarks and get busy before another year.

Various Notes.

Fred Burki left November 9, with his family, for a few weeks in the south, visiting his sister in Virginia.

The Gude brothers, of Washington, stopped in this city on their way west to pay a visit to the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co., and say they were well repaid for the time and trouble.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

"I have never seen conditions worse." That is the way one of our leading wholesalers summed up the situation. Another said: "There are no prices." Perhaps the best way to convey an adequate idea of the situation is to say that there are enough chrysanthemums alone to do all the business, without any of the other flowers. When it is considered that there are heavy crops of a variety of other flowers coming into the market the deplorable conditions can be realized. The social season has not commenced in earnest; the weather has been open; many of the buyers have their own greenhouses and these houses are now producing abundant crops; the money market suffered a temporary reverse. All these causes combine to explain the unfortunate conditions.

The average price of chrysanthemums does not exceed half that of last season, which was, however, very high. Another condition which contributes to the depression is that the fakers, usually relied upon to dispose of poor stock, have been ruled off the streets, but few of them doing business now. Double violets are selling fairly well, and Beauties are also in moderate demand. Tea roses are not in demand, excepting a few of the fancies. Carnations, chrysanthemums and possibly single violets have suffered most. Callas have made their appearance. Snapdragon can also be had in limited quantity.

A New Project.

One of our brightest business men has suggested that the usefulness of the annual autumn exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society might be greatly extended by paying especial attention to its educational features treated from a commercial standpoint. His suggestion is that at least a portion of the hall be devoted to decorations and decorative effects; for instance, that the stairway be decorated in ballroom style, that the foyer be used to further carry out this idea, either arranged as an exhibition room or in such other way as the committee might decide, and that a dinner or luncheon table be handsomely adorned with flowers as well as plate, silverware, glass and napery. To carry out this plan he proposes that a guaranteed fund of $500 be contributed by ten business men, $50 each. With this fund the committee appointed by the society could draw up specifications and ask for bids from a few of our leading retailers. The acceptance of the lowest responsible bid will place this work entirely in the hands of one man, who will then be able to carry it out effectively and harmoniously. The originator of this idea believes it will stimulate interest in the exhibition and create a more intelligent demand for artistic arrangements. Any florists who are willing to aid in this proposed plan with a view to carrying it out next season are invited to communicate with Phil, care of any of the wholesale, commission, seed or supply houses. Should a sufficient number of subscribers be secured the matter will be placed before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for action with a view to put the plan in effect at the show next fall.

The Park Show.

The annual chrysanthemum exhibition, held at Horticultural hall, in Fairmount park, was opened to the public November 9. The east end of the main hall, with its wings, embracing a space of about 40x200, was devoted to the exhibition, the queen of autumn being the only flower used. The east end is laid out as in a greenhouse, with center and two side benches, separated by two wide walks. At each end the wing is broader than the balance of the house. These wings are completely filled with a mass of chrysanthemums, arranged on staging rising from the ground to a height of ten or twelve feet at the back, forming a complete color picture of perhaps 20x40 feet. The landscape gardener, Oglesby B. Paul, with an artist's eye for effect, willed that the various shades of pink and the whites should go in one wing, while the yellows, with a few reds, are in the other. Between are groups of solid or varied colors and long spaces of well grown foliage plants, with a specimen chrysanthemum here and there. The effect of the whole is most beautiful, well calculated to increase the love for flowers in every visitor's heart.

I was fortunate in finding the superintendent, Xavier E. Schmitt, who explained his aims and methods. The bulk of the stock is grown indoors throughout the summer, although, as space is at a premium, a certain number of plants are grown outdoors of the varieties that will thrive there best. The houses being rather low and mass effects being desired, made-up plants are frequently used, plants from 3½-inch pots being made up, fourteen or sixteen in a 16-inch pan; lesser numbers in smaller sizes. These plants are given but little support, the stakes used being kept low, so that not a stake is visible when they are in position and the flowers have a grace impossible to attain in carefully trained specimens. This grace adds an indescribable charm to the whole effect.

The varieties used are chiefly standard sorts. Golden Wedding is still considered the best yellow. Col. Appleton, Golden Age and Mrs. W. Duckham are other good yellows. The leading whites are Mutual Friend, Alice Byron and Mrs. H. Weeks. The pinks are Maud Dean, Doctor Enguehard and William Duckham. Charles H. Miller, named after the landscape gardener who was in charge from the Centennial until his death a few years ago, is still grown, partly as a token of respect, I fancy. There were many other varieties too numerous to mention, all well grown, the flowers of good size and well colored.

An enormous number of persons, estimated at over 15,000, visited this show on the opening day, Sunday. While the attendance fell off on the following days, good judges estimate that it will increase each Sunday until the close, which will probably be on or about December 1. The value of the exhibition from an educational standpoint cannot be overestimated.

Various Notes.

The November meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held November 11. Edwin Mathews spoke on "Hardy Chrysanthemums." He was supported by Ernest Hemming. The exhibition was fine. John H. Sibson, gardener to Mrs. Thomas McKean, captured most of the chrysanthemum prizes. Meehan & Sons, Frank Gould, Peter McGowan, Charles Thompson and others made good showings.

Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa., was in town recently. It is understood that Mr. Dorrance came here to call on Mrs. Jardine.

P. J. Lynch, of West Grove, Pa., was in the city November 9. Mr. Lynch visited some of the wholesale centers, but stated that he was not here on business.

Charles Thomas, formerly a florist doing business in the old Baldwin place on Chestnut street, is now a curbstome merchant in cut flowers.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. received 200 cases of red immortelle wreaths by the S. S. Macedonia.

The Attalea Cohune oil palm, a native of Honduras, in Horticultural hall, Fairmount park, is one of the finest specimens in the country. It came from the Kingston Botanic Gardens in 1876 in a 4-inch pot and was planted out in its present position in 1888.

M. Rice & Co. have received one of their largest importations of choice Christmas immortelles. Their new Christmas cowbell is a most promising novelty.

A Philadelphia & Reading railway train struck a wagon belonging to H. Bayersdorfer & Co. at Eleventh and Willow streets one day last week. The driver was injured and the wagon shattered. The horses escaped.

W. E. McKissick will remove from his present location at 1221 Filbert street to 1619 and 1621 Ranstead street next week.

Miss P. A. Baker, of Media, Pa., is cutting some choice Maj. Bonnaffon chrysanthemums. They were seen at John McIntyre's.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has supplied all the bulbs used in the local squares, notably Independence, Logan and Rittenhouse, many of those in Fairmount park, and in the parks and squares of Harrisburg, Reading and Washington, D. C. In addition to this all the bulbs forced in the White House greenhouses have been furnished by this enterprising house.

In going over the convention notes I find that no mention has been made in this column of the valuable souvenir, in the shape of a good knife, which was presented by H. Bayersdorfer & Co. to each of their guests when he registered.

Another advance of 10 cents a ton was made in the price of anthracite buckwheat coal by some of the collieries November 11.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., has reached this city with two of his new roses, Rhea Reid and Princess.

ARE you working on the catalogue? And what are prices going to be? These are questions that all visiting seedsmen ask while making the rounds of the trade. An answer to the first does not interest them so much as an answer to the second. The first question is answered, however, while the second, although discussed to the limit, is not.

ONION sets at Chicago are now stored for winter, in most cases, and are in excellent keeping condition. There is a tendency among some of the storers to double up too much in order to save warehouse space. This is unwise economy, because when too many sets are crowded into a tray they heat easily and cause a loss that soon eats up any gain that might come from lessened expenditures for warehouses. It may be said, however, that there is much room in some of the best appointed onion set warehouses of Chicago, notwithstanding the crowding that is seen in others, and also that while some of the growers had to buy some new trays, thousands of empty trays unused are to be seen in the fields of others. These are the fortunes and misfortunes of onion set growing and, as has been stated frequently in the REVIEW, it was the growers who had the most trays and the largest warehouses who harvested the fewest onion sets from given acres this year at Chicago. This accounts for the stacks of empty trays.

THE last meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League has helped out somewhat on the price question, but the unfortunate circumstance that only a sectional view of the situation is taken at the League meetings is thought by some to lessen the general value of its price lists.

CANNERS' varieties of peas are still in strong demand and prices are advancing proportionately. The Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, reports sales of Advancers at $5.50, Horsfords at $5.50 and Alaskas at $4.50 for car lots; smaller sales proportionately higher. When a carload of peas brings $5,000 there is a pleasure in doing business, the seedsmen say.

LITTLE can be added to former reports regarding beans. Considerable activity in threshing and cleaning is reported from some of the stations, but there still remains a large portion of the crop in the straw and it will be some weeks before definite information of the shortage or otherwise of any given variety will be known. It looks from the returns so far that shortages will be the rule, however.

THE onion seed perennial question is still to the front. A careful canvass of the set growers who harvested seed of their own shows that the harvest with them is not what was expected. Those who have had the best luck are shy some few pounds of their estimated needs for next year's sowings and they are out to buy it if it can be secured. A $2 per pound price frightens them somewhat, but they will come to it if they have to. The mongrel yellow from south of the Ohio river will answer if none other is to be had, but for a pure Red they seem to be up against it, as the scarcity of seed of this color is distressing. Seed of the Globe sorts, excepting White, is not hard to locate.

MICHIGAN grown radish seed, what there is of it, is reported to be of good sized grain and well matured. Growers report that the past season was the worst for weeds that they have experienced for many years and that consequently the cleaning of the seed after it was threshed was an experience they do not care to have repeated. The profits of the crop to them amount to so little that they

Under these circumstances it seems to be very risky to conclude transactions at the present moment, basing upon prices which rule from 90 to 95 marks per cwt. c. i. f., German seaport. New Close-Clinging Hardy Climber AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Veitchii. The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn. In size the leaves are small, beautifully, dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump. This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers, although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

INFLUENCE OF CLIMATE.

A Factor Often Disregarded.

The producer of garden vegetables and flowers, who grows them for profit, is generally disposed to lay blame upon the seedsman for all departures from desired types, but the thoroughly practical seed grower, who most intensely watches the development of his plants from the seedling stage up to full maturity, observing every unusual change in temperature and moisture, or in manurial or soil effects, bringing about a corresponding variation in form, color, texture and flavor, if in the case of vegetables or fruits, knows enough to place the blame, most generally, on natural causes. Generally variation in a few individuals comes from the good or bad influence of heredity, but when variation covers an entire field, it is either from bad seed or some local influence of climate or soil.

While variation, generally in the direction of retrogression, is undesirable, it is well that there is a tendency to change characteristics of form, color and flavor, as if it were not, then very few novel vegetables, fruits or flowers would exist, as twenty to one new introductions have been obtained by seizing upon chance natural developments and not by the practice of cross-breeding, as so generally claimed by some in the seed business.

This freak development, or "sporting," as it is termed, generally induced by climatic checks, will forever continue, not the result alone of accidental cross-pollination in the field, but in the great majority of cases the outcropping of earlier forms, if not sometimes the most primitive conditions. Take the ears of pod corn, for example, sometimes found in the fields of the highest bred stock.

The general merchant selling seeds in city or country is not a student of vegetable physiology, and when he receives a complaint from one of his agricultural customers he at once flies to the conclusion that the seedsman has robbed them both; and he sits down and writes an ill-considered letter.

Weather Influence on Cabbage.

As an illustration of weather influences, the writer points to observations of the last summer in the Bloomsdale trial grounds, where, among other things, there were two trial patches of cabbage, 100 samples of 100 plants each, both patches duplicates of each other, but the second set out in the field eight weeks after the first. The season was a freaky one throughout and, as would be expected by any student of plant growth, the results were very conflicting. With these two cabbage patches, those kinds as a rule which were the best in the early patch were among the worst in the late patch, and those which were first condemned gave satisfaction on the late trial.

Suppose instead of one observer having both these patches of cabbage, the fields were under the observation of two different men at distant points. In this case each would draw opposite conclusions and neither be right.

Just at present, through the river bottoms of eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey, where extensive fields of cabbage are grown, some hidden climatic influence which has prevailed has most mysteriously retarded the anticipated development of thousands of acres of cabbage. They are apparently in full health, but are growing slowly, although there has been plenty of rain, so necessary to cabbage; and so it goes, the plans of men and mice oft go astray, and this old Scotch thought is noticed especially by the tillers of the soil.

This is an example of a half-tone from one of our wash-drawings—gets much more detail than in a retouched photograph. Can bring out any feature, or remove defects.

Now is the Time to get to work on the cuts for your 1908 catalogue. Our artists are the best in the United States on flower and vegetable drawing. We make a specialty of Cuts For Seedsmen. All processes. Quick work if necessary. Satisfaction guaranteed.

This retarded condition of the growth of cabbage does not apply to the high land districts of Pennsylvania.

Variation With Onions.

Again, of two large fields of Yellow Strasburg onion seed drilled for sets, one patch planted the middle of April made perfect sets, while, with the same seed, the other field, sown two weeks later, all went to stage or thick necks.

Another case with onion seed: Two fields sown for onion sets by neighbors on contract, each sown with identical seed, but at intervals of ten days, produced in the one case a perfect development of plants and raised an enormous crop, five or six bushels to every pound drilled, but in the other, a three-acre field, because of a pelting rainfall, resulted in an absolute failure to germinate; a failure so great as to warrant the ploughing up of the field and the sacrifice of 300 pounds of seed.

On Bloomsdale two fields of cucumbers of the same sort, and out of the same bag, planted side by side, one planted in May, the other in June, were, the early one a complete success, and an absolute failure as respects the later planted.

With root crops there is a great variation in shape and texture under different conditions of temperature and rainfall, and with spinach under favorable conditions it will be of such a deep green and rampant growth as to seem of an entirely distinct breed from plants from the same seed grown without the necessary amount of water.

Cauliflower and Egg Plant.

Cauliflower is largely dependent for successful culture on climatic conditions. It flourishes best when under the influences of salt air, as on the coast. Yet salt air, or any form of irrigation, is not always a necessity, for altitude seems to take its place, cauliflower doing well on the sides of many mountains when it proves an absolute failure in the bottoms of valleys within sight.

For some years there has been sold seed of the so-called High Bush egg plant, a form which, because of its growth in Florida, has acquired an exceedingly rampant habit; but why not take the seed grown upon the island of Trinidad, where the climatic influence has changed the modest vine of the north, twenty-four inches high, to a tree of eight feet or more? Both the Florida and Trinidad varieties have been increased alone by climatic variations.

Many of the showy sorts of field corn grown under the favorable climatic influence of the southwest, have often been brought north, but they always disappoint, as the effort of growth is not to make ears of grain, but to make tall stalks and broad leaves. Indeed, corn brought from a point only 100 miles south will often bring great disappointment, as the grain on the ears seldom hardens before frost.

Cantaloupes.

Thousands of tourists visiting southern Europe and western Asia, especially Persia, for in this latter country especially the cantaloupe is found in great perfection, observe that many times they are superior to those often obtained at home; but of all the various experimental lots of foreign seed brought to America, not in one case out of twenty has the fruit produced been fit to eat.

This is entirely climatic, as these varieties show some tendency to improve after a number of years of continued culture; but as before said, a man ignorant of these things, be he merchant or gardener, is a difficult animal with which to reason.

Cantaloupes grown on the line of the farthest point north where they will ripen are well known to be especially sugary, and just so with sugar corn: the sweetest often is obtained from a point north of the observer. Scientific men say this is by reason of the actinic influence of northern regions.

The intelligent gardener recognizes all these variations of plants, either physical (that is, from heredity), or from climatic influences, but all gardeners are not intelligent. General merchants are not seedsmen, nor are they gardeners; consequently they cannot be expected to understand the conditions of unusual heat and cold, excessive rain or drought, still less of electrical influences, which students of agriculture claim exercise a great influence in the growth of plants.

REAPPRAISEMENT.

The appraisers at New York want packing shown in the invoice, as shown by the following reappraisements reported November 9:

BULBS.—From Veldhuyzen Van Zanten & Sons, Lisse, exported Oct. 2, 1907; entered at New York. File No. 46876. Invoice No. 16896. Findings of Sharretts, G. A.: Spanish iris, white; entered at .08 dollar each. English iris, mixed; entered at .25 dollar each. Discount, 5 per cent. Packing and shipping included. Advanced by addition of packing charges.

NURSERY STOCK.—From Van Heiningen Bros. & Co., Boskoop, exported Sept. 26, 1907; entered at New York. File No. 46779. Invoice No. 11843. Findings of Sharretts, G. A.: Dielytra spectabilis, 2d qual.; entered at 35 florins per 1,000. Paeonia, asstd., 2d qual.; entered at 80 florins per 1,000. And similar goods. Add packing. Discount, 5 per cent.

HOW PRICES COMPARE.

In the advance wholesale price list issued November 6 W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, say: "Never before in our experience, covering over thirty years, have we gone through such a growing season as the one just closed. As every one knows, we had not only practically no spring, but the summer season was unusually short. As early as June we began to realize that crops of most kinds would fall below the average in yield, and felt that it was absolutely necessary to have our representatives travel almost constantly among the growers, that we might keep posted."

The list quotes Alaska pea at $4.25 as against $3.50 a year ago; American Wonder, $5, against $4.75 last year; Large Red Wethersfield, $1.85, as against $1.25 a year ago; Southport White Globe, $3.50, as against $2.75; White Spine cucumber, 55 cents, against 40 cents a year ago; Grand Rapids lettuce, 75 cents, against 65 cents; White Creasback beans, $6.25, as against $4.75, and many other items in proportion, but some beans are lower. No quotations are given on sugar corn.

GRASS SEED AND CLOVER.

In his grass seed report, dated October 25, L. C. Nungesser, Griesheim, Germany, says in part:

"The inquiry for all grasses was particularly strong last season, both at home and for export, so that no stocks are anywhere available to fall back upon. The new crop showing no surplus in any sort, a possibility of covering momentary wants will be keenly felt. I therefore strongly advise early buying as opportunity occurs.

"Clovers suffered also considerably from the bad weather; so much so that only restricted crops can be expected. Red clover has only produced small quantities in the chief districts. Other smaller places will yield better, but the average crop in Europe will not be more than a poor medium one. America appears to have a small yield and is already a buyer from Europe."

THE REVIEW gives its advertisers quick results.—G. FRED BAUERLE, Lansing, Mich.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade was good last week, with the supply of flowers plentiful. We are having warm weather for this time of year and this is bringing out the blooms more quickly.

Carnations are now coming in of good quality. They retail for 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen. A few Winsor carnations are seen. This is a grand sort. They bring just now 60 cents per dozen retail.

Late varieties of mums are now coming in and by Thanksgiving will be about done. Some nice Dr. Enguehard are also seen; $2 and $3 per dozen retail is the price asked. R. H. Woodhouse will have a fine lot of Jeanne Nin for Thanksgiving.

Roses are fine; $1.50 and $2 per dozen retail is the price. Violets are a glut on the market just now. One grower here is selling them at 50 cents per hundred. This hurts the sale at the stores. One dollar per hundred is the general retail price. Funeral work is very good, using up lots of stock.

Various Notes.

S. S. Peckham, who formerly kept a store in this city, has now gone into carnation growing exclusively. He has a great many varieties, and is especially heavy on Winsor, the new carnation originated here. One of his most profitable sorts, he says, is the good old Joost. Queen Louise does well with him, as also the Queen, a good white. One of the features of the Peckham place is the large water tank, which holds some 10,000 gallons of water. This is gotten from a spring fifteen feet deep on the place.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held November 11. Ladies invited. The topic for discussion was "Mums Indoors and Outdoors." W. L.

Current Comment.

All the plants contained in the greenhouses of the J. N. Hodgson Co., bankrupt, were disposed of at auction November 4. There were present at the sale a number of buyers, but their number did not in the least interfere with the securing of unheard-of bargains in plants. An idea of the ridiculously low prices ruling at the sale may be had from the fact that kentias in large and small lots in 3½-inch and 4-inch pots sold for less than 1 cent each, while large plants sold at equally low figures. Joseph Leikens, Oscar Schultz, V. A. Vanicek, Carl Jurgens, Gibson Bros., Samuel Smith and D. McIntosh were the heaviest buyers. While the sale of plants was in progress and conducted by G. C. O'Neill, the real estate on which the greenhouses and other property stand was also put up for sale by another auctioneer and knocked down to Mr. Spaulding for a trifle over $11,000.

About a month ago the gardening fraternity was surprised by the announcement that Alex Adam was vacating his position as superintendent for Alfred Vanderbilt at Oakland Farm. This week we were again taken unawares by the announcement that W. Butter, who officiates in a like capacity for Reginald Vanderbilt, will after December 1 no longer hold that position.

THE HINCKLEY PLACE.

The accompanying illustrations of C. B. Hinckley's place give an idea of what is being done by the truck gardeners in the Cleveland district. These three new connected houses, each 30x140, were erected under the supervision of Mr. Hinckley. The heating is done by hot water, using a Kroeschell boiler, and the watering scheme is a direct pressure sys-within two feet of the engine on either side.

When asked as to the cost of gasoline for operating this pump, Mr. Hinckley said that it was such a small amount that he really never took notice of it, and if gasoline got too high he would simply run his natural gas pipe over and connect it to the engine, as it is made to use both kinds of fuel at once if necessary.

This small farm of ten acres, practically all of which is under cultivation, is sending into the Cleveland market some of the finest of vegetables, and it is a good example of what modern appliances, coupled with intelligent effort, can accomplish toward the success of life. Owing to the difficulty in obtaining materials, Mr. Hinckley was somewhat delayed in getting started this spring, and up till April 1 had kept little track of what had been delivered from these houses. Since April 1, however, a reasonably accurate record shows that these houses shipped out 731 18-pound boxes of lettuce to May 30, 330 peck baskets of tomatoes from June 28 to August 24, 6,336 cucumbers from June 26 to August 26, and over 3,000 tomato plants. Owing to the fact that the season about Cleveland was very backward, these greenhouse tomatoes brought good prices until the houses were entirely cleaned out for the beginning of the fall lettuce growing, which is now well under way. The first crop is already being marketed.

Those of the trade who are interested in this line of work will receive a cordial welcome from Mr. Hinckley if they should call to see his establishment, as he is much pleased with his equipment.

NITRATE OF SODA ON LETTUCE.

Will you kindly state what quantity of subnitrate of soda should be put into a 40-gallon barrel of water to water lettuce with?
J. M. T.

For a barrel about the size mentioned above, I would advise using only a 3-inch potful of nitrate of soda. You might use more without injury, but if sprinkled on the foliage it might seriously injure the crop if much stronger. It is better to use it in weak solution and oftener, but it is a strong fertilizer and should not be used very often. Much depends upon what plant food is already in the soil. If rotted manure is liberally used in making up the beds before planting, other fertilizers are not so necessary.

Standard Pumping Engine and Watering System at C. B. Hinckley's.

tem, using Skinner nozzles and having a two horse-power Standard pumping engine, taking the water from the cistern reservoir and pumping it directly into the pipe lines, fitted with spray nozzles. There are two of these water lines in each house, having valves in the mains so that any part of the system can be operated independently. As the pumping engine has an automatic safety valve, there is no danger of breaking the machine or pipes, even if it should happen that all the valves should be closed at one time. This is a very desirable feature in greenhouse work where there are no storage tanks, for the small plants which follow up the crop just pulled sometimes require water before all of them are set out and this is done with a hose so that only certain sections are wet down at one time, leaving the other ground dry for continuing the setting. For work of this kind the faucets may be opened or closed as required, and the safety valve in the pump will allow the engine to run without wasting any water or spilling it over the floor, but the water will be at the faucet at any time it is opened. One of the illustrations shows how little space his pumping plant requires, as the lettuce is grown Lettuce House of C. B. Hinckley, Cleveland, O.

LETTUCE UNDER CLOTH.

Please tell me how to grow lettuce under cloth, in this Georgia climate. I am shading through the brightest days and fastening the cloth down during the coldest nights. Is that right? My frames are 11x62, out in the open ground. What temperature will it stand and what temperature does it require for growing? The plants are starting to head. Is there any danger of running up to seed and how shall I prevent it?

A. F. C.

In regard to growing lettuce in your latitude, I do not feel that I could safely give much advice, but would not think it necessary to cover it at all at night, as lettuce will do well if held little above freezing, 40 to 45 degrees being the best night temperature and about 15 or 20 degrees higher in the daytime. Perhaps it would be best to place thermometers in the beds to get some idea of how the temperature runs. If the sun is very warm it is well to shade a little through the hottest part of the day, but whatever is used for shade should be removed early in the afternoon.

There is little danger of the heads bursting if they are cut and sold when ready, without leaving too long. Well rotted manure should be spaded into the beds before planting each crop.

The Market.

There has been a great improvement in the movement of all kinds of stock since last week. Mums of course hold the lead, with carnations a close second. Roses have also sold better than heretofore. Some fine longiflorum lilies have been coming in, as well as some extra good valley, and these have sold at sight.

Club Meeting.

The flower show at the club November 11 was well attended and some fine stock was exhibited. Those showing stock were as follows: J. Merkle & Son, Mentor, O., a table of fine mums. President Roosevelt and Golden Dome were fine specimens. L. L. Lamborn Co., Alliance, O., staged Brides, Maids, Chatenay, Richmond and Beauty that were fine, showing the best of culture. White Perfection, Lawson and Enchantress carnations were also of the best. Some fine vases of mums also were shown by the same firm. Chas. Schmidt staged a vase of mixed mums that showed the finest culture, and

Various Notes.

Smith & Fetters had two large wedding decorations last week. The Haas-Adler wedding at the Excelsior Club was a beautiful affair and consumed quantities of fine mums, lilies, etc. The McIntosh-Brown wedding was one of the largest functions of the season. The church was a bower of fine mums and lilies, as well as the house and a large tent which

The Market.

The condition of the market remains about the same as when last reported. The first part of the week beginning November 4 was rather a dull one with the retail trade in this city, but toward the end of the week it livened up considerably. The stringency of the money market is probably to blame for this. There are many debutantes for this coming season and also several large balls that should create some business.

The first snow of this season covered the ground and trees with a beautiful coat of white last Sunday night.

Considerable stock piled up last week, but mostly the poorer grade of stuff and yellow mums. There are none too many good mums on the market at present; most of the stock is small. In roses we have good Kaiserin, La Detroit, Killarney, Richmond, Meteor, Bride and Maid. Carnations move fairly well; much medium grade white is piled up, owing to the little funeral work. Green is plentiful and in good demand.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held November 6. The attendance was comparatively small. The clubroom has been nicely redecorated in pale blue and gold, making a pleasant meeting place. Owing to the absence of the secretary the minutes of the last meeting were not read. The election of new members was also postponed.

There was no regular subject assigned for the evening. The recent trip to Mount Clemens was thoroughly discussed. The general opinion was that the chrysanthemums seen this year do not compare with those of former years; the flowers are small and the stems are short and in some cases weak. The violet crop this year looks better than for some time.

The discussion then went over into soils and fertilizers, in which President Scribner is much interested. The president had Hugo Schroeter take the chair while he talked of his experiences. Messrs. Dilger, Carey, Unger, Knope, etc., also told considerable about soil in a long talk that followed.

Various Notes.

The assistant park commissioner, Wm. Dilger, spent several days in Painesville, O., last week, in quest of some fancy evergreens for the park system.

B. Schroeter, who now has the largest single show window among the retail stores in this city, had a beautiful orchid display in the window last week. The background was made up of purple beech branches and hanging from the ceiling were many plants of fine cattleyas and oncidiums. On either side was a group of ferns and palms, with orchids between the whole, making a fine effect.

Messrs. Breitmeyer, Carey and Stock attended the show at Chicago. H. S.

I LIKE the REVIEW best of all; it is very interesting and instructive.—LUD-WIG ZIMMER, St. Louis, Mo.

We are comparatively new in the business and some of our best work has been done by following the advice given in the REVIEW.—F. D. HARTSHORN, Augusta, Me.

You can turn surpluses into cash by offering them in the Classified Department of the REVIEW. When reasonable stock is offered, the returns usually are out of all proportion to the cost of the advertisement.

GENERAL FLORISTS' BUSINESS SOLICITED

Mention The Review when you write.

PACIFIC COAST.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.—A flower store was opened November 9 by Fred M. Young, at 7 East Main street. Mr. Young has been an employee of Martin & Forbes, at Portland, Ore., and has been in the trade for the last fifteen years.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The last week was a strenuous one with the florists, both retailers and wholesalers. The entire town thought of but little else than the municipal election. The excitement had a depressing effect on all kinds of business and the flower sellers had to suffer with the rest. But, from general opinions, the best man won and by a handsome majority, so that portion of the trouble has been lived through and from appearances we will have better business to chronicle next week.

The attitude of the banks in their disinclination to allow customers to draw more than a nominal amount from their accounts, also has had the effect of keeping things down to a cash basis, and although this may be a good idea from a financial standpoint, it makes the poor retailer wish that such things could be regulated without the necessity of his having to take the short end.

However, such things cannot last for an indefinite time. Already the horizon is clearing and, with the municipal elections out of the way, there is no reason why San Francisco should not soon experience a partial return of the good times that characterized the city before the fire changed the general plans of everybody and everything.

Various Notes.

J. J. O'Connor has given up his store on Devisadero street and Golden Gate avenue.

E. Lacazette, of Elmhurst, is cutting heavily from his new range of rose houses. His stock of Kaiserin is in splendid shape at this time.

P. J. Thorsted & Co., of Fruitvale, are cutting largely of Enchantress and other high-class stock.

D. Raymond, of San Jose, is in town. Mr. Raymond reports the demand for flower pots exceptionally heavy.

Chas. Butler is on a three weeks' visit to Los Angeles and San Diego.

F. Morris, formerly a well-known landscape gardener of San Jose, has removed to Oakland, where he will follow the same lines of work.

MARIN COUNTY FLOWER SHOW.

The Marin County Horticultural Society gave a large exhibition at San Rafael October 26 in Armory hall. The weather was not the most pleasant, but that did not prevent the exhibition from being crowded with flower lovers. Much credit is due to John Martin, J. F. Boyd, A. W. Foster and others for generous assistance. The entire front of the hall was occupied by the display of H. Schlueter, of the Laurel Grove Nursery. It represented a semicircular pyramid of ferns, chrysanthemums, gladioli and cannas. The display attracted much attention, but was not entered in the competition.

FOUR GOOD CANNAS.

The Royal Horticultural Society, of England, has been conducting a trial of cannas at its Wisley garden. At a meeting of the floral committee September 6 awards of merit were recommended to four varieties not previously recognized, as follows:

Venus.—A fine flower of a soft shade of rose, with mottling of white around the margin of the segments. Height of plant, two feet six inches.

Hesperide.—The flowers of this variety are orange or orange-red and are equal to the best of this type. Height of plant, two feet six inches.

Duke of York.—This variety is one that failed to get an award at a previous inspection. The flowers are of a dull shade of magenta, but have bright yellow margins. The foliage is green and the plants have a sturdy growth, scarcely two feet in height.

Burbank.—This variety is in general cultivation, but has not previously been given an award. The flowers are of large size, but somewhat lacking in substance. The color is canary yellow, with sparse red spotting.

Remarks were again made upon the good cultivation seen in the cannas generally, and on a question being addressed to Mr. Wright as to the kind of manure that had been applied to the plants, it was elicited that exclusive use had been made of Peruvian guano.

NEW ROSE—MRS. JARDINE

Every florist who plants a rose for winter forcing wants at least six qualities.

A free strong growth, with good foliage

A variety that can be easily grown

Large flowers on long stems

Delicious fragrance

Distinct, pleasing color that will sell at sight

A Rose that will hold its color in the dull days of January

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and in addition is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. (See illustration, page 9, Florists' Review, Oct. 31.) The color is bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and even in January when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

Mrs. Jardine is not a chance seedling, but was raised by Messrs. Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland. This firm has not only given us Liberty and Killarney, but has sent out more new Roses of merit than any other Rosarians in the world. Over two years ago we spent three weeks in their trial grounds, and from three thousand seedlings we selected thirty-five varieties that we thought would be successful in this country for winter forcing. After testing these for two years we have selected one—MRS. JARDINE—which has with us, and which we think will with all good rose growers, fulfil all the qualities as stated above.

We extend a cordial invitation to every one interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing. We have it both own roots and grafted plants, and in all stages of growth. As the demand for this superb novelty will be very large, kindly place your orders early, as we fill in rotation in March, 1908.

Strong plants on own roots from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per dozen;

FOUR GOOD CANNAS.

The Royal Horticultural Society, of England, has been conducting a trial of cannas at its Wisley garden. At a meeting of the floral committee September 6 awards of merit were recommended to four varieties not previously recognized, as follows:

Venus.—A fine flower of a soft shade of rose, with mottling of white around the margin of the segments. Height of plant, two feet six inches.

Hesperide.—The flowers of this variety are orange or orange-red and are equal to the best of this type. Height of plant, two feet six inches.

Duke of York.—This variety is one that failed to get an award at a previous inspection. The flowers are of a dull shade of magenta, but have bright yellow margins. The foliage is green and the plants have a sturdy growth, scarcely two feet in height.

Burbank.—This variety is in general cultivation, but has not previously been given an award. The flowers are of large size, but somewhat lacking in substance. The color is canary yellow, with sparse red spotting.

Remarks were again made upon the good cultivation seen in the cannas generally, and on a question being addressed to Mr. Wright as to the kind of manure that had been applied to the plants, it was elicited that exclusive use had been made of Peruvian guano.

NEW ROSE—MRS. JARDINE

Every florist who plants a rose for winter forcing wants at least six qualities.

A free strong growth, with good foliage

A variety that can be easily grown

Large flowers on long stems

Delicious fragrance

Distinct, pleasing color that will sell at sight

A Rose that will hold its color in the dull days of January

MRS. JARDINE has all these characteristics, and in addition is of so perfect a form that it can be used either in the bud or half expanded flower. (See illustration, page 9, Florists' Review, Oct. 31.) The color is bright rosy pink, shading in the outer petals to salmon pink, and even in January when Bridesmaids and Killarney lose their color, Mrs. Jardine is as bright as in October or March.

Mrs. Jardine is not a chance seedling, but was raised by Messrs. Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland. This firm has not only given us Liberty and Killarney, but has sent out more new Roses of merit than any other Rosarians in the world. Over two years ago we spent three weeks in their trial grounds, and from three thousand seedlings we selected thirty-five varieties that we thought would be successful in this country for winter forcing. After testing these for two years we have selected one—MRS. JARDINE—which has with us, and which we think will with all good rose growers, fulfil all the qualities as stated above.

We extend a cordial invitation to every one interested in this New Rose to visit our Nurseries and see it growing. We have it both own roots and grafted plants, and in all stages of growth. As the demand for this superb novelty will be very large, kindly place your orders early, as we fill in rotation in March, 1908.

Strong plants on own roots from 2½-inch pots, $6.00 per dozen;
$30 per 100; $250 per 1000

Grafted plants on Dicksons' Manetti Stocks, $5.00 per 100 additional

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester. The 84th annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE Indian summer has been exceptionally favorable for autumn planting operations.

W. H. VON BAYER, of the United States Forestry Department, is making preparations to establish an extensive nursery for forest trees just outside of Chatham, Mich. Several species of pine and spruce will be propagated, and the first lot of 2,000,000 seedling trees will be used for reforesting some of the sandy soils near Coalwood, in that county.

R. A. JONES, proprietor of the Riverside nursery in Spokane, spent a portion of last week looking over the prospects for a nursery in the vicinity of Brewster, Wash. He was well pleased with the outlook and selected 100 acres of land on the Riverview acreage, below town, for the site of his new enterprise. It is estimated that 1,000 acres of fruit-trees will be set out in the vicinity of Brewster next spring.

HALE'S INTERESTS.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Chattooga County Fruit Tree Co., at Summerville, Ga., was held in Chattanooga, Tenn., November 7. Postmaster J. C. Hale, of Winchester, was re-elected president; F. S. Carter, of Sweetwater, vice-president; Ed W. Sturdivant, of Summerville, general manager, and J. E. Ramsey, of Chattanooga, secretary and treasurer.

There are about twenty stockholders in the company, but only ten were present. The company has at Summerville, Ga., an orchard of 3,000 acres and between 200,000 and 300,000 Alberta peach trees bearing peaches. J. C. Hale is proprietor of the Tennessee Wholesale Nurseries, one of the largest peach tree nurseries in the world. Besides, he owns individually a 200-acre peach orchard out seven miles from Winchester, near Tullahoma. Mr. Hale is a wealthy man and is one of the most influential citizens of Franklin county. He is a man who has worked himself up step by step until today he is one of the best business men in this section of the state.

SAN JOSE SCALE.

There are now a number of remedies on the market for San Jose scale. One I have tried with good results is Scalecide, manufactured by the B. G. Pratt Mfg. Co. This is a soluble petroleum-like oil which, when added to twenty times its bulk of water and sprayed thoroughly through a Vermorel or other nozzle, kills the scale without injuring the tree. There are several other similar insecticides now on the market.

The sovereign remedy for San Jose scale until recently has been the lime, sulphur and salt wash. The proportions of the various ingredients are: Stone lime, fifteen to thirty pounds; flowers of sulphur, fifteen pounds; salt, fifteen pounds; water, fifty gallons. Slake the lime in a small quantity of hot water, gradually adding the sulphur and thoroughly mixing it. Dilute this mixture with twelve gallons of water and boil in an iron kettle or cook by steam in a covered tank for one and a half hours. Then add the salt, boiling half an hour longer. Fill up the vessel to the required fifty gallons. If cooked by steam the wash is more easily prepared and better made. The liquid requires straining through a fine mesh before being applied and must always be sprayed on the trees while hot. The best time to spray is in spring, just as the buds begin to swell. Every branch and twig must be well coated.

The lime, sulphur and salt wash is troublesome to make and disagreeable to apply. If one of the petroleum remedies can not be procured readily I would recommend washing the trees with strong kerosene emulsion. Rub it well into all the main stems and spray thoroughly over the smaller branches. The petroleum remedies are preferable to the lime and sulphur wash if properly applied. If you have one tree badly affected and others clean, better burn the one with the scale and spray the others as suggested.

The San Jose scale is the most serious pest attacking trees and shrubs in America today. It has a special fondness for all the members of the rosaceae family, but does not confine its attacks to that natural order. Hydrocyanic acid gas is the only remedy which clears out this pest in short order. It can, of course, only be applied when the trees are in sheds or greenhouses. In California covers are placed over the orange trees

FORCING RAMBLERS & HYBRID ROSES

FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well ripened. Roses potted up in the fall or winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard and force at your leisure. We recommend American-grown Ramblers. Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are a failure.

We offer exceptionally strong two-year-old dormant, low-budded stock (on Manetti), in the following varieties, true to name:

Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson, shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh-color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.

John Hopper. Beautiful rose pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

Prices on Hardy Hybrid Perpetual Roses, 75c for bundle 5, $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. 25 at 100 rate, 250 at 1000 rate.

THE BABY RAMBLER

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur. Strong field-grown plants, $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

THE NEW BABY RAMBLER ROSE

Catherine Zeimet. A very important novelty. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. An important fact is that it has the true rose perfume in a high degree. One of the best polyantha types to date. Fine forcer. 50c each; $5 per dozen; $40.00 per 100. Extra heavy, 75c each; $7.50 per dozen; $60.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grows as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free blooming qualities, etc. 35c each; $3.50 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 125 pages. 85 cents

Handy Manual.

By J. W. JOHNSON. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 125 pages. $1.00

The American Carnation.

By C. W. WARD. Invaluable to the carnation grower. All departments of the business are treated in a thoroughly practical manner. This book is the work of a careful, studious grower of ripe experience. Fully illustrated. $3.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authoritative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 650 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

The Market.

It is rather difficult to give the reader the exact condition of the market. Some are satisfied and some are almost disgusted. Our store windows are well decorated and the market stalls are filled with blooms and have the appearance of doing a rushing business. However, it is true they could take care of a great deal more and handle it with ease. Election day was dull. The stir in the money market has had little effect here.

Chrysanthemums are overabundant and prices low. Roses are plentiful and selling extremely cheap for this time of the year. Carnations are beginning to be plentiful. Violets are coming in fair quantities. Callas are coming in slowly. Greens of all kinds are enough to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

George Fox, Jones Station, Md., is erecting a new house, 22x100 feet.

James Smith, who was established at Lansdowne, Md., has given up the florists' business and bought an 80-acre farm in Anne Arundel county. Mr. Smith occupied a stall in Lexington market many years.

W. Terry, Owings Mills, Md., has a sport from Col. Appleton, yellow, incurved petals, with pale red streak on the inside.

G. A. Lotze, Glenburnie, Md., reports that his new mum, Mrs. G. A. Lotze, is making quite a hit in the west and he has received orders for 20,000 plants.

L. Struntz, Westport, Md., is having troubles. Some time ago contractors at-

THE NEW CARNATION AFTERGLOW

WE beg to announce that we will offer to the trade, the coming season of 1907 and 1908, the new carnation AFTERGLOW, a variety of sterling merit, which is destined to be grown as universally as the Lawson in its time, as it has done exceedingly well wherever it has been tried—in six different sections of the country—the Far East, West and Middle States—and all report it as an "Ideal" commercial variety, grand in every way. It won the S. A. F. Silver Medal, for the best flower or plant, at the Monthly Exhibition of the Cincinnati Floral Exhibition in 1906, and scored 91 points at quite a number of exhibitions held in different cities in the United States. It has never failed to score wherever shown. It scored the highest of any seedlings at the exhibition of the American Carnation Society, held at Toronto in 1907, after reaching there twenty-four hours late from Framingham, Mass. In color it is everything that the name implies—a bright rosy cerise. In stem it excels any commercial variety now extant, not excepting Enchantress, being somewhat longer and always rigid. Never weak, in habit it is very vigorous, "a Grower's Delight," as it recuperates very readily after planting from the field; also from the sand. It loses no time in getting to work. AFTERGLOW has been grown for the past season by the undersigned and offered by them.

Orders now booked, to be filled in rotation for well grown, well rooted cuttings, at $2.00 per dozen; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

New Carnation

Brilliant Scarlet

DEFIANCE

THIS sterling novelty is the result of a cross between Estelle and a seedling with Maceo and Daybreak blood in it, and was originated by W. N. Rudd, Mount Greenwood, Ill. The color is a most brilliant scarlet, brighter than anything seen in Carnations heretofore; size, 3 inches and over; habit and form ideal. It is a very rapid grower and has no tendency to produce surplus grass, every shoot advancing rapidly and producing a perfect flower. If you did not already place your order for some, we would advise you to do so without delay, so as to get early delivery.

$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Usual discount on larger orders.

There may be other reds, but there is only one scarlet carnation, and that is DEFIANCE. Come and see it growing, and be convinced.

BUFFALO.The Market.

Quietness still reigns in the Buffalo market, due probably to the fact of election, but this event does not stop funeral trade and even this trade has been quiet. Parties, however, are very numerous and this branch helps out considerably. Mums are still the leading factor and will continue to be for some time.

Various Notes.

S. A. Anderson has taken advantage of the mum for a show flower and held his annual show November 7 to 9. His store is spacious and he filled every available part and had good success. He advertised the affair extensively and kept a very attractive window of orchids, etc., during the time.

Each year the call for donations increases for the different bazaars and fairs, until now someone is asking the whole time. Each event has a flower booth and, if possible, the booth is run with stock procured gratis. They inform you that so and so of the other store has agreed to send a handsome lot and at the same time point out why it is up to you to do the same. No doubt it is the same in every city, and something will have to be done to eliminate it.

W. A. Adams was elected with little trouble, but we are sorry to state that W. F. Kasting was defeated for city treasurer.

BELVIDERE, ILL.—The officers of the Belvidere Plant and Floral Co., which until recently was known as the J. W. Lyon Co., are as follows: President, B. Eldredge; secretary and treasurer, W. H. Moore. The superintendent of the plant is Wm. P. Williams. The company has a range of greenhouses at Fairview.

IMPERIAL and PINK IMPERIAL

THE WONDERS OF 1907

Have proven to be all that was claimed for them. They took prizes at the Great Show at Toronto, Canada, last year, besides Prizes, Certificates of Merit and Diplomas at various other places.

The Imperial is a variegation of a delicate pink, similar to the shade in Enchantress, a splendid keeper and fine shipper.

The Pink Imperial is a most pleasing shade of pink; one that has long been wanted in the market.

The Stems of both these varieties run from three to four feet in length, are extra strong and have no equal in the Carnations of to-day. The calyxes are good and strong and are practically non-bursters. The flowers are well-formed, from 3 to 4 inches in diameter and are very fragrant. They are early free and continuous bloomers from October until late in July. Strong stems. Every shoot making a flower. No extra grass. Have shown both at November shows with 30-inch stems.

John E. Haines A leading scarlet, has also proved to be satisfactory. It is noted for its splendid color, good stems and productiveness. My own origination.

PRICES—For selected cuttings, delivery commencing in December, 1907, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. Place your order early. Come and see them growing.

The Carnation Mender is all right. Any grower who does not buy one and work until he knows how to use it properly is not up to his business for if he cannot save the price of the apparatus in one of the dark winter months and have the satisfaction of sending out good stock instead of seconds, my name is not ALBERT M. HERR.

I have duly received the Plyer and Clips. They work very well and I enclose check for same. Please send me 2000 more Clips by return mail. JOHN F. CHASE.

In reply to your favor of the 2d inst. regarding the Carnation Clip, would say they work very satisfactorily and do away with the split Carnations. We congratulate you on your success in getting out such a handy device. BASSETT & WASHBURN.

In answer to your favor of the 2d inst., would say we are much pleased with the device. Enclosed find check for same. Thank you for your kindness in sending it so soon. AMOS N. ROHRER.

Do your Carnations pay as well as they should? You can turn that 25 per cent loss which you have suffered in the past into additional profit. It will make your coal bill look a good deal smaller. Send for descriptive circular, or better still, send for the thing itself and save time.

PLYER, for putting on the clips, $3.00. CLIPS, $1.00 per 1000.
Postage prepaid to any address.

The Market.

October trade was the heaviest on record. Early frosts cut down all outside stock. The crop of debutantes was larger than ever, while weddings and funerals helped to swell the totals in sales.

There is an ample supply of good stock coming in and the demand keeps pace with it. Mums are the leaders, but the larger portion are now gone and by the end of the month there will be none left. Carnations are of fair quality, though rather short-stemmed and a little soft for shipping. Violets and valley have been in fair supply. Orchids have sold well and the leading stores have to keep a supply daily to meet the growing demand.

Paper Whites are now on the market and remind one of the winter months so near at hand.

Various Notes.

At the Art Loan exhibition, held in the Auditorium by the Ladies' Art Guild, Holm & Olson won first prize for table decorations with a centerpiece of cattleyas and Farleyense ferns. Mrs. A. S. Swanson won the second prize with a centerpiece of eucharis, cattleyas and ferns. There were only two competitors. The leading florists decorated the hall free with wild smilax, palms and bay trees. The festivities incident to the exhibition closed with a Cinderella ball last Tuesday evening. This event should create a good demand for flowers.

May & Co. are now occupying their concrete warehouse on Como avenue. Next spring they contemplate building a range of greenhouses on the roof of the warehouse.

James Souden, who recently opened a flower store on Sixth street, Minneapolis, reports a very gratifying trade.

Theo. Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, has issued an invitation to the local trade to inspect the park board's new greenhouses, at Thirty-eighth street and Bryant avenue, on Thursday next.

O. J. Olson and J. Clausen, of Albert Lea, are hunting moose in northern Minnesota.

Recent callers: Arnold Ringier and C. W. Scott, of Chicago, both from the woods and both talking greens.

INTERIOR VIEW OF ONE HOUSE OF ARAUCARIA EXCELSA GLAUCA AND ROBUSTA

Grown by GODFREY ASCHMANN,
ARAUCARIA SPECIALIST
1012 Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PREPARE FOR

Thanksgiving AND THE Holidays

Watch! Prosperity! Look!

Election is now over, money matter settled, market revised and the country is now again in normal condition. Great prosperity is now in sight for us all. Why not for you? A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band

and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), in their original packing before we plant them in pots, at only 40c, 3 tiers, beautiful stock. You can sell them at once.

Last Spring's Importation

Araucaria Excelsa—8-year-old, 5½ to 5¾-in. pots, 10, 12, 14 inches, 3 tiers, 50c.

Araucaria Excelsa—8-year old, 5¾-in. pots, 15, 16, 17 inches high, 3 to 4 tiers, 60c.

Araucaria Excelsa—4-year old, 6-in. pots, 20 to 22 inches high 4 to 5 tiers, 75c.

Araucaria Excelsa—5-year-old, 6-in. pots, 22 to 25 inches high, 5 tiers, $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa—Specimen plants, 6 to 7-inch pots, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca—This variety, on account of its beautiful bluish-green tiers, dwarf habit, fine compact shape, gives them a striking appearance and anybody seeing them will undoubtedly fall in love with them at sight. All are of the finest shape you ever saw. 4 year-old, 6-in. pots, 16 inches high, same in width, 3 to 4 tiers, $1.25; 4-year-old, 6 in. pots, 17 to 23 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $1.50 to $1.75; 5-year-old, 7-inch pots, 25 to 30 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $2.00; 5-year-old, 7-inch pots, 30 to 36 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $2.50; 5-year-old, 8-inch pots, specimens, $3.00 to $4.00.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta—This variety is, as the lion is king of the beasts, king of the Araucaria family. Is of a beautiful green, fine shape and compact habit; everybody is stuck on them. Have a house full; can meet all demands. 4-year-old, 6-in. pots 4 tiers, 22 to 25 inches high, same in width, $1.50 to $1.75 each; 5 year-old, 6 to 7-in pots, 4 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, same in width, $2.00 to $2.50; 5-year-old, 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 30 inches and more in height, same in width, $3.00 to $3.50.

Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana—European stock. 6-in. pots, 5 leaves, 25 to 30 in. gh, $1.00 each; 4-in. pots, home-grown, 18 to 20 in. high, 35c each. Belmoreana and Forsteriana, 5½ to 5¾ in., bushy, 50c to 60c; 5½ to 6-in., bushy plants, 75c each.

Please mention if in or out of pots. All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

INTERIOR VIEW OF ONE HOUSE OF ARAUCARIA EXCELSA GLAUCA AND ROBUSTA

Grown by GODFREY ASCHMANN,
ARAUCARIA SPECIALIST
1012 Ontario St., Philadelphia, Pa.

PREPARE FOR

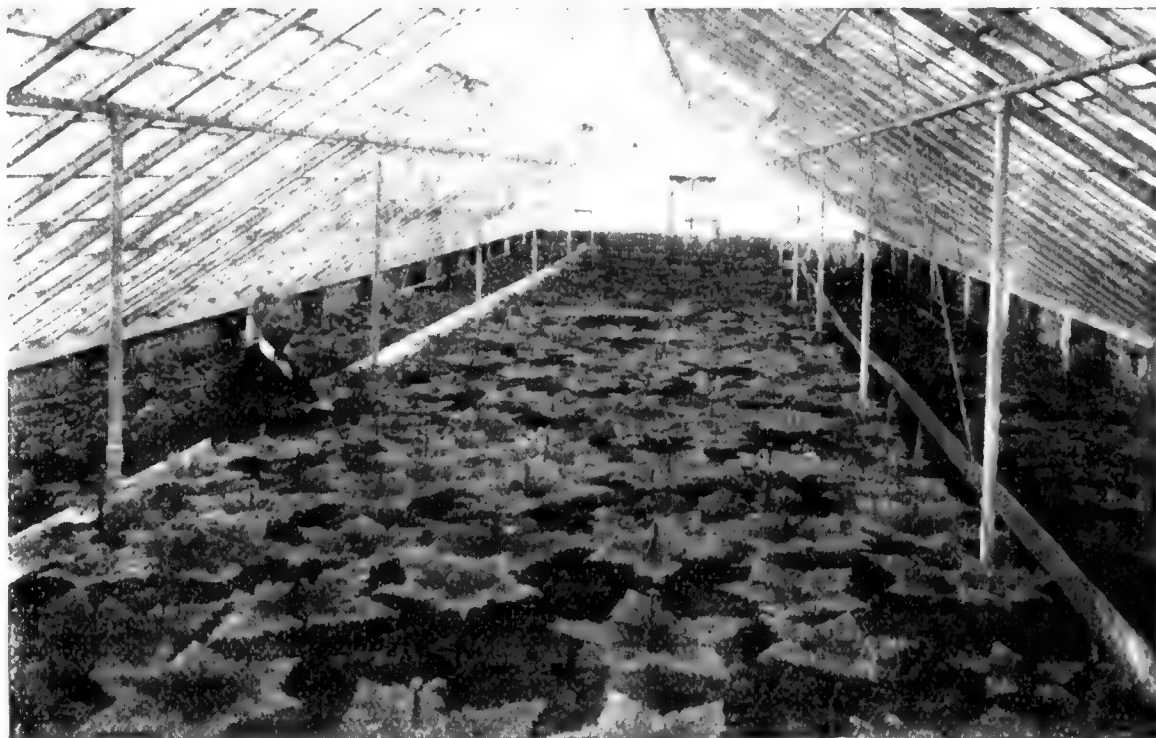

Thanksgiving AND THE Holidays

Watch! Prosperity! Look!

Election is now over, money matter settled, market revised and the country is now again in normal condition. Great prosperity is now in sight for us all. Why not for you? A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band

and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), in their original packing before we plant them in pots, at only 40c, 3 tiers, beautiful stock. You can sell them at once.

Last Spring's Importation

Araucaria Excelsa—3-year-old, 5½ to 5¾-in. pots, 10, 12, 14 inches, 3 tiers, 50c.

Araucaria Excelsa—3-year-old, 5½-in. pots, 15, 16, 17 inches high, 3 to 4 tiers, 60c.

Araucaria Excelsa—4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 20 to 22 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, 75c.

Araucaria Excelsa—5-year-old, 6-in. pots, 22 to 25 inches high, 5 tiers, $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa—Specimen plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca—This variety, on account of its beautiful bluish-green tiers, dwarf habit, fine compact shape, gives them a striking appearance and anybody seeing them will undoubtedly fall in love with them at sight. All are of the finest shape you ever saw. 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 16 inches high, same in width, 3 to 4 tiers, $1.25; 4-year-old, 6 in. pots, 17 to 23 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $1.50 to $1.75; 5-year-old, 7-inch pots, 25 to 30 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $2.00; 5-year-old, 7-inch pots, 30 to 36 inches high, same in width, 4 tiers, $2.50; 5-year-old, 8-inch pots, specimens, $3.00 to $4.00.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta—This variety is, as the lion is king of the beasts, king of the Araucaria family. Is of a beautiful green, fine shape and compact habit; everybody is stuck on them. Have a house full; can meet all demands. 4-year-old, 6-in. pots, 22 to 25 inches high, same in width, $1.50 to $1.75 each; 5-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, same in width, $2.00 to $2.50; 5-year-old, 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 30 inches and more in height, same in width, $3.00 to $3.50.

Kentia Forsteriana and Belmoreana—European stock. 6-in. pots, 5 leaves, 25 to 30 in. high, $1.00 each; 4 in. pots, home-grown, 18 to 20 in. high, 35c each. Belmoreana and Forsteriana, 5½ to 5¾ in., bushy, 50c to 60c; 5½ to 6-in., bushy plants, 75c each.

Please mention if in or out of pots. All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

The Market.

There can be no doubt that the present state of the financial world is making itself felt in the flower business, but on comparing with last year's business for the same period we find we are fully up to it. Almost every year there is a little depression in the flower business about this time. Usually there is some sort of election going on and it is sort of between seasons and the demand has not much backbone.

Mums are holding their own nicely. They are not averaging as high a price as last year, but no one is complaining. The market is well supplied with all grades and colors, and all orders, large or small, can be well taken care of. Roses are coming quite heavily and the quality is good, but the market for them is not of the best and the price is low. Still they are all being sold, even if at a low price. Carnations still continue to be scarce and that fact is their salvation. Were they plentiful their story would be the same as that of the rose. As it is, they sell out well and at good prices. Violets are beginning to be called for and they sell out at a fair price. The large single, as is usually the case in this market, has the best demand. Some extra fine lily of the valley is being handled, with fair demand. Good Easter lilies are coming in, with but little call. Ferns, smilax, Sprenger and like greens are in supply equal to the demand and selling well.

Small white mums in bunches, which always are good property in this market, are keeping up their reputation. Thomas Windram, of Fort Thomas, Ky., who grows large quantities to take care of this trade, reports business as very satisfactory.

Various Notes.

Miss Edith Kyrk is keeping a veritable mum show in her store in Avondale. She buys heavily every day, proving, as it is being proved every day, that it pays to have a large stock, so that customers are attracted by it.

L. F. Benson, of Newport, Ky., is also a large buyer, and he attributes his success to the fact that he always carries a large stock and makes an attractive display.

George Bayer, of Toledo, O., is sending daily shipments of mums to this market.

Julius Baer, P. J. Olinger and J. A. Peterson were in Chicago attending the flower show.

Geo. F. Moore and son, of Rushville, Ind., were callers. C. J. OHMER.

Current Comment.

There are plenty of mums and some fine ones, too. The stores all report business good. Some large weddings are booked for the near future. Gude Bros. Co. had the Carlisle-Allen wedding November 9, one of the most elaborate of the season.

At the club meeting November 5 final arrangements were made for the big flower show. The committee was instructed to invite three judges from out of town. Every store man promised to do his share in the way of an artistic exhibit. President Peter Bisset showed some fine seedling roses, one a cross between Queen Beatrice and Kaiserin, the other a cross between Gen. MacArthur and Queen Beatrice. He also showed a seedling of Killarney which was fine. There will be a special meeting of the club Saturday evening, November 16.

The chrysanthemum show at the Agricultural Department is in full blast and the finest held for years.

Fred Wolfe, of the Washington Florists' Co., is improving and hopes to be out soon.

PIPING IN WASHINGTON STATE.

How long a greenhouse twenty-seven feet wide, with concrete walls seven feet high, will a fifteen horse-power traction engine boiler heat? What size of connections, and how many, would you put on it for using hot water? E. G. S.

The boiler in question should be sufficient to heat a house of the cross-section mentioned, 150 feet in length, to 60 degrees by using sixteen lines of 2-inch pipe the length of the house. Three of the sixteen lines can be used as flow pipes, while thirteen are used as returns. L. C. C.

HOT WATER FOR FOUR HOUSES.

I have three connected greenhouses, running north and south. Two of them are each 20x80 feet, with sides five feet two inches high, sashbars approximately twelve feet, and no glass in the sides. The other house, which is on the east side, is 15x75, with sides five feet two inches high, sashbars eight feet, about twenty-five feet of glass on the east side. Extending east and west, along the south end of the three houses, is a shed 7x55. At the south side of the shed, and running parallel with it, I propose to build another house, 28x70, with the sides five feet two inches high, and with the south sashbars eighteen feet long and the north sashbars fourteen feet and a half long. There will be glass on the south side two feet high the entire length of this house, and glass in both gables above the line of the gutters.

Please advise me as to the best way of heating the whole range. At present the boilers are located at the north end of the houses, but I wish to move them round to the east side, not far from the south end of the east house. I should prefer to use hot water, if it is not too far to carry it into the west house. The doors at the south end of the houses, opening into the shed, would interfere with the pipes unless they were carried under the floor. Please state the number and size of pipes that would be required to heat to 60 degrees in zero weather, in eastern New York.

house will make the piping of the plant rather awkward. If it were possible to widen the shed between the new and old houses and install the heating plant in the shed, it would simplify the heating considerably. However, if the main riser is carried through this shed, the two houses 20x80 and the house 15x75 can easily be provided for. An independent 3-inch flow can be carried from the boiler house to the east end of the new house, then through the house to the west end and return by eighteen 2-inch returns. DECEMBER 20 1906.

Greenhouse Heating.

A HEATING RECORD.

I have two houses, each 23x100, in which I grow lettuce and general stock. I keep a night temperature 50 to 52 degrees. They are heated with hot water. There are two flows in each house, along the purlins. One 3½-inch pipe supplies six 2-inch pipes under the outside benches and one 3-inch flow supplying four 2-inch pipes under the inside benches. The outlet from each house is separate into the boiler in 5-inch pipe. I had a special boiler made to order that has proved itself beyond my expectations. In the winter of 1905-6 I used thirty-one tons of coal at $1.90 and ten cords of 3-foot wood worth about $2.50 per cord. This I thought very reasonable. The circulation is perfect. Last winter in moderate weather, that is, not windy and outside temperature 20 degrees or so above zero, I would leave the boiler nine hours with a variation of but 3 degrees.

Ten days ago I was called to Cleveland overnight. The outside temperature was 46 degrees at 2:40 p. m., when I left the boiler, with a gradually sinking mercury. There being no men about, I left instructions that the boiler should not be touched until next morning. My wife, on my return next evening, reported that at 7 p. m. it became quite windy and by 9:30 was freezing, with stormy outlook. When she awoke at 6 a. m. the outside temperature was 26 degrees and the greenhouses were 47 degrees. I think this is a record for fifteen hours and twenty minutes without attention. I would like to hear from anyone who can beat it.

Mr. John G. Frisz, of Vincennes, Ind., writes as follows: "Your No. 13 boiler is carrying 25,000 sq. ft. of glass and I do not have any trouble to keep it at 60 degrees in the coldest weather. Your boiler has given entire satisfaction. I have THREE OTHER TYPES of boilers also heating 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, but YOUR BOILER ONLY TAKES HALF THE COAL AND HALF THE WORK TO GIVE THE SAME RESULTS." should be provided with a 3-inch flow and thirteen 2-inch returns, and the house 15x75 should have a 2½-inch flow and eleven 2-inch returns. A single 4-inch flow from the boiler through the shed should be large enough to serve these three houses. L. C. C.

PIPING IN OHIO.

I am building a greenhouse 32x60 feet, with walls five feet high and the ridge thirteen feet from the floor. How much radiation do I need for heating with steam? H. A. C.

To carry a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees with low pressure steam you will require twenty lines of 1½-inch pipe as returns, supplied by a 2½-inch riser under the ridge. L. C. C.

HEAT FOR A LETTUCE FRAME.

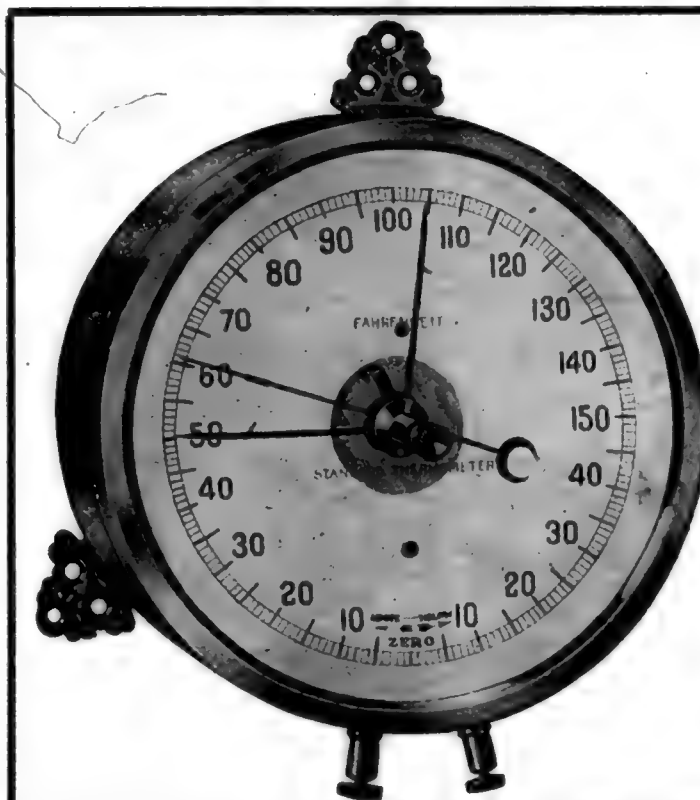

I wish to heat a lettuce frame 6x70 feet, on the south side of a house heated by a flue. Can this be done with a pipe coil in the furnace, made with 1½-inch pipe and return bends? How many returns would the frame require, with the flow in the house? W. S.

The lettuce frame 6x70 feet will require eighty feet of radiation, which can be supplied by three lines of 1½-inch pipe the length of the bed. If a 1½-inch flow is carried from a coil made up of twenty-five lineal feet of 1½-inch pipe in the furnace, to the far end of the greenhouse and there enters the frame, to return by three 1½-inch returns, you should be able to get a satisfactory temperature. L. C. C.

HEAT FOR CARNATION HOUSE.

I have a nineteen horse-power steam boiler, used four years. Can I have it tapped with 2½-inch holes and use it for hot water? It is an upright boiler, with a solid grate three feet across and a space of two feet between the grate and the tubes. Can I burn hard coal with good results?

With this boiler I wish to heat a carnation house 20x100 feet, and twelve feet to the ridge. The house runs east and west. The back wall is six feet high and the front wall five feet high, with three feet of glass in the front. In this Massachusetts climate, how much pipe would be required to heat with hot water? Or, could I use the boiler just as it is for steam, and could I burn hard coal as I would in hot water heating? I have 800 feet of 1-inch pipe. I should prefer to use hard coal. W. T. W.

You can use the boiler as it is with hard coal for low pressure steam, and by equipping it with an automatic diaphragm to open and close dampers, it should give satisfaction. If you wish to use it for hot water, I would advise having the shell reamed for a 2½-inch or 3-inch flange, to be bolted on.

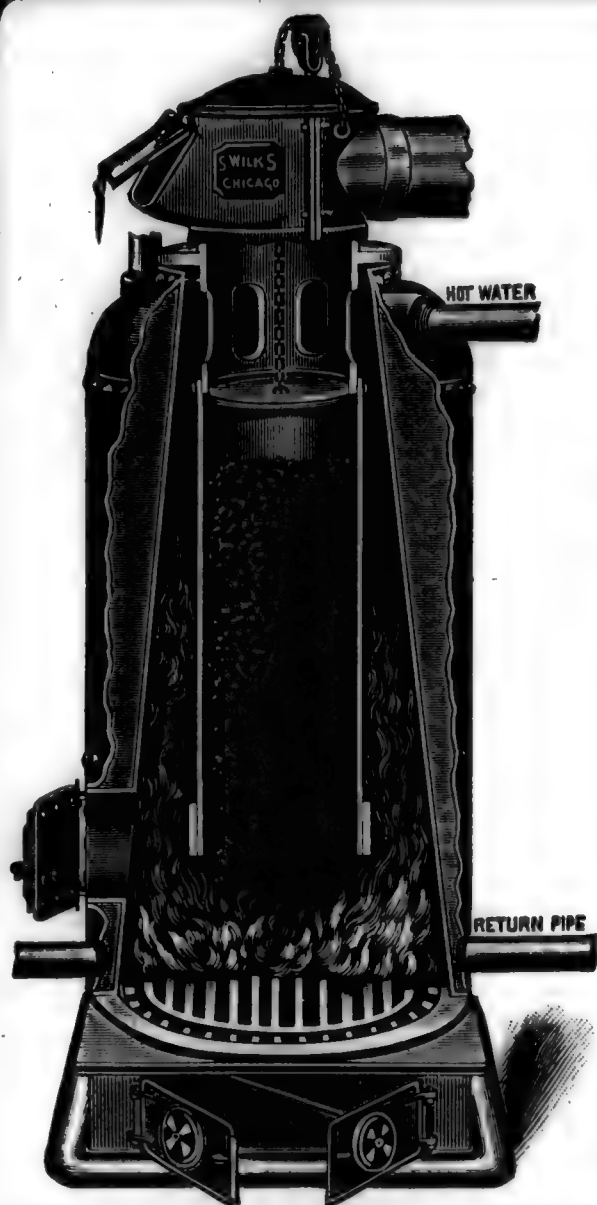

If you use steam, a 2-inch flow under the ridge, with twelve 1½-inch returns, should give good results. If you use hot water, use a 3-inch main flow under the ridge and twelve 2-inch returns. You might make a compromise by using the first described equipment during mild weather for hot water, and during severe weather as a steam plant. L. C. C.

HEATING FOR SALESROOM.

I am putting up a salesroom 23x23 feet. The side walls will be of wood and five feet high; the roof will be of glass; the ridge will be eleven feet from the floor. I have a No. 16 Hitchings hot water boiler, with outlets for 4-inch pipe. Could I use this boiler by making the fire box smaller with fire bricks, and could I pipe this house without digging a boiler pit? I wish to pipe against the walls. I want to use the building to grow a few of my bedding plants, as well as for a salesroom. Kindly give me suggestions on piping. S. S. S.

You can, of course, reduce the size of the fire box as you suggest, with fire brick, but by so doing you will lose considerably in the economy of fuel. If you can exchange the boiler in question for one rated at about 500 or 600 feet, it will, in my judgment, be more economical, as the room in question requires about 300 feet of radiation in your Pennsylvania climate. A No. 14 is more nearly the size you need. If you place radiating pipes on the side walls of the room you can arrange to heat with hot water without placing the boiler in a pit. The main flow should go well overhead, however.

L. C. C.

DOUBLE GLASS SASH.

There are two reasons why florists find coldframes or hotbeds troublesome. One is that they have to be covered and uncovered every day in cold weather, and the other is that when covered the plants are in the shade and suffer.

The Sunlight Sash Co., of Louisville, Ky., has patented a sash for hotbeds or coldframes that needs no covering, even Kill Your Scale

If you want to kill Scale on your plants absolutely, there is only one preparation

WILSON'S PLANT OIL

Take a can of this preparation, dilute to four times its bulk with water, and wash or spray your palms, ferns, aspidistras, smilax, or any plants subject to scale, bugs or vermin and your plants will be clean. No alkali. Nothing deleterious. Dries at once.

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY OF IT:

RUTHERFORD, N. J., June 28, 1906.
We have thoroughly tried your Plant Oil with very striking results. We may say this is the first insecticide we have tried on our palms that will remove the scale with the first application. We would like to say this is one of the few things that the florist cannot afford to be without, especially those who are growing palms and decorative plants. After one application of the oil the plants take on an entirely new appearance. We would be pleased to have prospective buyers visit our nurseries and inspect the palms on which we have used your oil. BOBBINK & ATKINS.

DEAR SIR—I have used your To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Powder in several carnation and rose houses, fumigating in the carnation houses once a week and in the rose houses twice a week. The quantity used each time was 4 half pounds of the dust in a house 125x20, burning it in pie dishes. It has entirely kept down all signs of Aphis. It leaves no odor on the flowers and has not in the slightest hurt either flower or foliage on the roses, as does burning tobacco stems.

WEST GROVE, PA.

The Flower Town.

West Grove, a town of 1,200 people, situated on the Baltimore Central railroad forty miles from Philadelphia, is, without doubt, the greatest flower town in the United States, if not in the world.

The establishment of Dingee & Conard Co., now in the fifty-seventh year of its commercial existence, is the parent plant. It is located a short distance from the town. It consists of seventy greenhouses, numerous root-cellars and packing sheds and a large and well equipped office building. It is a veritable sea of glass. During the last two years a number of houses of steel construction have been erected. The surrounding grounds, planted with every seasonable flower from the early spring tulip to the late dahlia and chrysanthemum, form a place of many attractions.

Roses constitute the chief specialty. For side lines cannas, dahlias and shrubs are grown. A large miscellaneous stock, consisting of ferns, palms, Rex begonias and novelties, is carried. Over 1,000 varieties of roses are grown, several famous sorts having originated here. They are propagated from the bench and are sold in great quantity in one and two year sizes.

The Conard & Jones Co., an offshoot of the former place, was established about twelve years ago. The business developed with such rapidity that twenty-two large greenhouses and several root-cellars are now required to house their enormous stock. Antoine Wintzer, probably the ablest propagator in the country, has charge of the place. Roses, cannas and hardy shrubs form their specialties. A visit to their trial grounds in August will give a never-to-be-forgotten pleasure. Acres of cannas, arranged systematically in rows and plots, their tall, graceful foliage surmounted by magnificent clusters of bloom, meet the eye. The landscape is relieved by long rows of hydrangeas, spiræas and ornamental grasses.

Of the minor floral concerns located here, several are rapidly springing into importance. Green & Baylis conduct a thriving business in cut flowers. They have a number of greenhouses, all devoted to the growing of carnations and chrysanthemums. The fine quality of their bloom has made them widely known among commission men. Last year their chrysanthemums graced several social functions at Washington.

"Sheep manure, when used as a top dressing for second crops in the houses, I have found to be very satisfactory. It should be used sparingly, however, and only in the pulverized form, which hastens its availability. Where it is impossible to obtain stable manure, sheep manure may serve as a substitute better than the commercial fertilizer, as it is a complete manure, possessing all the elements necessary for plant life."—W. CARE OF FICUS.

Please give me some information as to the care of small rubber plants. Some of mine are beginning to turn brown at the end of the leaves. C. F. N.

Not knowing what treatment your plants have had, it is difficult to advise as to the cause of your trouble. Possibly you have had your plants outdoors or in a frame and they were frozen before being housed, or perhaps you are growing them in a cold and damp house. Give them a bench in a light, sunny house, kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night. Do not allow them to become dry at the root. Spray overhead in bright weather and shift into larger pots before they become matted with roots. Be careful not to give the plants too large a shift. Drain the pots so that water will pass away freely. C. W.

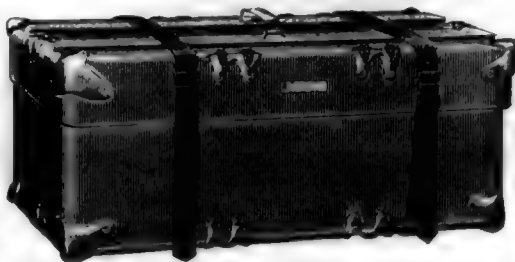

HARDINESS OF OTAKSA.

Is Hydrangea Otaksa a hardy outdoor plant in the state of Maine, or is it entirely for greenhouse culture? C. F. N.

Hydrangea Otaksa is not hardy in the state of Maine. The plants will stand quite a little frost when the wood is well ripened, but it would not be safe to expose them even then to a lower temperature than 20 degrees above zero. These hydrangeas winter well in a cellar or shed kept just above freezing. An occasional light freezing will not hurt them. In some parts of Rhode Island, especially at Newport, large specimens are boxed up outside. With shoots packed in earth and with straw protection, they can be brought through the winter safely. Other growers dig up the plants, lay on their sides and cover with earth. The more severe climate in Maine would hardly allow of these methods of wintering being tried. C. W.

POINSETTIAS.

Will you please state briefly through the REVIEW some of the main points in caring for poinsettias? L. N. B.

The flower bracts should now be showing on poinsettias. The plants require a temperature at this time not below 55 degrees at night, and 60 degrees will insure you finer flower-heads. Fall sunshine is required, and if the pots or pans are well filled with roots, afford some liquid manure once a week until the bracts are fully developed. The plants can be kept in a somewhat cooler house when in full flower, but the temperature should not fall below 50 degrees, or less foliage may result. Water must be given carefully; either too much or too little will cause yellowing of the leaves. If your plants are in benches, see that they are securely staked to keep the stems from becoming twisted.

After the flowering season, lay your stock plants on their sides under the bench in a moderately cool greenhouse and keep there until the end of May, when you can shake away the old soil, prune them back, pot into small pots and place on the bench in a warm house or frame. Do not water too heavily until the plants break freely. Rub off the cuttings with a heel when three or four inches long, and insert in clean, sharp sand. Bottom heat is not needed to root them. Shade and water carefully until rooted. Grow the plants in frames during the summer, where they will become more stocky than if kept in the greenhouses.

Cuttings may be rooted until the middle of August. Those put in during July and August are good for making up pans, but the earlier ones will give the finest bracts for cutting. C. W.
